Geraniums

A well known Geranium man said not long ago, that to think of Geranium is to think of Vincent, to think of Vincent was to think of Geranium; and if you don't do it, then we are going to keep at it until you do.

We are booking orders for next Spring delivery from those who are keeping their ears to the ground. On lots of 5000 and over, we are at present making the same price as last season, but do not know how long we will keep it up.

We have a fine stock, in a good assortment of varieties, including Ivy leaved, for immediate shipment.

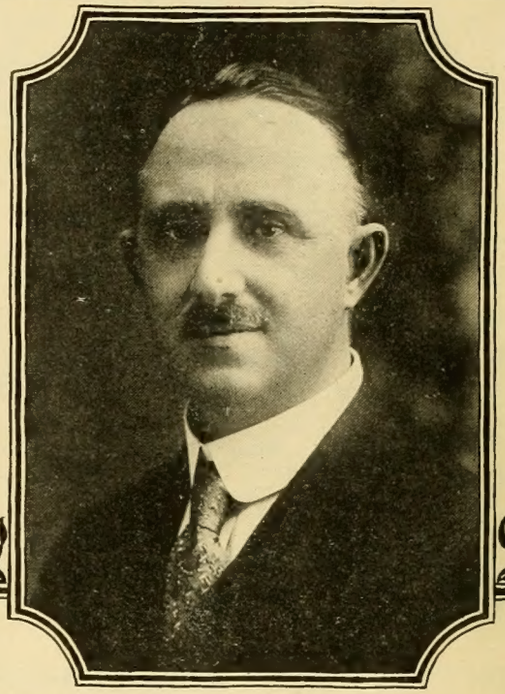
The tribute of P. W. Popp to Davey Tree Surgery



P. W. Popp, Superintendent for the Mrs. H. Darlington Estate, Orienta Point, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

"SEVEN OAKS"
Mamaroneck, New York

The Davey Tree Expert Co., Inc., Kent, Ohio.

Gentlemen: I am pleased to state that the Tree Surgery work done on the estate here in 1915 has stood the test of time, and that all the trees treated are without exception in the best of health and vigor. Many of the smaller cavities are entirely healed and the larger ones are rapidly healing. I heartily endorse your methods of Tree Surgery and can recommend the work to anyone interested in preserving fine trees.

Yours very truly,
P. W. POPP.

The saving of priceless trees is a matter of first importance on every estate.

Davey Tree Surgery is a fulfillment of the maximum expectations of those who love and value trees. A careful examination of your trees will be made by appointment.

THE DAVEY TREE EXPERT CO., Inc.

Every real Davey Tree Surgeon is in the employ of The Davey Tree Expert Company, Inc., and the public is cautioned against those falsely representing themselves.

Time has proved the efficacy of Davey Tree Surgery. In three years' time the cavities have healed to a noticeable extent. Many of the counter-sink holes have entirely healed over. The tree has since withstood many severe storms

The next severe windstorm might have added to its toll the famous Darlington linden shown here. The seam running down the trunk indicated to the trained eye of a Davey Tree Surgeon a serious condition of hidden decay

The extent of this decay was revealed by a little preliminary cutting along the seam. Much decayed matter is still to be removed

All the decayed matter has been removed and the whole interior carefully disinfected and waterproofed. Mechanical bracing has been employed to strengthen the weakened trunk

The cavity is now filled by the Davey sectional method, which allows for swaying and prevents cracking. The greatest mechanical skill is required in this operation

JOHN DAVEY — Father of Tree Surgery

The publishers of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE have made arrangements with The Macmillan Company to supply a limited edition of this set to their readers on monthly terms—see coupon—and we can unqualifiedly recommend the work

THE New Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture has been freshly written in the light of the most recent research and experience. It is not merely an ordinary revision or corrected edition of the old Cyclopedia, but it is a new work from start to finish with enlarged boundaries geographically and practically; it supersedes and displaces all previous editions or reprints of every kind whatsoever. It is the fullest, the newest, the most authoritative of all works of its kind and constitutes the most conscientious attempt that has ever been made to compress the whole story of our horticultural thought, learning and achievement into one set of books. The owner of the Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture will have at hand in this work a means of quickly satisfying his need for authoritative information. It is both an Encyclopedia and a Manual. Amateur and professional alike may quickly identify any plant, shrub or fruit contained within the set, and then receive expert instructions for its cultivation.

A Few of the Many Important New Features

Key to Identification of Plants This is a device to enable one to find the name of a plant. The name thus found is quickly referred to under its alphabetical location, where full information will be found in regard to it. The key is so simple that it is useful to the veriest amateur and to the botanist or commercial expert.

Synopsis of Plant Kingdom This is one of the most important features of the new edition. It constitutes a general running account of the classes, orders and groups of plants, with a brief sketch or characterization of 215 of the leading families, comprising those that yield practically all the cultivated plants. These family descriptions give the botanical characters; the number of genera and species and the ranges; a list of the important genera; brief statements in regard to the useful plants; and diagrammatic illustrations.

Illustrations There are 24 colored plates; 96 full page halftones; and more than 4000 engravings which serve as guides in the text. These color plates constitute the best possible combination of expert horticultural color photography and color printing, with a mastery in selection such as only Dr. Bailey's knowledge can supply.

The Glossary This is an analysis of all technical terms that are used in the work and in similar works. It comprises botanical and horticultural terms with brief definitions.

Translation and Pronunciation of Latin Names In Volume I is inserted a list of between 2000 and 3000 Latin words used as species—names of plants, giving the English equivalent or translation and the pronunciation.

Class Articles Special effort has been made to secure the best cultural advices for the plants requiring peculiar or particular handling. Here are some of the titles of these articles: Ants; Autumn Gardening; Bedding; Diseases; Drainage; Floral Designs; Formal Gardening; Hotbeds and Coldframes; Insects; Landscape Gardening; Lawn Planting; Orchards; Rock Gardening; Subtropical Gardening; Tools and Implements; Village Improvements; Window Boxes, etc.

General Index The final volume contains a complete index to the entire work, enabling the reader to locate volume and page of any subject he has in mind.

The complete set of six volumes, bound in decorated buckram, will be delivered to you for only $3.00 down and $3.00 a month for 11 months, until the full amount of $36.00 has been paid. Cash price is $35.00.

FORTY-THIRD ANNUAL CONVENTION

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN

CHICAGO, JUNE 26 to 28, 1918

President Major Lloyd C. Stark writes from the Firing Line—The Distribution Problem—Publicity and Market Development—Officers Elected

The forty-third annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen was held at Hotel Sherman, Chicago, Ill., June 26, 27 and 28, 1918. Vice-president J. R. Mayhew presided. Mr. Graw, of the Chicago Association of Commerce, extended a welcome on behalf of the city.

A message from Major Lloyd C. Stark, who was elected president of the Association at Philadelphia last year, was read.

A Message from Somewhere in France, or on the Way

Today I am not with you to answer the roll call but I am not a deserter. In leaving you, in tearing myself away and denying myself the honor of presiding, I have sacrificed something that is near to my heart. But not to see your faces, not to be with you to shake your hands and meet you again—that is the greater sacrifice.

All I am or hope to be I owe to my country—the land that gave me birth and educated me. When the call to arms came, when the bugle sounded, when the cries of bleeding Belgium and ravished France echoed in our ears, there was but one answer and one choice.

In these days of anguish, with the whole world on fire, and the very fate of humanity hanging in the balance, the man who has been trained to fight sees but one road—the road to the sea and over, and on through France to Berlin.

Today my battalion is on that road—and I am with it. We shall not return soon, perhaps never, but rest assured my dear friends that my heart is with you—and my thoughts and good wishes, always.

Those of us who go to fight and give our lives and our all, do so joyfully. And those of you who cannot go—whose ties and responsibilities point to the path of duty there at home—are not less patriotic than those who fight. Do your duty well, work harmoniously together to preserve and protect and upbuild our noble calling, so important to the health and sustenance of our people in these days of war and privation. Food alone won't win this war, but great stores of American foods and millions of strong hearted American men will win. As Kipling says:

"It ain't the guns nor armament
Nor funds that they can pay,
But the close co-operation
That makes them win the day.

It ain't the individuals,
Nor the army as a whole,
But the everlastin' teamwork
Of every bloomin' soul."

Just as our armies have almost insurmountable difficulties to overcome, so you have now and will have perhaps to an ever greater degree in the future war years, tremendous problems to solve. * * *

After this patriotic outburst Major Stark, coming down to business matters, called attention to the necessity for self-sacrifice on the part of the few for the benefit of all. He questioned the idea that the war would soon be over, and advised looking the situation straight in the eye and laying plans that would weather the storm.

Transportation, he said, was the greatest problem before the nurserymen today. This problem should be given every possible consideration. He advised that preparedness be the watchword concerning both legislation and transportation: "Sleep with one eye open, and keep that eye trained on Washington."

In concluding Major Stark said: "And now, my friends, each and every one of you, goodbye, good luck, and God bless you and yours."

Reply to President Stark

A message, on behalf of the Association, was sent to Major Lloyd Stark, on the Firing Line, Somewhere in France, telling him of the sincere appreciation with which his message was received, and expressing the wish that "May He who holds the waters of the sea in the hollow of his hand protect you from all bodily harm and return you ere long to your beloved country and friends." The letter was signed by the committee: J. W. Hill, Henry B. Chase and J. S. Kerr, with a P. S. reading: "The gang's all here and gives three cheers for our president on the Firing Line."

Arboretum Committee Reports

The committee on arboretums reported that it would be well for this association to keep a committee on arboretums under appointment, so that when the war was over it could co-operate with Federal officials in the furtherance of the plans advanced, having in view the location of a great arboretum in the District of Columbia.

Complaints and Grievances

W. H. Wyman, chairman of committee, made the following happy report: "I have had no complaints and grievances sent to me or made to me, and I have none myself to offer, therefore I have no report."

Report of Committee on Distribution

This thoroughly businesslike presentation was made by M. R. Cashman, chairman, who drew attention to some of the recommendations made by the distribution committee in its report at Philadelphia—No. 1 having to do with the establishment of a central bureau to look after the business of the association; No. 3 the compiling and printing of a complete and accurate directory; No. 6 the inauguration of a publicity campaign; No. 7 taking cognizance of the traveling salesman and the retail catalog as the most forceful and effective agencies in the distribution of nursery stock.

The establishment of a central bureau is to be further discussed at this meeting. In the matter of a directory considerable progress has already been made, while the inauguration of a publicity campaign has taken form, much work already having been done.

Mr. Cashman then dwelt on the matter of recognizing the traveling salesman as the most forceful and effective agency in the distribution of nursery stock, and deplored the practice of furnishing wholesale surplus lists and wholesale prices to those not engaged in the business.

We quote Mr. Cashman in full on the distribution problem:

"The solution of the distribution problem lies in the strength of our selling force, and in this connection we must consider the retailer. Look about you in other lines of trade, and find if you can a single commodity, no matter how necessary it is, no matter how popular it is, no matter how great a demand there is for it, that is not sold and distributed through the retailer, and sold by personal interview, and you will also find that the retailer is protected and supported in the matter of methods and prices in the distribution of that commodity.

"Manufacturers spend millions in the advertising of their product, but have you ever seen one of these advertisements quoting a price cheaper than that maintained by the retailer? Have you ever read an advertisement by the manufacturer urging their patrons to send direct to the factory for goods in order to save the retailer's profit? No, but on the other hand you have seen these advertisements in local papers all over the country advising the patrons where they can secure a package of the manufacturer's product right at home in his own town.

"These are distribution methods worked out from years and years of experience, and these methods have been almost universally adopted by all the manufacturers of this country. I hold that the ultimate solution of the distribution problem in the nursery business can be brought about only through the retailer, and if the growers, whether they be wholesalers or retailers, do not protect the retailer in a sufficient measure to cover his costs of operation, then the nursery business will continue to be a disappointment to the majority of those who engage in it.

"The traveling salesman is the key to the whole situation. Protect him in the matter of prices, and assist him with publicity, and you wholesalers and growers will reap bank accounts instead of brush piles. Cheap prices never built an industry in the world and cannot be used as an argument for business. On the other hand the argument of quality regardless of price is the foundation of our great commercial industry."

Other recommendations of the committee were for the appointment of a retail cost committee which would study all factors making for cost of production, combined with selling the stock so produced through a traveling salesman, and shipped over a distance of 200 miles average, adding to this a reasonable profit, together with a reasonable overhead, the resulting figures to be made the association's standard for quotation.

Committee on Directory

The committee on directory, also represented by Mr. Cashman as chairman, made the statement that when the directory, now in preparation, was completed, it would be worth something to know who the nurserymen of the United States are. Reports have been received from 41 States, and a few need revision, with the intention of publishing the directory this coming Fall. Dealers, landscape gardeners, florists, park boards, cemetery associations or small commercial fruit growers will not be listed in the directory.

French Relief Committee

Mr. F. L. Atkins, chairman of French Relief Committee, read letters telling of conditions in France, and stated that a fund amounting to upwards of $50,000 was now lying in banks in Paris, awaiting the time when it can be applied toward the reconstruction of orchards and gardens in France after the war.

Suppressing Berberis Vulgaris

Dr. E. C. Stakman, chairman Barberry eradication committee, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, St. Paul, Minn., spoke on the subject, "Banish the Barberry and Save the Wheat." He added also that Oats, Barley and Rye should come under this head, as they were equally affected. It has been proved beyond any question of doubt that rust will transfer to the Barberry and retransfer from the Barberry back to the grains. In 1916 the Wheat yield alone in the States of Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana was reduced by over 205,000,000 bushels. The chief factor in the Wheat yield in those four States was the black stem rust, which is the most destructive of all the rusts. The spores or seed of the rust fungus can be carried tremendous distances by the wind.

The following resolution was offered by J. W. Hill and adopted:

Resolved That in view of the information given us by the pathologists regarding the dissemination of black rust, that it be the sense of this Association that the propagation and dissemination of Berberis vulgaris be discontinued, and we appeal to all loyal and patriotic members of this organization to support us in this position.

Various Committee Reports

The association's secretary and counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, of Boston, gave a lengthy report in which he reviewed both State and Federal legislation passed within the last year, affecting the nursery trade, and mentioned the work of the credit and collection bureau which, during the past 11 months, had collected $20,400.

"Marketing Methods," was the subject of an address by L. D. H. Weld, manager Commercial research department, Swift & Co., Chicago, Ill. The principal reasons for variations in marketing costs are as follows: The greater or less perishability of the product; the rapidity with which stocks of goods are turned; the standardization of products. The more goods that have been graded into standard or uniform grades, the less the market cost. The seasonal nature of the business is also a great factor in determining marketing cost. When there are regular trade channels through which goods are handled, for instance, drug stores, grocerymen, etc., the cost of marketing is also reduced. The National Association of Electrical Supply Jobbers have made an exhaustive study of costs, and anyone interested would do well to look into the activities of this association, whose headquarters is in Chicago.

Various resolutions and amendments to the constitution were printed in the Badge Book and submitted to the members for discussion and to be voted on, but with the exception of amendment to Art. 7 to the constitution, were laid on the table. Art. 7, as amended, reads as follows:

The annual membership fees shall be $10, and additional dues for active members, based upon annual volume of business, as follows:

100,000 or more, $100; $75,000 to $100,000, $75; $50,000 to $75,000, $50.00; $25,000 to $50,000, $25.00; $15,000 to $25,000, $15; $5000 to $15,000, $5.

The payment of annual membership fees and dues based upon the above schedule shall be made prior to date of annual meeting, and any members making a false report of amount due the association as above provided shall forfeit his membership.

The arbitration committee reported settlement having been obtained on five claims, totaling in value $2500 for the year.

The statistical committee stated that an enormous amount of work was involved in obtaining the desired information regarding plantings, young stock coming on, matured stock for market, losses by hail, fire and adverse growing conditions and contents of brush piles, due perhaps to overproduction. Blanks to be filled out by nurserymen all over the country have been prepared, and it is hoped that, with the co-operation of the trade, the desired information may be obtained.

Thomas B. Meehan, chairman of landscape gardening committee, reported that very little had been done the past year, owing to war conditions, but stated that its object was to harmonize the nurseryman and landscape architect and, on his recommendation, the committee was continued.

Harlan P. Kelsey presented the report of the committee on nomenclature, stating that lists and authorities on common names the world over have been consulted and are being codified. Messrs. Frederick Law Olmstead, F. V. Coville and Harlan P. Kelsey are now continuing the work so that the forthcoming edition of the "Code" shall include usable common names for the plants in commerce.

Report of the Publicity Committee

This was presented by F. L. Atkins, chairman, and consisted of a resumé of the meetings held in New York, Dec. 5 and 20, 1917, the members of the committee present being Messrs. Atkins, Pyle, Hicks and McFarland. At the second meeting the enthusiasm reached the point where definite subscriptions began, and its outcome was the appointment of a committee to be known as the market development committee, the members of which are Messrs. Atkins, Watson, Welch, Pyle and J. Edward Moon. Through this committee a large number of books on the home grounds are now in circulation among the nurserymen, and a second on fruits for the home grounds is in preparation.

Market Development

As was the case at the 1917 New York S. A. F. and O. H. convention, the most interesting feature presented at the nurserymen's convention was undoubtedly that included under this heading.

Robt. Pyle, West Grove, Pa., had the chair, and made some forcible remarks in introducing the subject which was promoting the establishment or the organization of a subscribers' movement that should be distinct and separate, for very good reasons, from the American Association of Nurserymen. His preference was that the movement be started as a voluntary one and not one of assessment of members. Market development was a tremendously big subject, and full of significance to those present.

J. Edward Moon, J. R. Mayhew, O. Joe Howard, W. H. Wyman, Orlando Harrison, John Watson, M. R. Cashman, C. H. Atkins and others express their views on Market Development

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., being called on, emphasized the necessity for a publicity campaign. He said, "All of us know that in every community from which we come there are numerous home grounds unplanted, or insufficiently planted. We have an abiding opinion that if these people had attractive lawns, they would be more happy; we know their real estate would be enhanced; we know the community would be benefited, but we somehow have not sufficiently impressed the advantages of our products upon the community to have created that irresistible desire for them."

To carry on the campaign Mr. Moon said that 16 men have been chosen, eight from the different sections of the United States and eight at large; these men have organized to receive subscriptions which will consist of a certificate of membership, or a stock allotment having a face value of $100, issued payable in installments of $20 each over a period of five years. He said it was not the intention to pour this money out through the Saturday Evening Post or other nationally circulated magazine for the reason that these are probably one of the last avenues to use in the expenditure of this fund, having too much of a waste circulation for their purpose among city inhabitants. Mr. Moon understands the movies as being in line with advertising effort of profit in connection with this fund, also lectures; every grange, farmers' club, garden club, Mr. Moon said, as well as every agricultural or horticultural organization of any kind is always glad to have lectures. Additionally, methods of publicity would be through the press by articles that would tell more about fruit trees, how to grow them, the necessity of eating more fruits, etc.; news articles that tell the values of both trees and ornamentals. These news articles would reach millions of people. Other possibilities are through the schools. The plan will probably be worked out through some one person; probably some one of national merchandising experience, preferably not an advertising agency.

Mr. Moon continued: "I hope in this talk I have opened up to you a vision of the possibilities of this thing. It grows on us; it is infinite. America is our market; to make it more beautiful and to make it more fruitful is our ambition."

J. R. Mayhew struck a keynote when he said: "We must not lose sight of the fact that we must keep the home fires burning. The aim of this committee is to create better markets, bigger markets, and more markets."

O. Joe Howard, of North Carolina, predicated his talk with an appeal for the spirit of co-operation among nurserymen; he believed it would wipe away many difficulties. "We will stop knocking each other and boost our business and help everybody else along."

W. H. Wyman, of N. Abington, Mass., made a forcible presentation, arguing that market development was a broad proposition and should be taken up in a broad way. It was needed to create hunger for nursery products, to create an appetite for them. He did not believe the time was ripe to launch a movement of this kind now. He asked for a standing vote, ascertaining how many men present were in sympathy with the publicity movement: everybody rose. Last Winter, at their New England Association meeting, he said this matter was brought up and in that meeting it was concluded that the business of the nurserymen of this country amounted to 20 million dollars annually. New England, he said, would raise its quota. Mr. Wyman believed in assessing each member, and suggested one-half of one per cent. for five years of the total of each man's business. This would bring in $100,000. With regard to the assessment he suggested that this be graduated according to whether a nurseryman was a wholesaler or a retailer. He said he was in favor of the campaign but was not in favor of undertaking it this year; it would require some time to get the machinery going.

The chairman agreed with Mr. Wyman that this subject must be whipped into shape; it was going to take some time to do it, and the committee was on the job.

Orlando Harrison of Berlin, Md., believed in going ahead with the publicity now, but would leave it to the committee; he felt, however, that the association should take action and that today. The trouble was, he said, that they have postponed until they have got to a point where they are driven to do something. He believed a great many nurserymen have not made any money for five years. "Is it not time to get at it, do something, get together and try to earn a few dollars for ourselves?" he asked. "Somebody spoke about licking the Kaiser. Yes, that is the first aim but, gentlemen, we have got to have something to lick the Kaiser with. Let us get together, unite, determine on some plan of making some money, and help lick the Kaiser, and at the same time save our families."

John Watson favored the assessment plan; he thought the time for action was now; he said: "There is not money enough, or brains enough, or anything to be done within six months or within a year that can affect our sales. In the first place, if a merchandising expert is called in to prescribe for your business, he wants to know what your stock is, he wants to know what your customers are, what territory you cover, the condition of your bank book. Now, when your 16 directors get together to consider this question and when they have, as they should have, the advice of merchandising experts, who have their advice to sell, remember that they are going to consider not the business of one firm, but they must consider the business of, we hope, 500 to 800 firms scattered all over the United States, and it is going to be a big problem to figure out a campaign which is going to cover this whole country and fall equitably on all of you. It can be done, but it is a long, hard study; it is going to take, in my opinion, fully a year to get our money raised and get a campaign mapped out. We must not expect immediate returns on this. The effect is going to be cumulative. It may be two, three, four, five years before we get returns, but I honestly believe that there is not another way in which nurserymen could spend $50,000 or $100,000 that would bring them better or finer results than this will.

M. R. Cashman, of Owatonna, Minn., called attention to the necessity of building up the quality and character of the nursery salesman, and with them to make a concerted, united action for business. He continued: "There never has been in the history of this world a greater illustration made of one concerted and united action as there has been during the past four years which has cost the civilized world millions of lives in blood. Concerted action and united co-operation have made it possible for a very small portion of this earth to almost submerge the entire world. Just think of it. There is not a man in this room that before this war thought it would be possible for three little nations to combat so successfully and so disastrously the entire wealth and man power of the earth. But what is it? Is it a superiority of brains? Is it a superiority of government? Oh, no; it has been demonstrated clearly to you and me that concerted action and co-operation have continued this war to the present time, until we are beginning to tremble for our future." Further, he added he has found there must be a community interest excited in anything if you are going to make a demand for any product.

Mr. Cashman's presentation of the subject was a thoroughly thought out one and was carefully listened to.

He was followed by C. H. Atkins, of Rutherford, N. J., who said that this was not a question of the heart; it is a question of dollars and cents, and it is only dollars and cents that create further dollars and cents. He related the instance of a man to whom he sold five years previously about $600 worth of nursery products; this man came to him and told him that that $600 had made for him $5000 through beautifying and increasing his real estate value. "It is not always the love of plants and flowers that influence people when they buy our products. Many people buy them because it is a good thing; they are going to improve their grounds, in addition to having the pleasure and inspiration coming from beautiful surroundings. I think, gentlemen, that there is not a nurseryman in this country today that has vision beyond the present but what realizes that advertising or publicity is the power behind the business.

A canvass of all the members present resulted in a subscription of $10,200 toward the marketing development fund.

Officers Elected for Ensuing Year

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.

Executive committee: C. C. Mayhew, Sherman Tex.; C. R. Burr, Manchester, Conn.

Chicago was selected as the next meeting place.

A talk was given by Sergeant W. J. Morton, who told of work that is being done for the comfort of soldiers, and urged all citizens to see that the boys are well looked after when passing through cities and villages.

Osborn Monnet, of the United States Fuel Administration made a brief address, urging all the members to order their coal early.

Short talks were given on the topic, "War Times and the Nursery Business," by Messrs. E. C. Hillborn, W. H. Wyman and J. R. Mayhew. All spoke in an optimistic tone, and urged nurserymen to use their organizations in Liberty Loan and Red Cross work.

Vigilance, Press, Hail Ins. Committee Report

Paul C. Stark, chairman of the vigilance committee, stated that while their work was unpleasant, yet they believed much good could be accomplished by watching out for violations of trade ethics among nurserymen, and presented copies of several letters that had been written; for instance, to a nurseryman advertising Apple and Peach trees at "Two cents and up." In every case where such letters had been written, replies were received indicating such practices injurious to the trade would cease.

Report of the Press Committee

This committee was appointed to do work at the time of the holding of the convention, not only through the local city papers, but through the associated press, and was dependent as to obtaining publicity on the actual news interest of the proceedings of the association and the relative news value of its deliberations. The committee pointed out that if it was to gain attention that would secure nation-wide publicity for this convention it was up to the members thereof to do something that editors in these times would recognize as deserving space, such as planning the planting of trees for future fuel supply, or showing the actual possibilities through fruit and nut trees of supplementing effectively the short food supply or, again, to plant on the home grounds of every family which has sent a man

July Notes

Whether or not you have doubts about bulb stock reaching us this Fall from France, England or Holland, you should have your orders in for at least a good supply of Roman Hyacinths, Trumpet and Golden Spur Narcissi, as well as Paperwhites. If these bulbs don't reach us, you will be no worse off than the rest of us, but if they do come, your seedsman will fill his early orders first and in case of shortage but few late orders will be taken care of. In just a few weeks the benching of Carnations will begin; that means benches in proper shape, soil ready for filling them and the present is the time to do it; the soil won't spoil a couple of weeks in the benches before planting begins. Have you ordered your cane stakes for the 'Mums? Why not have them on hand? If you use wire and twine get them now. July is the month in which to sow most perennials and biennials and it will pay you to get better acquainted with them. If you intend growing Cyclamen for next year, some excellent home-grown seed is now offered, but in small quantities as yet. Get after some. Whether you are going to have a vacation in August or not, try to get ahead of the work now and, if possible, stay ahead, as far as this is possible. Clean up the whole place, put the pots away nicely where they belong, don't let the paint brush get cold. The tighter the roofs, the further that 50 per cent allowance of coal will go and the whiter the paint on the rafters, the brighter the house. Avoiding any and all unnecessary expenses doesn't mean to let the place run down and the older the houses the more attention they should have. What you do in July in the way of repairs means that much more time during the following two months for other things and time was never more valuable than now.

Next Winter's Coal and Your Heating System

Everybody advises putting in the 50 per cent coal which is to pull us through next Winter and while this is a very sensible thing to do, there are a number of florists located in sections where, even at present, it is almost impossible to obtain their coal and again, others have trouble in getting the dollars to pay for it and therefore have to take chances in obtaining what they need later on. What, to my mind, is of as great importance, especially to the smaller florist, is to get ready now for almost anything which might happen next Winter; get busy with valves and shut-offs in the heating system so you can disconnect almost any house and drain the pipes if necessary. Figure on putting the palms, ferns and the small bedding stock in one or two houses which you will keep on running until the last piece of coal and the last fence post in town is used up. No matter what happens you must pull through the Winter; stick to the ship; don't give up. Plan to plant the Carnations in the next houses. You can pull them through with 40 deg. to 45 deg., if it has to be, and still make them pay. Perhaps those houses which might have to be taken off in order to make the 50 per cent or less allotment of coal carry you through the Winter can be used for growing the Chrysanthemums during the Summer and Fall. Arrange it to suit your own case, but by all means do your steam fitting now. The cost of a few valves and the labor is little compared with what it may mean to you next Winter. You can't afford to take chances with existing conditions. You must get ready to meet anything next Winter. Don't be found unprepared. Don't lay down, or make up your mind that there is no chance to hold out. Roll up your sleeves and get busy. Do some hard thinking; there is a way out. It won't be a lack of demand for flowers, but a lack of flowers for the demand next Winter and the following Spring and most of us will manage to arrange it to get along with half the coal and half the houses and still come out ahead.

Proper Growing Conditions for Indoor Culture

From now on up to September you can, if necessary, grow your Cyclamen, Primulas and Begonias in the same house and include the Poinsettias. The first named three will require a little shading, while the Poinsettias want full sun and can go at one end of the house. All four need just about the same amount of moisture and treatment. While I am not in favor of trying to grow as many varieties of plants in the one house as possible, for the small grower this is a better way during the Summer months than to have small lots of each sort in different houses where they most likely will be neglected. In many sections of the country it has been a rather cool Spring, but no doubt there will be plenty of heat yet and it is then pot plants under glass need attention, if you want them to amount to anything. Watch things. Any of the plants such as Begonias Cinerarias, Primulas and Cyclamen need sun, but not to such an extent as to wilt the foliage. Keep the spraying up, refreshing the leaves during the hot days. Be ever on the lookout for insect pests. Allow proper space between the plants. The work around the plant house during July, August and September is never done. There is no end to it. A check to the growth of the plants means to stunt them and you are bound to notice the effect of it later on. Try to simplify your work. Arrange things so as to accomplish the most with the least effort. A batch of plants in one house and others scattered elsewhere are hard to manage and get anything out of. Proper growing conditions are every bit as necessary as good soil and drainage and you have to create them to suit the plants.

A Valuable Christmas Plant

Asparagus plumosus is one of the most useful plants for the retail grower, whether used to cut from for greens, grown on in small pots for the filling of fern dishes or as large specimen plants; around the Midwinter holidays pot plants of all sizes come in most handy. During the month of December material is wanted for the filling of baskets and pans and there is hardly a more suitable plant than Asparagus plumosus to go with Begonias, Cyclamen, Roman Hyacinths, or anything else in a plant arrangement, and the present is the time to start preparing stock. While Adiantums and almost any of the other so-called table ferns all require a warm house during November and December, in order to retain their color. Asparagus can get along with a 52 deg. house; if necessary, even 50. The plants will not make much of a growth in such a house but will remain in fair condition. This means a whole lot to the smaller florist, the one who hasn't a warm house. Pot up the seedlings now and keep them going. Small 2in. stock should get a shift into 3in. and be encouraged along. For specimen plants take those 2½in. and pot up into 5in. or take five 2½in. into a 6in. Do your growing now while the sun warms up the houses. Space the plants properly and by next October you will have fine stock which will come in most handy and mean money to you. You are not crowded now. Why not go into Bostons and Asparagus a little heavier this season? Palms are not any too plentiful, so push ferns and Asparagus plumosus.

Flower of Fairfield—Climbing Roses

Will you kindly inform me what special treatment should be given a Flower of Fairfield to make it actually everblooming and with blooms that are worth while? Blooms that come after the main crop are usually small and insignificant. Also kindly advise how much cutting should be done to Climbing Roses in general at this time, such as American Pillar, Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschoen and others that send up so many new canes? Is it essential to cut out all the old canes, when much interlaced in a trellis, and how many of the new ones should be used?—W. G. N.

To encourage a second crop of flowers on Roses, the first essential is to cut back the shoots that have bloomed, in order to induce a new growth. At the same time the plants should be given some extra nourishment, either in the form of bonemeal stirred into the soil, or by giving a topdressing of manure. This treatment, combined with plenty of water if the weather proves dry, will usually bring a second crop.

Climbing Roses in general do not need hard pruning at any time, but old canes that have finished blooming, may be cut back or cut out altogether if the size of the plants will permit it. Save all the young canes, unless there are more than you have space for, as these young canes are those from which next season's blooms are to be expected.—W.

Roses, Carnations, Grapes and Peaches

(1) I have a house with Russell Roses. I run this house at 60 deg. to 65 deg. at night and 75 deg. to 85 deg. in the daytime, depending on the weather outdoors. I syringe the plants each day, if clear. Is it better to take out all the blind wood? It seems to me my Roses have too much wood to produce first-class Roses. The plants are two years old.

(2) The Carnation house is empty except for young plants in 4in. pots. Would it not be better to plant the young plants in the garden than to leave them in the pots in the greenhouse? I keep the house as cool as possible and clean.

(3) I have a vinery with Grapes, of several varieties. I run the vinery at 60 deg. to 65 deg. at night to 80 deg. to 85 deg. in the daytime and keep a look-out for mildew, red spider, etc. I keep the house perfectly clean and dampen three times a day and thin Grapes. Is this right?

(4) I have also a house with Peaches and Nectarines and run this about the same as my Rose house. I keep it clean, syringe it daily and water it in abundance. Is it necessary to take out the wood of young growth? These trees are old ones and still are making a good growth. They promise a good crop of fruit.— C. P. J., Mass.

—(1) It is probable that some thinning of the blind wood on the Roses would be beneficial, as the strength of the plants would thus be encouraged to improve the blooms but such pruning should be done in such a way as to let the light in among the plants without removing too much wood; (2) The end of June is rather late to plant out Carnations in the field, as they would only have about a month in the ground before it was time to lift them again. Why not fill the benches and replant in the house, instead of putting these 4in. pot plants in the open ground? Syringe the plants frequently in bright weather to prevent red spider, and give all the ventilation possible. Indoor cultivation is not new for these plants and frequently gives very good results. W.

(3) Your treatment of the Grape vines is O. K., but I would make a suggestion in regard to night temperature and particularly when the Grapes are fairly well advanced, which they would be at this date. A temperature of 65 deg. to 70 deg. would be preferable. Yes, damping the house three times a day is good treatment for Grape vines, or say until the fruit commences to ripen, when a dryer atmosphere is of benefit; it has a tendency to better color and finish. (4) Peaches and Nectarines should be grown in a more humid atmosphere than Roses, that is to say up to their ripening period or when they commence to color; then a dryer bracing atmosphere should be encouraged, with the object of giving the fruit a rich flavor, also if they are kept a bit dryer at the roots while ripening their fruit this also will help. In regard to the Summer's growth; if at all crowded certainly some should be removed; otherwise it would be found impossible to ripen up the wood satisfactorily for next season. Thoroughly ripened wood is desirable, one should figure on having enough young wood for tying or furnishing the trees next season with the wood say 5in. apart. But at any rate see that the wood gets enough sun to thoroughly ripen it. This is surely one of the secrets of success in fruit culture under glass.—W. T.

From Inside the Seed Bin

Seed Store Floral Displays

Have you ever received a letter from a customer enclosing or forwarding simultaneously a flower or plant, requesting the name of it, and asking when the seed, bulb or root may be procured at the proper time for planting? There is, I suppose, hardly a seedsman who has not had such requests, yes, hundreds of them.

Again, an attractive vase of flowers at a show, something uncommon, will often create a sensation, and orders are taken then and there for the seed or bulb, whatever it may be, to be forwarded at the proper time. Probably these enthusiastic flower lovers have seen the same flower described and perhaps illustrated in your catalog time and again, yet that description had lacked that powerful punch necessary to make a sale that one glance at the flower had accomplished in a moment.

Here then is an inducement to you, Messrs. seedsmen who have the facilities in store, window and counter space to place before the public attractive exhibits of seasonable flowers throughout the year.

You may have your own grounds and houses for producing this stock, or you can arrange to have your supply come from a nearby grower, or from the producer of your stock of the seeds, bulbs or roots of the flower in question.

Tulips, Peonies, Irises, Gladioli, Sweet Peas, Roses, Ploxes, (and various other hardy perennials) annuals and flowering shrubs if you handle this line—all these in season should be exhibited as largely and often as possible, properly labeled, with catalogs close at hand where varieties may be noted.

Where a number of one class of flower, such as Gladioli, makes up the exhibit, a card or leaflet containing names only, with space provided for notes, will answer equally well.

From an educative point of view, visitors derive much benefit and enjoyment in noting the points of beauty and form of the different flowers; many who previously had never seen such variety take great interest in these exhibits, become frequent callers if they are maintained throughout the season, and if they don't leave an order for planting stock immediately, they invariably do so when the proper time comes around.

The idea, no doubt is not new to all readers, but perhaps the scheme can be carried out more elaborately and consistently than formerly. Gladioli, Sweet Peas, Perennials and many annuals will be kinds to consider during the coming months; thus arrangements should be made now for these displays. We know that many of the regular local flower shows, have been discontinued owing to war work, and so it is up to the seedsmen to see that interest in flowers is not wholly forgotten.

You will find these exhibits make many new customers, and of old customers better friends. You are often lead into conversation with one who previously had no further business than to leave an order. The talk may turn to garden topics other than the flowers in question, prospects that he or she perhaps had in view, where your advice would be helpful and appreciated, and so lead to further business for you that might otherwise have gone elsewhere.

During July and August perennial seeds are largely sown, but many of the general public are unaware of this. Where attractive vases of such kinds as Delphiniums, Canterbury Bells, Hollyhocks, Scabiosa, Coreopsis and dozens of other kinds are shown, immediate sales for the seeds are made, and your counter sales during these months will be vastly increased. Nemo.

Dutch Bulbs Said to be Coming

The S.S. Nieuw Amsterdam, one of the grain steamers now running between New York and Rotterdam, will leave that port about the middle of August with a cargo of Dutch bulbs, we are informed by H. Langeler, representing Van Waveren & Sons, of Hillegom Holland. Cable advices having been received from Holland to that effect, bulbs being practically the only cargo out of Holland at that time.

French Bulb Prospects

A letter from the American Express Co. at Marseilles, France, to l'Union Horticole gives one an idea of the difficulties to be encountered this year in the importation of French bulbs. The shortage of rolling stock in France, of lumber and labor, makes packing and transportation difficult. It is recommended that the bulbs be shipped by steamer from Toulon to Marseilles, whence the ships sail for America. Ocean freight rates are high, recent quotations from Marseilles to New York were 88s. per 1000 kilogr. (2200 lbs.). Terms of sale of the French houses is to the effect that they will not enter into any agreement as to time of delivery of goods at New York, that no special conditions will be considered, and the French bulb growers' obligations apparently end when the bulbs leave their premises. Additionally, there is the matter of permits from the French government to ship, and from the American government to import, to be obtained.

Bulbs have to be paid for in cash to the growers in France. Payment of invoices will be insisted upon even if the goods never reach this side. For this information we are indebted to the courtesy of M. Van Waveren & Sons, Ltd., New York City.

New York Seed Trade

There is a little which can be said about the seed trade in this city at this time. It is the customary Summer story, a few sales of seeds for late planting, a considerable demand for insecticides, and some sales of sundries for garden and lawn use. Inventories are being taken, store renovations and changes are going on, and vacations are in order. If the present embargo on bulbs continues, as now seems likely, most seedsmen will probably issue no Autumn bulb catalogs, though probably some who usually devote considerable attention to the bulb business, will have their bulb catalogs in such a state of preparedness that they can be quickly put into the printer's hands, should they unexpectedly be able to import Dutch and French bulbs.

Charles R. Jackman of Woking, England was in town on Friday and Saturday of last week. Mr. Jackman was formerly the European buying agent of Vaughan's Seed Store Chicago, and about 20 months ago was taken prisoner by a German submarine, while aboard a steamer en route from Holland to England. Mr. Jackman was interned for 14 months at Ruhla near Berlin. He with six other men were lodged in a stable, where the temperature in Winter was sometimes many degrees below zero. There were no cots and little covering. About six months ago, with the third lot of prisoners released, he was exchanged for seven Germans. He suffered great hardship during his internment.

John B. Deamud for several years manager for Vaughan's Seed Store N. Y. City, has retired on account of poor health to his farm at Caro, Michigan.

Chicago Seed Trade

This is a period of extreme quiet with the Chicago seed trade. Retail trade, except in insecticides, is all over. Salesmen from the various houses have gone on the road for Fall business but the uncertainty of the bulb situation is a problem that is difficult to solve.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports good sales of Freesia bulbs and advance orders for Callas. There is no perceptible falling off in the sale of flower seed for Summer sowing. A nice lot of young plants of fancy Caladiums are on display in the store from the greenhouses at Western Springs. Albert Erickson, T. D. Long and Carl Cropp represented the nursery department of the house at the recent convention at the Sherman Hotel.

Winterson's Seed Store, exhibited at the Nurseryman's Convention an exceedingly fine vase of hardy Phlox Miss Lingard, grown at the home of Mr. Winterson in Highland Park.

Importation of Asiatics for Farm Labor Service

Query? Was it seriously intended, that proposition made at the late American Trade Convention, held in Chicago, that at least 500,000 Chinese be imported into this country to serve as farm laborers? Did the matter receive careful consideration, ere it was proposed? Does the American Seed Trade put itself on record in favor of shelving the Monroe Doctrine by opening wide the doors of the United States to an extensive colonization by the yellow race, those with a different civilization from our own, who would always remain pagan and faithful from generation to generation to the nation they had left? The very idea of the thing is abhorrent to the American white people, and does not the American Seed Trade comprehend that Congress would assail it bitterly were such a proposition ever brought before it for action.

This country is aleady confronted by two perils within its own borders, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the Japanese peril in California, and the Black peril in the Southern States. The latter had its birth in colonial days in a similar desire for cheap labor: slave labor; for cheap production by our colonial planters or farmers; and one of this present generation is able to foresee with half an eye that the next civil war in America will in all probability break out between the black race of the South and the white race of the North, perhaps hastened thereto in the near future by the giving of suffrage to the negro women of the South, augumented subsequently by their husbands and sons, the tens of thousands of trained, experienced negro soldiers, after their return from Europe when the world war is over, alive and enthusiastic from their newly acquired education in the latest edition of liberty and democracy, and with their thirst for same whetted through their glorious service abroad for their country.

One of the lessons of this great world war that is fast being learned is that no nation can exist harmoniously within itself, one-half Teuton, one-half Slav; one-half white, one-half black or yellow; one-half Christian, one-half pagan or Mohammedan.

The facts are as well known, we do not require Oriental labor in America. In the present emergency, there plainly exists an abundant supply of white labor in the United States for every agricultural purpose, if same be properly encouraged and handled. Th Government has it in its power to taken over this white labor by conscription or otherwise, for employment at farm work among the various states as needed. Yea, and let this labor, as it deserves, be paid wages equally as high as is paid for labor at the shipyards and munition factories. The white portion of America, just as it now is bravely and cheerfully submitting to deprivation, sacrifice, to giving of its means and wealth, to enduring onerous taxation, all for the cause of democracy, and to down the unspeakable Hun, would a thousand times quicker pay $5 a bushel for Wheat, $5 a pound for Beet, Radish, and Turnip seeds, if it should come to that, rather than accept any yellow peril scheme.

While they were about it, it would perhaps have been more reasonable for

British Sweet Pea Growers Aid War Fund

The National Sweet Pea Society held a special meeting on Tuesday, July 2, at the London Scottish Drill Hall, Buckingham Gate, Westminster, S. W., London, England. Arrangements had been made for exhibits of Sweet Peas in connection with the Royal Hort. Society's meeting in the same hall on the same day.

The British Ambulance Committee of the National Sweet Pea Society held a big floral fete from June 20 to June 26 at Trafalgar Square in aid of funds in connection with the British and French Ambulance in France. At a special committee meeting it was decided to support this fete and members were invited to send Sweet Peas to be sold for the benefit of the fund.

Air Mail Rate Reduced

After July 15, the postage on airplane mail will be reduced from 24c. to 16c. for the first ounce (this including a six-cent rate for postage and 10c. for the special delivery which is accorded all airplane mail), and 6c. for each additional ounce or fraction thereof.

Storing Gladioli in the South

Is is best to store the dry corms of Gladioli that are grown in the South in early Spring, in cold storage for the Summer and Fall until ready for planting in the following Winter?—A. G. H., Fla.

—We do not think it would be necessary to put the Gladioli bulbs in cold storage, but that they will keep well until needed for Winter planting in a dry, and as cool a place as is available for their storage.—J. H. S.

A Method of Growing Beets Outdoors

The Beet is one of our popular root crops and is planted in nearly every garden. The usual tendency is to sow the seed too thickly and the result is an unnecessary amount of thinning. It should be remembered that Beet seed, as it is planted, is not a single seed but each one is a "seed ball" which contains two to five seeds. This may be shown by counting out 100 seed balls, planting them in a flat and watching results. In two or three weeks, when the plants are counted, 150 to 200 plants will be found coming from the original 100 seeds.

In view of this fact, caution should be used when the seed is sown. The main object, of course, is to secure a good stand; for this reason the rate of seeding should be adjusted to secure this result and yet not have the plants too thick. In heavy soils, where the plants have more difficulty in getting through the ground, a little more seed is used than when the crop is grown on light soils where practically every good seed will grow. Of course, light soils are best for Beets although they may be grown on fairly heavy soils also. The disadvantage with the heavy soil is that many of the Beets may be irregular in shape. It requires more work to produce good Beets on heavy soils.

On a fairly light soil, such as a sandy loam, which contains plenty of well-rotted organic matter and is not given to baking, one good seed every inch should give a good stand. At this rate an ounce of seed will sow 75ft. to 100ft. of row. It always happens that the seed will drop a little thicker than this in places, and the extra plants in these places may be lifted carefully without breaking the tap root when the plants are about 3in. tall, and transplanted in new rows or missing places in other rows. This means less work than thinning out every row the entire length, and also a saving in seed. A few Radish seeds dropped occasionally in the row with the Beet seed will germinate quickly and mark the row. If a crust forms before the Beet seed has germinated, the Radishes will act as a guide to show where to break the crust over the row.

If there is any thinning to be done, it should be attended to when the plants are about 2in. to 3in. tall. If it is neglected until the plants are larger, the plants that remain will be injured somewhat by the thinning.

Plenty of well-rotted manure may be worked into the soil before seeding, but fresh manure should never be applied immediately before planting. Fresh manure contains a large amount of readily available nitrogen, and this causes a heavy leaf growth, but Beets will not form. The root will be a straight tap root. Well-rotted manure may be supplemented with 16 per cent. acid phosphate by using about 300lbs. of the phosphate to the acre, or 1 lb. to a piece of ground 10ft. x 14ft. This may be applied broadcast and worked into the surface soil before seeding, or it may be distributed along the rows and worked into the soil by cultivation when the plants are 2in. to 3in. tall, or shortly after thinning.

At first the plants may be allowed to stand about 1in. apart, if the land is fertile. When the plants are a good size and the Beets are ¾in. to 1in. in diameter, the first pulling may be made by taking out every alternate Beet. For pickling and table use these tiny Beets are preferred by some people, and in addition the tops may be used for greens. Some people boil the whole plant as for greens. This pulling leaves the plants standing about two inches apart where they remain until the beets are 1½ in. to 2in. in diameter. This is the size that is most popular. If larger Beets are desired, every alternate Beet may again be pulled, leaving the others stand 4in. apart where they will grow until they are 2½in. to 3in. in diameter.

It is said usually that the smaller Beets are the best in quality, being juicy and tender. This is generally true when the soil is properly fertilized and there is a constant supply of moisture present in the soil. Under very favorable conditions Beets will often attain a larger size in the same length of time and yet be just as good in quality as the smaller Beets.

Under good conditions about eight weeks are required to grow Beets of a desirable size. If there is a dry spell and the Beets grow very slowly, it may take 9 or 10 weeks to attain the same results. A slow growth requiring this much time to grow the Beets will make them tough, stringy and poorer in quality. The most important factors then are a fairly rapid growth, a fertile soil containing the necessary plant food, a constant supply of moisture, and a favorable temperature, not too hot, although Beets will stand more heat than Lettuce or Radishes.

In the same soil under the same conditions, it requires a proportionately longer time to grow really large Beets than it does to grow smaller ones. Frequently Beets are allowed to remain in the field too long, merely for the sake of size, so that fewer Beets will be required to make a bunch. These Beets are often tough and poor in quality and this is why consumers prefer the smaller Beets, 1½in. to 2in. If a Beet the same size is older and tougher because a longer time was required to grow it, due to poor soil or lack of moisture, it will usually be rougher at the top of the Beet near the base of the leaves; this is generally because some of the lower leaves drop off during the growth of the plant and these leaf scars make the Beet rough at the top. A Beet that has grown quickly will lose few of its leaves and will be smooth up to the leaves, unless some disease has roughened the surface.

Keeping the Land Busy

All good land that is capable of producing good yields should produce as much as possible this year. This means that the late crops should be planted just as soon as possible after the early crops are harvested. For example, late Tomatoes planted too late will be just in their prime with a heavy set of green Tomatoes when the first frost strikes them. Any grower who is not entirely sure about the time required to produce a crop should get in touch with the State college or university in his State, or answers to questions will be furnished through this column.

A great many growers are showing the true American spirit by operating as efficiently as possible the largest acreage they know they can handle with the labor available. They deserve a great deal of credit. If it becomes necessary, for any reason, to operate a smaller acreage, the land which is not used for a cash crop may be improved by planting on it a crop of Cow Peas, Clover, Canada field Peas, Vetch, etc., the choice depending upon the section of the country and time when the crop will be planted. After such a crop is planted the land will need no attention for some time but it will be improving while attention is being given to cultivated crops.

The Field of Our Greatest Endeavors

If you asked us for a price on the printing of a huge poster—such as meets your eye on any railroad journey—we might give you a figure, if you insisted, but we could not do the job ourselves, it being out of our line. That kind of work calls for machinery other than we have.

Our printing plant has been assembled for the express purpose of doing work for the horticultural trade—catalogs and all other printed forms of that activity. Our entire staff has been more particularly trained to handle the printing of florists, nurserymen and seedsmen than the printing appertaining to other industries.

For that reason the placing of your printing order with us carries with it the thought that your aims to secure business through the printed word will be particularly understood by us—it augurs for intelligent and satisfying service from experts educated to your wants,

Put up to us those phases of your printing problems which bother you most.

Conditions in the market are unusual for this time of year. Instead of large quantities of stock being thrown out as in previous years, wholesalers and growers are at their wits' ends to get enough good flowers to fill many of their orders, and retailers are having difficulty in handling large decorations. Summed up, stock is unusually scarce and all offers are picked up at sight. Gladioli are late and some of the growers who had large quantities to offer at this time last year have only just begun planting. This is due to the shortage of greenhouse labor. This flower is usually counted upon as a filler during the latter part of June, and in July for funeral work and decorations.

SOUTHERN STATES

Roses are poor, except a few from the North. Carnations are in the same condition. Cornflowers are in fair demand for use in decorations and pieces carried out in the National Colors. Asters are not yet to be had; they would find ready sale if they were available.

The sale of the Washington Floral Co. to David G. Grillbortzer came as a surprise to the trade and shakes things up somewhat in the wholesale flower market, with corresponding effect on the retail trade. The sale included the store at Fourteenth st. and New York ave., as well as the greenhouses in Alexandria, Va. In Alexandria the properties are across the street from each other and the combination will give Mr. Grillbortzer nearly 250,000ft. of glass. J. Harper Hetherington, who previously managed the store will continue to do so, handling both the wholesale and retail business.

With The Colors

George Gouldman, formerly with the Louise Flower Shop, and Victor W. Fortwengler, formerly with the Washington Floral Co. have gone to Paris Island, S. C., for initial training in the Marine Corps. They will probably be at the training camp for about three months.

Francis J. Robbins, son of Jesse Robbins, florist of East Ridge st., Carlisle, Pa., and lately in the employ of Gude Bros. Co. is soon to report for duty with the Medical Corps at Camp Oglethorpe, Ga. He has left Washington for a brief stay at his home in Carlisle before reporting for duty at the training camp.

Charles Scarborough, for many years with Gude Bros. Co. has resigned and gone to his father's farm in Bucks County, Pa., near Trenton, N. J., pending a call to enter the service of the Government.

Walter Hawley, of the Gude Bros. sales force, is on a two week's vacation.

J. Harper Hetherington, manager of the Washington Floral Co., has heard that his three brothers, Horace D., Frank W., and William M. Hetherington, have arrived safely in France and are preparing to go into action with the United States Army. The four boys are the sons of Mr. Hetherington, who for many years, up to the time of his death, was in the employ of M. Rice & Company, of Philadelphia.

George C. Shaffer has been appointed by President Z. D. Blackistone, of the Florists' Club, to consider the advisability of holding an outing at Great Falls, or other suitable place, this year.

The United States Fuel Administration announces that an order is in preparation which is to take the place of the so-called "lightless night" order of last year.—E. A. D.

Visitors to The Exchange Office

Mrs. Myrtle Shepherd Francis, of Ventura, Cal., known as the successful hybridizer of the double Petunia, was in the city last week in attendance at the convention of the Woman's Land Army of America, the trip giving her opportunity to see the progress which is being made by the Army this side of the Rockies. Mrs. Francis having voluntarily and successfully undertaken to supply woman labor for the vineyards and seed farms of her native state.

Mrs. Francis reports a first class season in her seed specialties. In speaking of the possible importation of Chinese laborers, Mrs. Francis doubts whether the request of the seedsmen will receive much support for the reason that the Congress is on record against the admission of Chinamen, and because the labor unions of Northern California are dead set against the proposition.

Another visitor this week, S. J. Mitchell of Houston, Texas, mentioned the inefficiency of Mexican labor in that section of the country. Mr. Mitchell is president of the Houston Horticultural Society, and is optimistic concerning the present business situation, believing that all things are going to come out well and soon.

$40,000 State Greenhouses Bring $505 Under the Hammer

George A. Shreiner, superintendent of public grounds and buildings, has approved the sale of the big greenhouses in Capitol Park, Harrisburg, Pa., to Samuel A. Fishman for $505. It will cost three times this sum, it is figured for the wreckers to get out the glass, 12,000 feet of piping, frames and other materials for which the state has expended more than $40,000 in the 28 years the greenhouses have been in service. There was spirited bidding among the women for the plants in the greenhouses. Many of the great tropical ones were knocked down by the auctioneer, who did not exhibit them. Some women found their purchases were strange plants in great tubs that would take a half a dozen men to lift. As the average price paid was $1, most of the women quietly left the greenhouses without claiming their purchases. Nearly $700 was realized in the plant sale.

A Great Horticultural Farm

The George A. Howard Farming Co. Bono, Ohio, quite near Toledo, just added another farm, making the total area under cultivation 1660 acres. Roses grow and bloom remarkably well there, but they are sticking closely to the more essential crops. The farm, rich upland and muck, is entirely clear from stone and many acres are sown to Asparagus, Rhubarb, Witloof Chicory, Onions, Lettuce, Cauliflower, Potatoes, etc. Pigs and other stock are raised extensively.

The plans for the farm were made years ago when the land was being redeemed. After careful study the irrigation system used in Holland and in the western States of American was adopted. The storage warehouses when completed will hold 75,000 bushel crates.

The farm is three miles long and 1¼ miles wide, and has a frontage on Lake Erie of more than a mile, affording good bathing and fishing for the families of the workers on the farm. Quite a little village has sprung up in connection with the farm it having 25 houses, two churches, school house, recreation park. It has not yet been named—the mail address being Bono, Ohio, which is just a few miles away.

After the present year, Mr. Frank Brunton, general manager, states they expect to grow hardy perennials and Roses for wholesale.

Greenhouse Heating

A booklet of 52 pages, containing a reprint of four prize essays on the subject, which passed through the columns of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE several years ago, with comments by John McArthur, heating engineer for Hitchings & Co. There is also included a collection of answers to pertinent questions on greenhouse heating.

The problem of greenhouse heating is a vital one in the face of the 50% fuel restriction order, and all growers desiring information upon the choice of a boiler, the installing of a proper amount of piping, both as to the quantity and the proper placing of it, the stoking or feeding of the furnace and the general management of the heating apparatus should be in possession of a copy of this valuable little pamphlet.

In the retail trade there is practically nothing to report excepting that when there is a call for special flowers they are often not to be had on account of the peculiar season we have had.

Although a few growers are cutting good Carnations, they are on the whole scarce.

H. A. Schroyer's eye troubles are improving and he is able to be at the store during business hours.

A meeting of the picnic committee of the club was held on June 26 and some changes are made. Among other things lunch will be eaten at tables and plenty of sports have been arranged for the children. The Ladies Auxiliary has helped out the committee with many suggestions and is practically taking charge of the affairs.

The wholesale business is on the jump along certain lines, but A. plumosus and Smilax seem to be a rather doubtful proposition. This I suppose is because of the fear of their being lost in transit. However, they can be sent by post with better success than many other items in our business. It seems to me that as long as present conditions last growers of pot plants should make parcel post shipments a study and keep up this end of the business. It is obvious that without stock the retailer cannot do business and if the customer cannot obtain his accustomed supply of plants it will be hard to get him back as a buyer when conditions change. These facts are not brought before our florists strongly enough, nor often enough. I could write pages on things that we ought to do from our point of view of good business, but the constant reminder is better than the lengthy dissertation—which is generally laid aside and forgotten—for stimulating both growers and retailers to get busy and make the most of present conditions.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Brisker Business

The scarcity of stock put more life in business last week. Indoor stock is about done for and very little outdoor stock is to be had except Delphiniums, Phlox, Gaillardia and some few Gladioli. There are still good Roses offered especially Ophelia and perhaps they will continue coming during July. Carnations are small but had a good demand on account of the scarcity of all other kinds of stock.

Prices have been somewhat better than for several weeks. Lilies are arriving in large quantities and command good prices. Gladioli are only seen in limited quantities and sell at $10 and $12 per 100. Valley sold much better than at any time during June. There are some Asters on the market but they are small. They also sell well.

Jottings

M. R. Morgan, a prominent grower in this section has accepted a position with H. Weber & Son Co., Oakland, Md.

Louis Green, representing the Garland Co., of Cleveland, O. called on the local florists.

Earl Tipton for some years with the A. W. Smith Co. but of late with Penn the florist of Boston has accepted a position with the McCallum Co.

Dave Hill had a letter from his brother stating he has arrived safely in France.

N. McC.

Albany, N. Y.

The next meeting of the Albany Florists' Club will be held at Frederick Goldring's at Font Grove. Once each year the club meets with Mr. Goldring, who is a former president. It is expected that the meeting will be a sort of an outing, but important business will also be taken up. The trip will be made in automobiles. The club will hold regular monthly meetings all Summer.

Charles Ford of Philadelphia, who has a large flower trade in this section of the State, was recently elected a member of the club.

William C. Gloeckner, of State st. worked hard to help make the war chest fund a success. He has also been active in the Thrift Stamp campaign.

Albany florists report that business for this season of the year is better than it was at this time last year. All are helping to make the Thrift Stamp drive a success.

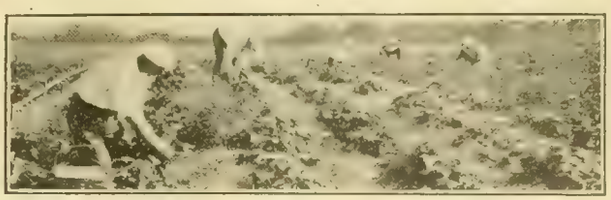
Mrs. Hazeltine has moved into her new place on Central ave. and has been carrying on an advertising campaign in the Albany papers.

Byron Holmes, of the firm of Holmes Bros. will go on a two week's vacation to Lake Champlain, making the trip by motor. Mrs. Holmes and their daughter will accompany him.—RAY I. BOKER.

"Fine fruit is the most perfect union of the useful and the beautiful that the earth knows. Trees full of soft foliage; blossoms fresh with spring beauty; and, finally—fruit, rich, bloom-dusted, melting and luscious—such are the treasures of the orchard and the garden, temptingly offered to every landholder in this bright and sunny, though temperate climate."—DOWNING, Fruits and Fruit Trees of America.

The Home Fruit Grower

By PROF. M.G. KAINS



A CLEAR, simple, practical and comprehensive volume for the amateur who seeks to grow high quality fruits for home needs, whether to eat out of hand as dessert, or to put up in some culinary way.

The author was particularly well fitted to write this book, having been reared in just such a fruit plantation, and in a village where for more than half a century the leading hobby has been high quality fruit growing for family use. With this standard of excellence he has united the best modern methods of securing choice specimens—methods little practised, or even unknown, in his boyhood days—tillage, spraying, thinning, fertilizing, cover cropping, preventing frost injuries, low heading, rational pruning—each simple in itself and each conducive to the production of an abundance of the best fruit.

Among the general topics discussed are:

Choosing Varieties	Cover Cropping
Buying Nursery Stock	Pruning
Season to Plant	Thinning
Preparation, Fertilization and Management of the Soil.	Spraying
	Harvesting Storing

Besides these general topics each fruit suitable to the home garden is discussed, in many cases with descriptions of a dozen, a score or even more varieties of conspicuous merit from the home plantation standpoint:

Apple	Plum	Dewberry	Juneberry
Pear	Cherry	Blackberry	Pawpaw
Quince	Apricot	Grape	Persimmon
Peach	Strawberry	Loquat	Kaki
Nectarine	Raspberry	Fig	Wineberry
		Pomegranate

There is also a chapter on dwarf fruit trees, cordon and espalier training, and a special chapter on the influence of home fruit growing in the education of public taste, the author herein showing that the amateur fruit plantation really deserves the credit for raising and maintaining national standards of excellence. This chapter should prove an inspiration to all who enjoy fruit and is alone worth the price of the book.

Heavily illustrated with teaching pictures. Paper, $1.00. Cloth, superior paper, $1.50. By mail, postpaid.

New England States

Providence, R. I.

All in all business during the month of July was very satisfactory and compared favorably with last year's figures; if the coming Summer months make as good a showing there will be no reason for complaint, either by the retailers or the wholesale growers.

Instead of an oversupply the market was on the short side the greater part of the month. On account of the abnormally cold weather lasting the greater part of June, Carnations are unusually good for this season. The same can be said of the young stock in the fields. Some growers are cutting better Sweet Peas from the houses now than was possible during the warm weather of last May.

Damage by Frost.

After a careful survey of the effects of the killing frost of June 20, I regret to say that the damage is much heavier than was first estimated.

John G. Jensen finds his early crop of Tomatoes an excellent investment; he is now picking about 200 lbs. daily. The wholesale prices last week was from 18c. to 25c. per lb.—J. C. L.

Bridgeport, Conn.

Most of the local florists have their 50 per cent allowance of coal and in most instances it is found that the quality is much higher than it was last year.

A number of the large firms have lost some of their valued employees either through the draft or because they have gone to work in the munition factories.

Weather conditions have not been favorable for the great number of war gardens; although the days have been warm the temperature at night has come pretty close to the frost mark.

The past week was a busy one for all with numerous bouquets for commencements.

John Reck, who was stationed at Camp Upton, has been transferred to Camp Johnson, Florida.

John Reck & Son of Main st. have planted one more house of Chrysanthemums than usual. The firm expects to move into temporary quarters, as the old building where the store is located will be torn down on account of the widening of John st. Plans, however, are already drawn for a fine new building on the old site; it will be ready for occupancy by Winter.

James Horan expects to occupy his new store on the corner of Bank and Main st. by Sept. 1. F. E. B.

Massachusetts Agricultural College

We now have eight members enlisted and under orders. Prof. F. A. Waugh, head of the division, is a captain in the Sanitary Corps, Division of Physical Reconstruction; Prof. F. A. C. Smith of the department of landscape gardening is a lieutenant in the Division of Personnel stationed in Florida; Prof. A. G. Hecht, head of the department of floriculture is in an officers' training camp at Camp Sherman, O.; C. E. Wildon, assistant in floriculture, is in a training camp in Virginia; R. A. Van Meter of the pomology department is at Camp Devens, Mass.; E. G. Wood of the pomology department enlisted early and is in France; W. C. Pauley of the landscape gardening department is in an officers' training camp in Ohio; Gilbert Watts, foreman in market gardening has enlisted in the Navy and expects to be called to the colors this month. Besides these Prof. W. D. Clark, head of the department of forestry, has been for several months in Boston employed with the State Fuel Administration, and Prof. A. O. Kilham has also been in Boston with the Food Administration. Other members of the staff, though not detached, are occupied constantly in war service, especially in food production and conservation. Prof. W. W. Chenoweth, of the department of horicultural manufactures, in particular is carrying on an important work throughout the State in the canning and drying of fruits and vegetables.

Potash vs. Phosphorus

About the greatest fertilizer experiment ever known since the world began is to be found in the plant food duel between England and Germany. We hear most about the fearful and bloody struggle in France, but on the farms at home a mighty contest, silent though it may be, is being fought out. Both England and Germany are fairly well supplied with nitrogen. Perhaps England has a little the advantage in her climate and in thousands of acres of unused rich sod. Germany will perhaps offset this in the thorough organization of her agricultural methods. England is short of potash, but can obtain needed supplies of phosphorus. Germany has more than she needs of potash, but is limited to small quantities of phosphorus. Thus the contest comes down to England with phosphorus against Germany with potash, and the war may be decided by the outcome of this duel rather than by the nitrogen used in explosives. Which element is the more necessary in the production of food—the life-giving phosphorus or the life-developing potash? Personally we would back phosphorus as the mightier and more necessary element of plant food!——Rural New Yorker.

:: SNIPPETS ::

It is announced in recent Commerce Reports that the Board of Agriculture for Scotland has decided to establish a station for the testing and registration of agricultural plants. It is proposed to lease for this purpose a suitable farm of 200 to 250 acres within easy reach of Edinburgh.

As many weeds are propagated only by seed, the Dept. of Agri. suggests that an enormous amount of labor, trouble and loss may be avoided by destroying weeds before the seed has developed sufficiently to germinate.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

John Reck, Bridgeport, Conn., who was stationed at Camp Upton, has been transferred to Camp Johnson, Florida.

R. E. Mapes of Knoxville, Tenn., the efficient bookkeeper of Baum's "Home of Flowers," has been called to the Colors, and left for Camp Gordon June 25.

M. W. Wilson of Lakewood, O., has enlisted in the heavy artillery of the U. S. Army and left for camp on June 26.

Schuyler Arnold, son of Geo. Arnold, the latter manager of the Glenwood Beach Gardens, Ensenore, N. Y., writes from France that he is a gardening for the railway engineers, of which he is a member. Private Schuyler is a member of the Rochester, N. Y. Florists' Ass'n.

Lieut. Chapin Legal of Canton, N. Y., has been in France for some time.

Fred B. McClunie, Hartford, Conn., has gone to Camp Meade.

Jos. Grimme, the popular buyer for R. D. Ruttle, Cincinnati, O., left June 27 for an army training camp.

Harry Gray, Cincinnati, O., who has been "over there" for some time is now a sergeant in the Forestry Division of the Engineer's Corps.

Andrew Shoemaker, of the J. Chas. McCullough Sons Co., Cincinnati, O., and Chas. H. Hoffmeister have enrolled in the military training course at the University of Cincinnati.

W. H. Huffman, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, has joined the colors and expects to leave this week for the training camp.

Fritz Bahr Jr., son of Fritz Bahr the latter on THE EXCHANGE staff, is home on a furlough from a camp in California, where he has been stationed.

Francis J. Robbins, lately with Gude Bros. Co., of Washington, D. C., is soon to report for duty with the Medical Corps at Camp Oglethorpe, Ga.

George Gouldman, formerly with the Louise Flower Shop, and Victor M. Fortwengler, formerly with the Washington Floral Co., Washington, D. C., have gone to Paris Island, S. C., for initial training in the Marine Corps.

The three brothers of J. Harper Hetherington, manager of the Washington Floral Co., Washington, D. C., have arrived in France and are preparing to go into action with the U. S. Army.

Corporal Frank E. Hurley, a former employee of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, Mass., who was decorated with the French Croix de Guerre last March, has been cited to receive the American War Cross.

J. E. Blocksidge, Arthur W. Birkaier and Paul A. Eisenhardt are recent members of the Gardeners and Florists' Club of Boston, Mass., to join the Colors.

William H. Elliott's service flag has 11 stars for employees who went from his Brighton and Madbury (Mass.) establishments. Two of these have been killed in action.

Wm. Gray, secretary American Sweet Pea Society, in his report mentions that the following members are now in the service of the country: Dr. J. H. Franklin, Henry Gaut, Joseph J. Lane.

A Floral Message from a Florist Soldier

Nelson Coon, son of Elmer Coon, florist, Rhinebeck, N. Y., who is with the 417th Aero Squadron abroad and whose letter was recently published in THE EXCHANGE describing English rural scenes sends another message reading: "English floral life is wonderful. Kew Gardens are past description. I hope that many of our florist soldiers have the chance to see these things."

British Horticulturists Will Welcome Our Soldiers

A very large number of American horticulturists are now with the colours in England or France. The Horticultural Trade Journal and its readers will be pleased to get in touch with them as opportunities occur. Among the latest to sail with their companies are Sergeant John Earl and Corporal Douglas Earl, sons of Howard M. Earl, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia. Howard M. Earl frequently visited Europe in pre-war days, and from his many friends in England and France, his sons may be sure of a hearty welcome. [The foregoing invitation is extended by the publishers of the Horticultural Trade Journal, the Hortus Printing Works, Burnley, Lancashire, England.—Ed.]

Handy Pamphlet on Garden Pests

Bulletin of the Pennsylvania Dept. of Agri., Harrisburg, Pa., Vol. 1, No. 3, May, 1918, entitled "A Handbook of Common Garden Pests" is a useful pamphlet, intended for the amateur. It is convenient in size and the language is concise and clear. Descriptions are given, with illustrations, and methods of control of the principal insect pests and plant diseases that attack vegetables.

Practical Landscape Gardening

ROBT. B. CRIDLAND

Never has any technical book been so heartily appreciated by florists and nurserymen. Read what W. F. Webb of the Guaranty Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y., said of it:

"I have looked this book through carefully and it seems to me that it fills a long felt want which our salesmen would appreciate. While it is true that not all nursery salesmen may be able to grasp the essence of this book, still it is the exceptional men who really do want to learn what there is to landscape gardening and who lay the foundations to our business. I would like to be able to furnish every man on my force with one of these books. It is the best book on the subject I have ever seen and I try to keep familiar with all the literature published on landscape gardening."

Second Edition Just Fresh From Our Presses

Magnificently illustrated with 91 photographic reproductions—pictures which teach—67 sketches and 33 plans with planting keys. The book is not only at your command for the information desired, but it is as well a splendid book to interest your customers in. It encourages them to buy your products, for they feel they must emulate at least some of the good landscape features they see scattered so freely throughout its 266 pages. NURSERY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN—President, J. R. MAYHEW, Waxahachie, Texas; Vice-President, J. EDWARD MOON, Morrisville, Pa.; Treasurer, J. W. HILL, Des Moines, Iowa; Secretary, CURTIS NYE SMITH, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass. Next Annual Convention to be held in Chicago

The Choice of a Hedge Plant

This is a question as important to the home grounds as the selection of the right tree for the lawn or the correct paper for the wall of the house.

Now that the Winter of 1918 is over, we can look around and see the extent of the damage, and we find the much used and abused hedge plant "California Privet" has again been smitten in a less or more degree, varying according to the situation as much perhaps as to latitude.

In points adjacent to Philadelphia some hedges have been so badly injured on the north side as to make them quite unsightly for some months to come. In such cases the best treatment was to cut them down to a point near the ground to insure having a good firm base again. In more northern sections of Pennsylvania, hedges of this plant have been killed to the ground line. At Huntingdon, Pa., a few weeks of Winter had completely annulled the work of years.

So we see how important it is to choose aright, and for the nurserymen and florists to advise aright, when such questions of permanency arise.

Our observation of hedge plants for cold latitudes leads us to invariably advise the use of the Japanese Barberry (Berberis Thunbergii) which has up to date held its own in the most severe Winter. This in itself should be the deciding factor, but there are other points in its favor which will surely appeal to the reasoning mind, namely, reduction of labor in the upkeep and a higher decorative value.

As to the first point, we all know that a Privet hedge should be clipped thrice a season at least to have it possess that degree of trimness much desired, and where one has several hundred feet of hedge this means labor and expense in compound measure.

The Barberry, on the other hand, need little or no trimming for the first two years, even where it may be necessary to maintain a low hedge and, where a good defensive hedge is desired, no pruning will be necessary except to maintain a uniform height; thus it is seen that the difference in the initial cost of the plants is more than equalized the first year in the cutting down of the labor expense, which, in these days, is an item which cannot be easily ignored.

Probably it is a question of individual taste when it comes to a comparison of decorative value. Some folks we meet would prefer the trim green wall of the Privet, while others favor more the flowing graceful habit of the Barberry which, in addition to the neatness of its foliage, produce a Winter decoration of coral red berry, not surpassed by any other of the innumerable deciduous shrubs.

Happily there is wide enough scope in this country of ours to admit of all kind of hedges. We may go westward to Oregon and see hedges of glossy evergreen Holly. We may go southward to Florida and see hedges of Hibiscus, of Biota, or of the "Mock Orange of the South," Prunus caroliniana and other broad-leaved evergreen shrubs of a semi-tropical nature.

If we travel northward and eastward from these two points, we shall find hedges of Box, evergreen Euonymus, Amoor Privet, Arbovitæ, Hemlock and many other deciduous and evergreen plants in quantity, quality and hardiness to satisfy the most fastidious.

It is all summed up, after all, in selecting wisely that which is known from experience to be best fitted to the climatic conditions wherein the plant is wanted as a permanent feature. EDWIN MATTHEWS.

Retrospective View of the Chestnut Tree Blight

It has been well said that out of all great troubles, catastrophes and tribulations has come some lasting good. Whether this be applicable in any great degree to the ravages of that dread disease among our native Chestnut trees which resulted in the death of tens of thousands of them throughout the country is an open question. During the period when the epidemic was at its height and when each year added to the number of noble trees slain we were all agreed that it was a national calamity.

Taking a retrospective look of it at the present time, we cannot help but see some compensation, at least it has to our way of thinking an expiatory viewpoint. This was brought forcibly home to us during the Winter just passed, which, on account of its severity and the shortage of coal in many greatly congested centers, caused much suffering among the populace. Wood for fuel was resorted to in a large measure. Hardwood of any variety or description was in demand at unheard of prices but the bulk of the wood supplied was that of our native Chestnut, Castanea americana, procured principally by nurserymen and foresters from woodlands which had been ravaged in a more or less degree by the Chestnut blight of a few years previous. While we all appreciate the fact that wood is not a satisfactory substitute for coal to the florist and householder, it undoubtedly relieved what was at least an embarrassing situation and greatly helped matters for all concerned.

This coming Winter we shall have to face conditions which may baffle the most resourceful but the fact that we know something of what is before us and are preparing for it in various ways will help us to meet and overcome the difficulties.

One important step which we think should be taken this Summer is the clearing of woodlands of all dead and dying trees. As one travels through the wooded areas at this season of the year it is too common a sight to see beautiful woodlands marred by the presence of numerous dead trees. These, standing out gaunt and leafless among the wealth of foliage displayed by their fellows, are a most depressing sight and it should be the duty of every owner of a woodland to have them taken down and the wood sold or held for a good purpose. The next step should be the cleaning out of all dead and congested wood, and so ensure the continued life and health of the living trees.

Another most important duty is the planting of sufficient young trees in all cleared areas to replace those removed and so preserve the balance of the trees in the land. Let us be as wise as our enemies in this respect—"For every tree felled, plant two in its place."

The wealth of a country lies no less in the living products of the earth's surface than in the minerals which come from its depth. As a matter of fact, the former must take precedence when it is remembered that all life sustaining food products on which the human race is dependent comes directly or indirectly from the soil. Even the very coal which forms one of the chief industries of the world today, and which is causing us serious thought for our Winter work, is but a mineralized form of a vegetation that once beautified the earth's surface.

This in itself is surely a most complete answer to those folks who would have us believe with them that the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers is a non-essential. In contradiction of this false impression, we should rather copy Divine forethought and see to it that all denuded areas which are not wanted for other essentials are well planted with trees that, while maturing, serve a good purpose, and which eventually realize high values among economics.

We all must deplore the ofttimes senseless devastation of trees and plants by real estate operators in their preparation of home sites, and can only wish that more thought were given to the preservation of the trees which for many years had been a blessing to the surroundings.

Happily, the planting of trees and other plants is now a recognized part of home building with all up-to-date promoters of real estate, so that in a few years the first loss is practically replaced with flourishing young trees on lawn and street. These not only add to the intrinsic value of the property but afford health to the community.

Hedge of Berberis Thunbergii

The Hop Hornbeam

The Ironwood or Hop Hornbeam, as Ostrya virginica is commonly called, is not generally regarded as an ornamental tree, yet to see a specimen well laden in June with pendulous "Hops," about 2in. long, is to admire it. One might be excused for mistaking these Hops for flowers at a distance, for the effect is not unlike that of the drooping racemes of a small European Bird Cherry. In habit of growth the Ostrya resembles the Hornbeams (Carpinus) and in foliage, too, for that matter; particularly the European species, C. betulus. The leaf also suggests the Sweet Birch (Betula lenta); a "family resemblance" it might well be termed for these three—Ostrya, Carpinus and Betula—with Alnus (Alder) constitute the Birch family.

As a cover plant for forest planting Ostrya is well suited and especially so for a woodland screen where all too frequently large growing trees are used exclusively, with the result that after a few years they lose their lower branches. Thus they remain a "screen" only as to their tops, emphasizing the need of bushy, low growing trees to attain the desired result. Another use which suggests itself is in connection with the home grounds situated in the mountains or near wooded areas where native plants are appropriate and in harmony with the surroundings. Seed germinates the year following the sowing. SAMUEL NEWMAN BAXTER.

Over and above all the first duty of the florist is to obtain physical possession without delay of his full allowance of coal

The Forty Ton Coal Proposition

Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F. and O. H., reports that the proposition to allow the florist who does not use over 40 tons of coal to obtain his full 100 per cent. quota, has passed the Fuel Administration, and is now in the Legal Department, and until this latter acts the order cannot go out. It is expected to be issued any day.

It would be well, therefore, for florists coming under the 40-ton proposition to make plans for their allotment of coal on a basis of 100 per cent. supply, so that just as quickly as the ruling is officially passed their allotment of coal will be ready for delivery, meantime housing the 50 per cent. allowance.

Steam Power Plants to be Investigated

As recently reported in these columns, the Fuel Administration has appointed engineers to make a survey of the situation with a view of inspecting every power plant in the country, and classifying and rating each plant based upon the thoroughness with which the owners conform to Government recommendations. It is hoped by this new line of endeavor to save 20,000,000 tons of coal through the correct operation of steam power plants without any radical change in equipment. This investigation we understand will include plants of florists using steam.

Ways and Means Co-operation Sought

If florist-growers, especially those possessing medium sized and small establishments, would write us for publication their plans to carry on this Fall and Winter, we believe this general discussion of ways and means—coming as it should from all parts of the United States—would help many to solve the problems now confronting them as to what to grow, how much glass to shut off to conserve coal, how to overcome the loss of men and the hundred and one other questions daily confronting the trade. The use of labor saving devices under labor shortage conditions will, no doubt, assume greater importance than ever,and a description of all such as are found of value would confer much benefit on the trade by telling them how to accomplish by mechanical methods many things heretofore done by hand.

Particularly interesting and valuable would be the story of the measures taken to make the allowance of fuel yield the utmost of returns; discoveries regarding savings in coal through improved mechanical appliances, also through raising stock under lower temperatures.

It will make interesting reading to learn the prevailing price of coal in different sections of the country; also of labor as, for instance, a letter from Portland, Ore., tells us that in that city unskilled labor is costing $4 a day.

It looks now as though the local grower who retails his own stock will be able to sell all he can raise. When it comes to determining just what to handle, the grower will have to look into the wants of his particular class of trade and adapt himself as far as possible to meet the expected requirements of that trade, so that in planning to shut off a part of his glass he will be able to bring this about with best advantage to himself.

Patriotism makes varied calls on all of us today. We do not believe it would be far out of line to class the co-operation we are calling for as the patriotic duty of all in the trade in a position to help a brother to overcome conditions brought about through restrictions imposed due to the war.

Importation of Asiatic Labor

At the recent Chicago convention of the American Seed Trade Association, a strong plea for Asiatic laborers was made to the Secretary of Agriculture and the Food Administration of the United States, pointing out that France and England had borrowed laborers for the period of the war from our Allies in Asia, and that same could be done in this country without injury to any American and with benefit to all. To the seedsmen it appears to be not a question now of producing cheap or dearly, but the question of producing or not producing the seeds which the world demands.

At this juncture we are not prepared to take sides for or against the importation of Asiatics, presumably Chinese. The actual necessity for this labor should first be proved by a thorough investigation made through federal sources. If it is found to be the case that we need labor in quantity, there need be no alarm felt at aliens entering the country, provided necessary steps are taken in advance to return them when their services are no longer of requirement.

American commissioners at Chinese ports could readily handle the details on that side, and in this country special organizations (bonding companies) approved by the government could act for the planters. Labor could be secured for a term not to exceed six months after peace is declared. The bonding companies would act as intermediaries between the government and the planters; would pay passage both ways; would remit to laborer's family in China so much a month; would agree to return laborer's body should he die in this country before his term had expired; would pay laborer so much per month; would guarantee medical attention, proper housing, food and treatment and, finally, would be bound, under heavy penalties, to return laborer to China when his term was up. We suggest handling this labor through bonding companies as it would be simpler for the government to deal with them than with the individual planter.

Great Britain has had for decades a system of supplying coolies from India to planters in Ceylon, Mauritius and other points, which works out somewhat on the lines indicated, and satisfactorily. In this instance, the Indian government deals directly with the planters to whom the men are sent.

People who are acquainted with the relative value of the Chinaman as against the Mexican will undoubtedly prefer the former. One of our metropolitan dailies speaking of this recently said "the Mexican is quite as much of an 'extraneous' person, as foreign in character to ourselves, as the Chinaman, and certainly far less efficient as a worker. And once here it will be impossible to get rid of him. If we must bring in alien help, why not get the best?"

Conventions that Produced Business Betterment

Two conventions, one immediately following the other, and both held in Chicago, have recently adjourned. The first, that of the National Seedsmen, the second that of the National Nurserymen. The lengthy accounts we have given indicate their importance. The next national convention is to be that of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, at St. Louis, opening the third Tuesday in August. It is to be hoped that a program will be offered dealing with present day conditions, which will prove equally effective to the men in that profession, and that representatives from every state will feel it their bounden duty to be present.

The seedsmen have clarified their situation greatly but as much of their proceedings are still held in camera, the complete story cannot be told.

Our columns this week give in concise form much of the work of the National Nurserymen. This association, taking its cue from the S A. F. and O. H., is now working on a plan of national advertising; it is printing books for distribution to its members in the endeavor to promote their advertising; it is publishing a real trade directory; it is enlarging its official code of standardized plant names, has set its foot down on senseless competition and, in many other ways, is showing an alertness and business acumen that recommends itself highly to contemporary organizations.

If the war has brought us temporary trouble, the handwriting is already on the wall pointing the way to an unexampled prosperity in the near future for, paradoxical as it may sound to some in deep waters at the present moment, this future is rosy with promise.

Indications, too, are multiplying thus early in the day that the semi-panic which struck the florists and their allied industries but a few weeks ago will shortly be a thing of the past This branch of horticulture is beginning to realize that its case is not half so bad as it might be and that many of the evils it had feared are just going to turn out blessings in disguise.

The St. Louis Convention

Judging from the reports received from many parts of the country, a more than ordinary interest attaches to the preparations now in progress for the 34th annual convention of the society, which is to be held in St. Louis, Aug. 20, 21 and 22. A number have already reserved space in the trade exhibition and it is fully expected that this feature of the convention will be as complete as ever. The geographical position of St. Louis makes the city an ideal choice for convention purposes, in fact, it is the hub of a very extended circle of trade area. Moolah Temple, where the convention is to be held, is a most desirable building for the great service expected of it by the society. The facilities for a handsome staging of the trade exhibition are all that could be wished for, and, as the official plan shows, there will be no necessity for crowding, there being ample aisle room.

Vice-president Bourdet and the secretary are now working on the official program, which will go out to members about 30 days prior to the convention. The subject matter of this schedule of events will this year be most important. Considerable time will be set apart for discussion of the reports of the publicity committee and the finance publicity committee; indeed the whole question of publicity for flowers will be gone into at length, and one or two notable publicity experts will, it is expected, present their views and comments upon the work of the society so far accomplished. The coal situation, too, will be discussed from all standpoints and much information will be evolved from a full and complete presentation of conditions as they are affecting our members in different sections. It is expected that a gentleman competent to speak with authority on fuel matters will be present, and that much enlightenment will result, upon details which at present are vexing, to say the least.

The secretary reports a large influx of members from various sections; in fact, never before have new members flocked in such numbers to the standard of the society. The good work which the organization has successfully carried out, and the secretary's personal efforts, are, of course, responsible in great measure for this.

National Publicity Campaign

In response to the wishes of Chairman Henry Penn of the publicity committee, and Chairman George Asmus of the publicity finance committee, President C. H. Totty called a meeting for a conference of these officials with the secretary and president to take place at the Iroquois Hotel, Buffalo, on Saturday, June 22. It was considered inadvisable to summon the whole committee membership at this time, owing to the great mileage expense that would be incurred. The conference was largely for the purpose of reviewing the campaign work for the past five months, and arranging data which would enable the chairmen to make an intelligent report at the forthcoming convention of the society in St. Louis. Buffalo was chosen as the place of meeting for the reason that it was a central point, and the secretary was already there in the course of his western trip. S. A. Anderson of Buffalo was present as a resident committeeman, and W. J. Palmer of Buffalo attended by invitation. The secretary submitted a report showing what he had accomplished through the trips so far made, and the report, meeting with hearty approval, he was instructed to continue the work of visiting the trade until further notice. Matters of great importance in connection with the campaign were discussed, but definite action was deferred until such time as a general meeting of the committees could be arranged, when the individual views of the members could be obtained upon various phases of the work, and their votes recorded upon action to be taken.

The secretary in his report made feeling reference to the very many courtesies extended to him by the trade in the different cities visited up to the time he reached Buffalo; Bridgeport, New Haven and Hartford, Conn.; Providence and Pawtucket, R. I.; Boston, Mass.; Albany, Troy, Schenectady, Utica, Syracuse, Barnard, Irondequoit, Rochester and Buffalo, N. Y. With the assistance cheerfully rendered him his work was greatly facilitated and his time conserved to a considerable extent. Later in Detroit, he received material assistance from Philip Breitmeyer, Albert Pochelon and Robert M. Rahaley, the last gentleman devoting practically his entire time to the work during the period of the visit. Besides substantially increasing the publicity fund, these trips have resulted in large and important additions to the membership roll of the S. A. F. and O. H. They have provided opportunities not otherwise obtainable for exploiting the work of the society and establishing the fact of its great service to the florist industry.

The fact of the great benefit derived from the publicity campaign is becoming clearly established, and florists who have not already subscribed need no longer hesitate to do so. It is only by generally expressed interest on the part of those the work is to help that the campaign can continue. This interest is of the dollars and cents kind, something that can be exchanged for the publicity we are after. The risk of exploitation has already been taken, and doubt as to satisfactory results need no longer exist. Help to make this a whole-hearted movement; few florists are too poor to give at least a little assistance. "Flowerless days" are not yet on the calendar, nor will they ever be if this campaign is rightfully supported. Without this effort to keep flowers constantly in the public mind the future might be dark for the florist's trade. There is hardly a day when the promotion bureau is not called upon to combat some misinformation or misguided prejudice regarding the use of flowers, and it behooves everyone in the business, no matter what his standing, to bolster up the work of the publicity committees with a contribution to the publicity campaign fund.

Representation at the St. Louis Convention

From Charles H. Totty, President S. A. F. and O. H.

The convention of the S. A. F. and O. H. is rapidly drawing near and it has been suggested to me that on account of the troubled condition as well as the increased railroad rates the attendance will be small from the Eastern States. This may be so and yet, in view of the importance of the convention this year, I shall regret it if we do not have a large attendance.

Every florist who reads the trade papers must realize the S. A. F. has had a very busy season in his interest. Our Washington representative, Wm. F. Gude, in particular, has had to spend practically all of his time between the coal question, the cutting off of imports and other momentous questions. Under these circumstances it is not fair for Mr. Florist to stay at home and let the faithful "few" bear the brunt of the battle all of the time.

It has been suggested that florists' and gardeners' clubs combine their interests and send two or more delegates to the convention. This, I am not in favor of unless it is shown that, failing this, some particular section will not be represented at all. In an organization such as ours, every member has an equal voice and vote on the floor and should, if possible, go to the convention to exercise it, but let every section be represented by delegates if no other way seems available.

The S. A. F. has done and is doing a great work for the florists in Washington and through its publicity campaign at this time. What other organization has ever inaugurated a publicity campaign and gotten the publicity we have received through the splendid work of our committee for the small amount of money invested? It behooves every florist in the country, if he has a spark of pride in his business and makeup, to at least become a member of the S. A. F., and yet, strange to say, there are many men who are not on our membership roll. This should be remedied as soon as possible.

When our representative speaks in Washington he should know that the florists all over the country are back of him and that he is speaking in their behalf. Considering the membership fee is only $5, and the annual dues $3, it is a disgrace to the profession that we cannot treble our membership.

One man wrote me that he was glad to belong to the S. A. F. and O. H., but always felt it was an exclusive affair and only open to a favored few. Once and for all, let everyone dispense with this idea and give a Long Pull, a Strong Pull and a Pull All Together, so that our organization may attain the status to which its importance entitles it.

Market Development Organization

This is the title of an incorporation which will deal with the publicity feature of the nursery business in the endeavor to promote the desire for trees and shrubs among our people. May success attend its efforts.

American Dahlia Society

Special Prizes Offered

The list of special prizes offered by the society for its annual exhibition, to be held under the auspices of the American Institute of the City of New York, in the Engineering Building, 25 W. 39th st., New York City, Sept. 24, 25 and 26, is now ready and is being mailed to members. In addition to the special prizes, the American Institute also offers many attractive prizes in cash.

List of Special Premiums

Finest and most meritorious display of Dahlias, any or all classes, grasses or other foliage allowed, quality and arrangement to count, 100 sq. ft. or more: 1, silver medal; 2, bronze medal; offered by Michell's Seed House, Philadelphia, Pa.

Finest general display of Dahlias, any or all types, arranged for effect, space 50 sq. ft.: 1, American Dahlia Society's silver medal; 2, the society's bronze medal.

Best display of six vases of collarette Dahlias, distinct varieties: 1, $6; 2, $4; offered by the Bessie Boston Dahlia Gardens, San Mateo, Cal.

Best bowl or vase decoration of Peony-flowered or decorative Dahlias, any foliage: 1, $6; 2, $4; offered by Peter Henderson & Co., New York City.

Best basket or hamper decoration of cactus Dahlias, any foliage: 1, $6; 2, $4; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.

Best table centerpiece of Dahlias for effect, any foliage; for amateurs and private gardeners only; silver cup offered by Stumpp & Walter Co., New York City.

Best decorative vase of ball-shaped double Dahlias: silver cup offered by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Best vase of any good stemmed decorative or cactus Dahlias: $5 offered by R. Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md.

Best vase of modern cactus Dahlias, 12 flowers, not less than four varieties: silver cup, offered by W. Atlee Burpee & Co.

Most meritorious exhibit in the show by any exhibitor, professional, private gardener or amateur: gold medal awarded by the Dahlia Society of California.

Collection of Dahlias, not over 25 vars., any or all types, exhibited by an amateur: 1, $6; 2, $4; offered by John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y.

Best unnamed tested seedling Dahlia, to be shown in one vase on long stems, subject to the rules of the society: $10 offered by the American Dahlia Society. If deemed worthy, the winner is to be called Dahlia J. Harrison Dick, in honor of our late secretary. No restriction as to the number of entries in this class by one exhibitor is to be made.

Best basket or hamper of Dahlia Newport Wonder: 1, $6; 2, $4; offered by Mrs. Mabel Voss Chapman, Westerly, R. I.

Best vase of any type of Dahlia, arranged for decorative effect; cut glass, value $5, offered by P. W. Popp, "Seven Oaks," Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Largest Dahlia flower in the show: cash prize, $1, offered by Geo. L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.

Smallest Dahlia flower in the show: cash prize $1, offered by Geo. L. Stillman.

Where only one prize is offered in any of the foregoing classes, the executive committee, may, at its discretion, award a second prize to any other exhibit which is deemed sufficiently meritorious.

The society's certificate of merit is offered for any seedling Dahlia novelty which is deemed distinct and sufficiently meritorious, and may be awarded by the adjudicating committee.

The silver and bronze medals of the Toronto Hort. Society will be awarded for the best seedling Dahlia, any type, shown by professional gardeners or commercial growers, to be awarded at the discretion of the adjudicating committee.

Members are advised that should the number of entries prove to be very large, it may be necessary to limit strictly the space allowed for any non-competitive display.

Fuel and Production

In reply to your recent letter regarding fuel consumption, I would suggest first, get all the coal you are entitled to under present restriction, as soon as possable to figure the cost of production when the subject The agent came around about a month ago about orders. He said; "Get your coal as soon as possible, we cannot promise anything for August. Mine coal was all delivered this year, last month." My heating plant is a steam plant, changed to hot water, for about 25,000 sq. ft. of glass or 15,000ft. of bench, which gives a temperature of 54 deg. to 56 deg. at night in moderate weather.

Regarding what to grow, I would suggest plants that don't require a higher temperature than 50 deg. to 56 deg. such as Cyclamen, Cinerarias, Primulas, Carnations, Snapdragons and Asters; there are also many others. If the stock is such that a temperature above mentioned will not do, then the only thing will be to cut out say one, two or three houses, as the case may be, and distribute the available heat over the rest of the range. Such a reduction will bring the proper results as far as prices are concerned and also would settle the labor question to a certain extent.

The complaint has always been that the florist cannot pay those prices. Now is the time to put this business on the basis it should have been years ago. The law of supply and demand will take care of the rest; and the cheap florist will shut up shop and go to the shipyard to make a living. How many of the florists are able to figure the cost of production when the subject of the cost per sq. ft. of bench space is brought up? Mighty few, I have found; it is Greek to most of them.

If I figure taxes, interest, depreciation, fuel, help, repairs, stock purchases, it costs me 35c per sq. ft. to produce stock. If I am not able to obtain returns above that amount per sq. ft. my ability as a grower is not worth much. A wholesaler should be able to produce 50c per sq. ft. and a florist who retails at least 75c per sq. ft. As soon as the florists get down to the actual figures many will find that some parts of their benches are not producing even 25c per sq. ft. Other classes of labor organize, but the florist thinks he has a secret which his neighbor does not possess and can "beat the latter to it." I say organize, talk over the situation and you will be the gainer in the end.

Tacoma, Wash. Henry Benthien.

Lilacs Not Winter Killed

One more word before we close the subject of Lilacs which was a feature of a recent issue. Mr. John Dunbar the author, tells us it has been a splendid year for Lilacs and for making notes. He said: "It is gratifying to know that no matter how cold the Winters may be, Lilacs do not suffer, and can be depended on to make a show."

Obituary

Mrs. Lena Zech

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Lena Zech, widow of the late John Zech, and mother of Aloys, Caroline and Leo Zech, and Mrs. J. S. Cunningham, at the age of 56 years, at the family home, 1837 Summerdale ave., Chicago. The deceased outlived her husband John Zech a little over three years, he having died April 29, 1915, and having been a prominent figure in the Chicago wholesale market for over 20 years. He organized the commission house of Zech & Mann which is still conducted under the efficient management of A. J. Zech. The funeral was held Tuesday, July 2, at St. Gregory's Church, with interment at St. Boniface Cemetery. There was an abundance of flowers and many representatives of the trade present.

Miscellaneous Reports

The committee on hail insurance, Frank Weber, chairman, had reached no satisfactory conclusion which enabled them to make a recommendation, and was therefore continued.

E. H. Smith, of York, Neb., read a paper on "The Retail Salesman," giving the following as ten very important qualifications of a desirable nursery salesman: Sobriety, health, honesty, confidence, management, neatness, system, optimism, industry and perseverance. Speaking of neatness, he said: "With one glance the prospect sizes the salesman up, and if he observes soiled clothing and a beard that needs mowing the chances are about one to five that he will be turned down."

Alvin E. Nelson, of Swain Nelson & Sons Co., Chicago, gave a talk on "Costs, Profits and Income Tax," and the subject was further discussed by Arthur H. Hill. Mr. Nelson referred to the fact that the firm of Ellwanger & Barry, which had always taken the very highest rank in the nursery business, had been dissolved and asked, "If Ellwanger & Barry's name and reputation are not worth enough to keep alive what is the chance for the rest of us?" A serious problem is here involved as to the extent to which the goodwill and reputation of a nursery firm can be capitalized, and the value that the organization would be to a prospective purchaser be established.

The chairman of the legislative committee, William Pitkin, being absent on government work, his report was filed with the secretary. A suggestion was contained in the report that a special committee be appointed to take up with the Bureau of Plant Industry the subject of the exclusion of plants and ornamentals. The report stated in part: "The Federal Horticultural Board announced a hearing in Washington on May 28, 1918, to consider the general question of exclusion of foreign nursery stock and particularly such items as are usually imported with balls of earth on the roots. Your committee, consisting of Messrs. Dayton, Meehan, J. M. Pitkin, Secretary Smith and your chairman, attended the hearing, and a committee representing the American Florist Association was also present. After the hearing your committee had an opportunity of discussing with Dr. Galloway of the Dept. of Agriculture and Dr. Orton of the Bureau of Plant Industry the suggestions made by us that the department should undertake to solve our problems. We are glad to say that both gentlemen expressed themselves in favor of such action, and felt that it was an entirely proper work for the department to undertake. Dr. Orton told us that the matter was already under consideration by Dr. Taylor, head of the Bureau of Plant Industry, and that the Department had certain land which he thought was well located and available for such experiments.

Committee on Resolutions

It was suggested that a page or pages of the annual report of the association be set apart as a Roll of Honor upon which would be inscribed the names, the home address, business connection and the army command of each member of this association, or the son or employee of the members.

E. R. Hicks presented the following resolution:

The Late Frank N. Meyer

To the memory of Frank N. Meyer, agricultural explorer of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, whose body was reported as found in the Yangtse Kiang River early in June. He had made collections of available material during the past ten years in China, Turkestan, Siberia, Korea and Japan, much of which is now being propagated and distributed by the Bureau of Plant Industry. Among others Mr. Meyer introduced new species and varieties of Pear, Quince, Grape, Jujube, Peach, Almond, Mulberry, Apple, Persian Walnut, Hazlenut, Rose, Pine, Juniper, Willow, Poplar, Rhododendron, Wheat, Buckwheat, Clover, Alfalfa, Beans, Cabbage, Radish, Melon and many other food plants. Much of this material is of great and immediate value to America. A large part will be of value as plant breeding material to procure hardier varieties of fruits, forest trees, grains and vegetables.

It is the duty of nurserymen to test, breed and introduce his plants. His work will be of great benefit to mankind in international understanding. His publications on fruit and nut orchards and Chinese agriculture teach us how to be happy though crowded. He had great courage, scientific knowledge, perseverance and power to see the human value of his discoveries.

Memorial services were held in honor of the following deceased members:

L. Van Lindley, Pomona, N. C.; Wick Hathaway, Madison, Wis.; Robert J. Pyle, West Grove, Pa.

Especial tribute was paid to the memory of Mr. Van Lindley, who was one of the oldest and best known members of the organization.

J. R. Mayhew

Elected President of the American Association of Nurserymen at Chicago, June 28, 1918

J. R. Mayhew, of Waxahachie, Tex., first vice-president of the association for 1917-18, who has also officiated as president since the former president, Major Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., volunteered his services to his country and is at present with the U. S. Army in France, was unanimously elected to the presidency of the association. Mr. Mayhew was born May 12, 1869, in Madison County, Ala., one of the greatest nursery districts in this country. He was educated in the public schools of Huntsville, Ala., and moved to Texas in 1891 where he engaged in the nursery business at both McKinney and Sherman until 1901, when he moved to Waxahachie and there established the Waxahachie Nursery Co., which was afterward incorporated. Since that time he has been president and business manager. Mr. Mayhew married in 1899; he is a member of the Presbyterian Church and ruling elder in the Waxahachie congregation, vice-chairman board of trustees, Trinity University, the Presbyterian college of Texas. He served the Texas Nurserymen's Association as president for three years. Was elected president of the Southern Association of Nurserymen in 1913.

The Entertainments

There was sufficient entertainment provided for the ladies who were not occupied in the business sessions. As for the nurserymen their motto was business throughout; all the meetings were fully attended and were of such an important nature as to cause them to be listened to with earnest attention by all present—during the first two days not more than one hour was allowed between the closing of the morning and the opening of the afternoon meeting. This was on account of the amount of business that had to come before the convention for its consideration.

On the opening day luncheon was served to the visiting ladies in the Narcissus room of Marshall Field & Co.'s store, after which the party was shown through the mammoth establishment under the direction of competent guides.

There was a change in the entertainment program from what was originally announced, the trip to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station being made on the opening day. Practically the same party that attended the Field luncheon made the trip to the Great Lakes, which is located on the shore of Lake Michigan about 40 miles north of Chicago. Here there are about 30,000 young men undergoing training for naval service. It was well worth the trip and highly enjoyed.

The annual banquet of the association was held on the evening of the opening day. In order that the members could feast and enjoy themselves at the same time the banquet was held in the Terrace Garden of the Morrison Hotel. This is one of the most popular amusement places in the city. The dining tables are set on a series of terraces at the base of which is the stage and ice rink combined. Tables were reserved for the nurserymen on the front terraces close to the stage and ice arena. One of the chief features of the entertainment was the skating carnival where graceful skaters disported themselves to the great amusement of the visitors. The entertainment committee was highly complimented on the arrangement, many of the visitors claiming that it was more enjoyable than a formal banquet with its customary after dinner speaking, generally dry and uninteresting, and that their meetings afforded all the necessary occasions for speaking.

On Thursday morning the visiting ladies were taken on a trip to the Art Institute, and after inspection of the vast store of masterpieces of art, sculpture and architecture, luncheon was served in its cafeteria. On Thursday afternoon, at the close of the business session, the ladies turned hostess for the time being and served refreshments in the meeting room.

According to the program a large number of the visitors attended in a body the play of "Friendly Enemies," at Wood's Theatre, within a block of the hotel.

The convention closed on Friday at the end of the morning and final session after which, by invitation, the nurserymen with their wives and visitors inspected the great merchandising institution of Sears, Roebuck and Co., located in a quiet residence district on the west side of the city. The great buildings of the plant extend over half a mile in length and are surrounded by gardens, athletic fields, tennis courts and baseball diamonds, covering in all an area of over 50 acres, and providing working quarters and recreation for many thousands.

On arrival the entire party was taken to one of the large restaurants for the employees where a substantial luncheon was served complimentary by the company. After luncheon special trained guides escorted the party through the enormous plant. A party of the nurserymen preferred, however, to inspect the grounds and the beauty of the outside surroundings. The sunken garden with its Lily pools, pergola, shrubs, etc., was of much interest, although the bedding plants had not as yet assumed the full beauty that a few more weeks of warm weather will give them. The outdoor Roses were well in bloom and Robt. Pyle, who was in the party, called attention to the salient features of many of the popular varieties. This visit brought the entertainment features of the convention to a close.

Trade Exhibit

The trade exhibit was the smallest in the history of the association. Slow and uncertain transportation was assigned as the cause. The extensive exhibition of tractors and other implements of cultivation scheduled for demonstrative work in one of the city parks was abandoned on account of transportation troubles. The exhibit in the parlors of the hotel adjoining the meeting rooms consisted principally of those of catalog publishing houses, there being four exhibitors in this line. The following comprises all exhibitors:

Isaac Hicks, Westbury, N. Y. Printed matter showing new ideas in advertising. Henry Hicks and Erdman Cain in charge.

Adolph Muller, De Kalb Nurseries, Norristown, Pa. Samples of Euonymus radicans vegetus or evergreen Bittersweet. A. Muller in charge.

J. Jenkins & Sons, Winona, Ohio. Seedling evergreens, shrubbery, and forest tree seedlings for lining out. E. M. Jenkins in charge.

J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C. A box of Peach pits with a hammer and other attachments for testing the pits. Everybody was invited, according to the sign, to "take a crack."

Thos. B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa. "Handy, Jr." tree calipers and "Budtie," a wood fiber that is predicted will take the place of Raffia and can also be used for tree bandages.

M. Greenbaum, New York. Plant tubs of various sizes. M. Greenbaum was present.

United Mills Company, Chicago. Sample twines and burlap bags. I. Katz in charge.

McFarland Publicity Service, Harrisburg, Pa. Sample catalogs and price lists for the trade. O. P. Beckley and J. Fred Rowe in charge.

A. T. De La Mare Co., Inc., New York. Samples of catalogs for nurserymen, seedsmen and florists, showing the De La Mare service to the trade in printing and color work. Edw. W. Dorey in charge.

Florists' Exchange, New York and Chicago. Sample copies of THE EXCHANGE and a complete line of horticultural books for the florist, nursery and landscape gardening trades. Jas. Morton, Western representative, in charge.

Savo Mfg. Co., Chicago. Flower and plant boxes for windows, porches and sun parlors.

Market Development Organization

Directors Choose Officers

The 16 directors of the Market Development plan, who were elected by the first subscribers to the fund by a mail ballot recently, and confirmed by the subscribers at a special meeting held during the convention, met and formed the permanent organization by electing an executive committee, composed of John Watson, Princeton, N. J.; Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.; C. C. Burr, Manchester, N. H.; E. C. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., and O. Joe Howard, Pomona, N. C. Mr. Watson was chosen temporary president and Mr. Pyle temporary secretary of the organization.

The other directors who had been chosen are: J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; Paul Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; F. L. Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; W. C. Harrison, Painesville, Ohio; T. B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; H. B. Chase, Chase, Ala.; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; W. F. Ilgenfritz, Monroe, Mich.; M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn.; George C. Roeding, Fresno, Cal., and C. C. Mayhew, Sherman, Tex.

Arranging for Incorporation

A committee consisting of J. Edward Moon, F. L. Atkins and C. C. Burr was appointed to provide for the incorporation of the Market Development organization, and plans are in the making for steadily pushing forward the work.

Convention Notes

E. G. Hill came up from Richmond, Ind., and brought with him a large bouquet of Columbia Roses that were placed on the speakers' stand; many of them made reference to it in their patriotic addresses.

So well did the visitors like Chicago that it was recommended that the next convention be held there. The same applies to the Seed Trade convention the week previous, so that it is possible both the seedsmen and nurserymen will meet again in Chicago next year.

The planting of trees to emphasize service stars in the various cities of the country, on some thoroughfare to be known as "Liberty Row," met with the approval of the local press.

Ellwanger & Barry Liquidate

The nursery trade generally will no doubt be surprised and sorry to learn that the Ellwanger & Barry Nursery Co. voted recently to liquidate its affairs and dissolve the company, this not at all on account of any financial difficulties, but for the reason that the growth of the city of Rochester has for years past been absorbing the lands that were used for nursery purposes and are worth far more as building property than for the growth of trees and shrubs. The stockholders interested are the heirs of Geo. Ellwanger and Patrick Barry the founders of the business, and whose history reads like a page out of a book of romance and adventure. We are told that many years ago these two young men made their way by canal boat to Rochester; after inspecting the soil and pronouncing it fair they determined to start a nursery there, at that time considered to be well to the West for such an enterprise.

Californian Nurserymen's Registration for the Coming Season

Nurserymen are now being Registered for the Years 1918-19

There are two innovations in the system this year. The license number is made in the form of a circular rubber stamp the size of a silver dollar. A print of this stamp should appear upon all shipping tags. While the old tags can be used, the new form should be stamped over the old to show re-registration. The advantage of the stamp is that it saves the waste of tags at the end of the year.

Another innovation is a card which is being mailed to all registrants requesting a classification of their business. This will greatly increase the value of the directory and be of assistance not only to the State Commission of Horticulture but also to the various nurserymen's associations. If the status of a registrant is known, i. e., whether he is a nurseryman, florist, orchardist or plant specialist, inspectors will find their work greatly reduced and simplified, and nurserymen who have occasion to use the directory will be able to discriminate between individuals doing a "back yard" business and regular nurserymen.

Guada Bean (?) in fruit

Optimism and Skepticism

When we launched our publicity campaign we heard more or less about whether this was the opportune time for a campaign and whether we hadn't better wait for a normal time, etc. Well, here we are a little over a year in the war and have not heard anything derogatory since our publicity movement was launched.

I have personally noted in many national campaign movements throughout the country where the Government War Office has interrupted their policies as outlined to the extent that a great deal of the work was curtailed as being detrimental to the Government needs.

How has our campaign worked out? Editorially, we have had compliment after compliment heaped upon us by editors who have said that our flowers were more beneficial during war times than at any other period, and just as necessary to the average mortal as anything under the sun. Shall we stand by and permit this branch of industry to go to seed for want of enthusiasm and courage and, of course, contributions, so essential to carry on and do our share so as to be able to do our duty in other war work activities in which so many of our florist brethren are so nobly interested? We are still pegging away for that $50,000 to help culminate our first campaign, and the florists of this great country of ours are not going to let it lag.

"Carry on" is the motto of the publicity campaign committee.

Do your best is all we ask. HENRY PENN.
Chairman National Publicity Committee.

The Guada Bean?

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

I have found THE EXCHANGE both instructive and interesting and have learned to take it as an authority. I was much interested in the paragraph on the Cardinal Climber in your March 30 issue; the Cardinal Climber flourishes here and is truly an acquisition. The long, tube-like blossoms are the happy hunting grounds of a race of long-billed honey eaters, which incidentally carry the pollen from one flower to another and freely fertilize the seed. We have no difficulty in germinating seed here, as thousands of self-sown plants come up every year.

The next paragraph, however, gave us a shock. "S. L." would be a clever hybridist if he succeeded in crossing the Guada (gourd) "Bean" with a "present type of Bean," as it is one of the Cucurbitæ. An enterprising amateur seedman introduced this plant here and although it has got acclimated sufficiently to grow in the warmer parts of this state it is a tropical plant. I doubt if it is a perennial either. I enclose the only cut I can come across of it.

The "Guada" has been sold here as a Bean and the ignorant still think it is one. A greater fraud still has followed on its success. A very long, hard-skinned gourd not approaching in quality a decent Summer Squash, or Vegetable Marrow, as English folks call it, has been called the Solomon Island Butter Bean, and largely confused with the Guada. The Guada cooked is better than a Cucumber, and is really liked by many.

We held off these two lines as long as we could, but as one after another of the reputable seedsmen began cataloging them, we gave them place this season, somewhat under protest. We did not, however, put them under Beans.

The seeds we enclose will emphasize the fact that they are not Beans. They could probably be grown under glass in your greenhouses and would be a curiosity.

Dundas, N. S. W., Australia. HERBERT J. RUMSEY.

As an instance of the economic value of some of the Gourds, Theodore Outerbridge of Sunnylands, Bermuda, somewhere around 1910 was presented by a perfect stranger with two seeds, "which," said he, "I think you will find have a value." One seed perished, the other lived and throve and, at the time of the writer's visit to Bermuda in 1914, its vines had taken possession of fences, tree branches and whatever else it could cling to, covering many square yards, presenting much the same appearance as in the picture of the Guada Bean we reproduce herewith, from Brisbane, (Queensland, Australia).

It proved to be an edible gourd, having a nutty flavor. To develop from its embryo to its full size, three feet in length, required but one week. People in Hamilton, Bermuda, were than paying 8c. a pound for this vegetable and each one weighed heavily. Local names given were Money Gourd and Kaffir Gourd. This gourd could be readily grown in Florida and California, and if this paragraph would bring to light to some reader the actual botanical name of this particular gourd, we would like to have it.

Subscriptions to Market Development Campaign at Nursery Convention

Never in the experience of nurserymen present had there been a time when the men representing this industry seemed more ready to co-operate in any effort that would redound to the benefit of the Association. The list herewith embraces the subscriptions pledged at the meeting in addition to those already made public, except that in some cases the amount set forth is an increase over the amount previously printed. The subscriptions noted, with one or two exceptions, are annual for five years.

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

A Plea for the Use of More Summer Flowers

Among those recommended for the purpose are Delphiniums, Sweet Peas, Coreopsis, Gypsophila, the Aster, Antirrhinum, Phlox, Canterbury Bells, Gladioli and Dahlia—JOSEPH H. SPERRY

THERE has always been a tendency among many retail florists to encourage their customers to buy in Summer such of the staple Winter flowers as can be to some extent obtained in Summer also, namely Roses, Carnations, Lilies, Lily of the Valley and orchids, or if "encourage" is too strong a word, at least not to try to discourage their extensive use, and not to promote as vigorously as they might the use of the outdoor grown distinctively Summer flowers. We do not by any means advocate that the retail florist should boycott such Roses, etc., as the growers send into the market in Summer, but rather that he should bring the outdoor grown Summer flowers to the fore-front.

From mid-June until Oct. 1 there is in the flower market a large selection of outdoor grown herbaceous perennial flowers, and not a few annuals, in many desirable shades of color and form which, in beauty and fragrance, rival the Rose, the Carnation and other staple greenhouse grown Winter flowers.

The Delphiniums (perennial Larkspurs) give stately blue flowers in several shades with whose beauty no other blue flower can at all compare. The several varieties of Delphinium belladonna, especially those in azure blue, and of D. chinense and the well-known D. formosum are among the best for florists' use. The annual Larkspurs, too, give us some pretty blue flowers. There are some white varieties also of both Delphiniums and annual Larkspurs, and some which bear double flowers, but the single varieties in the shades of blue are most attractive.

Among the Summer annuals Spencer Sweet Peas, grown in the open in June and July, give the florists flowers which, in beauty, rival the orchid, and whose shades and combinations of color show a wider range than any other flower, and whose delicate fragrance is exquisite.

The flowers of the perennial Coreopsis are of the richest golden yellow, and those of the perennial Gaillardia give flowers of crimson, orange and vermilion shades of color combined. If the retailer would present these and other Summer flowers in his store and window displays as carefully as he does Roses and orchids, they would meet with a far larger sale.

The perennial Gypsophila, both single and double, and also the annual varieties of this are as useful in making up bouquets of other flowers in Summer as Stevia is in Autumn and early Winter.

From mid-July until mid-September the annual Asters in their many shades of purple, red, pink and white can be used by the florist for almost any conceivable purpose. There are the formal Victoria types of these, the informal Comet types, and the narrow petaled King types, which give a considerable variation in form.

Antirrhinums (Snapdragon) grown in the open have a delicate fragrance and their flowers, especially in the pink shades, but also in yellow and white, though not on as long stems as those grown indoors, are pretty in small bouquets, corsages and basket work.

The perennial Phloxes, especially the white variety, Miss Lingard, and also Mme. Buchner, whose white flowers and trusses are very large, and the new variety Rose Queen, all deliciously sweet, should be used more freely, for, though the wide open flowers drop off, the many buds expand after the stems are placed in water, so that in effect it is a long keeper.

Canterbury Bells (Campanula medium) have uniquely shaped flowers, especially those whose bells or cups are furnished with saucers. These are effective in vases, as are also the long spikes of flowers of the persicifolia varieties of Campanula.

Where flowers on stiff stems can be used for general color effect, there are available several annuals, notably the plumed type of the gay Celosia, the big orange, and lemon yellow African Marigolds, and the giant flowered double Zinnias in their many colors and, if something is needed for a still larger effect, we have the Helianthus (Sunflower) both double and single.

Among Summer bulbous flowers the Gladioli are leaders. The newer varieties and some of the old, as well, offer a wide range of shades and combinations of shades of color, and even of the form of the flowers. It is a long season flower, too, continuing to bloom until frost. We need not make any plea for its use, a passing mention is enough, for it has already become one of the main stays of the florist in Summer.

In September and in October also, in sections where the frosts come late, the Dahlia is the leading flower. In its modern types and shades of color it is a splendid flower for the florists' use. This is especially true of many varieties of the decorative, the peony-flowered, the cacti and single classes of this flower.

We will say nothing for that "Queen of the Autumn," the Chrysanthemums, because they are mostly grown under glass, and it is our intention in this article to speak only of outdoor grown Summer flowers.

More and better Summer flowers are grown now than ever before, so that retail florists, having once established a good demand for these, may feel reasonably sure of their supply. May we not say again in closing that it is really due to the growers of good Summer flowers that the retail florists handle these just as carefully, and display them just as attractively in their salesrooms and shop windows as they do the greenhouse grown Winter flowers.

Creating a large demand for Summer flowers will do more than anything else, we feel, to help retail florists increase their Summer business.

Peonies help the Red Cross. See text

The Cornflower as a Gentleman's Boutonnière

A man who has worn the Cornflower as a boutonnière for a quarter of a century from the time it appears until the Winter comes around, gives the following reasons for his preference of the Cornflower as a boutonnière: "It is a gentleman's flower, as it harmonizes better with his clothing than any other. Most men wear blue or black or dark brown and quiet colors in their neckwear, and blue is quite in harmony. A man wearing a white flower looks as if he were laid out for burial. Pink or red swears at everything he wears, so blue is his color."

He denies that the Cornflower is the Kaiser's favorite flower or that it is the national flower of Germany, and says he wore a Cornflower boutonnière before the Kaiser ascended the throne and expects to wear it after he (the K—) shall have lost his hold on the Central Powers.

The accompanying illustration shows a very successful sale of Peonies for the Red Cross held on June 14, at Newport, R. I. The Peonies were donated by Thomas J. Gibson of 36 Washington sq., that city, who furnished all the flowers that the Red Cross could use. The flowers were sold at a table in front of Mr. Gibson's store. The sale aroused much interest. Mrs. R. Livingston Beeckman, wife of the Governor of the State, and other prominent people were interested and bought flowers to send to friends. Between 600 and 700 blooms were sold, netting $92.78, the difference between that sum and $100 being donated by Mr. Gibson, the full amount going to the Newport Chapter of the Red Cross.

Conditions in the cut flower business seem to be adjusting themselves to better prices even before the effect of the scarcity of fuel has made itself manifest, as from more than one city we receive word that stock is unusually scarce and all offers are being picked up at sight.

Removing Splinters

To remove a splinter from the hand, fill a wide-mouthed bottle nearly full of hot water; thrust the injured part over the mouth and press it slightly. The flesh will be drawn down, and shortly the splinter will be exposed under the action of the steam. This method, says Popular Mechanics, is far better than the common and dangerous practice of pricking the flesh with a pin or knife point. The usual antiseptic solution should be applied.

Probably florists and their workers suffer from splinters getting lodged in their hands as much or more so than other classes of industry, and the above suggestion may be considered worthy of a trial when next in trouble of this nature.

Six Months of Surprising Business at Toledo, O.

July is here, and florists are enjoying a breathing spell, which they are using to check up on the past six months of business, months in which it had been expected that the war would make heavy inroads on the demand for flowers which many people still regard as an out-and-out luxury. Florists who became depressed and economized too much on necessary improvements and cut their advertising found that it was a mistake to do this, because there was no let up in business; if anything, there was a substantial increase. Naturally, the bulk of the increase went to progressive florists who kept right on advertising. Beginning with St. Valentine's day, every holiday saw a great demand for flowers. The Spring planting season just completed was the best on record not only in quantity of stock sold but in better profits. Funeral work has been unusually heavy during these first six months and the grade of pieces ordered has been above the average. F. T. D. business, both incoming and outgoing, has increased. Naturally, war conditions are more difficult than those prevailing in times of peace; it is hard to obtain satisfactory help; costs are rising; coal is scarce; thus the situation calls for a high order of courage and a closer attention to eradicating the small leaks of business, cutting costs and obtaining a correct profit. Florists must learn to be better business men and merchandisers in the most modern sense of the word. The next few years will most certainly be a case of the survival of the fittest. F. M. S.

At the recent Spring meeting of the National Retail Dry Goods Ass'n, at Chicago, the matter of a national trade mark was brought up. The advantage of such a national trade mark, in protecting American merchants, was pointed out. This matter, together with other plans designed to prepare the American manufacturer and exporter for the struggle for world trade after the war, is now being worked out by the U. S. Dept. of Commerce

A Canteen "Somewhere Over There"

Flowers are a prominent feature of American Red Cross canteens at the front, according to the reports and pictures that are coming back. While the soldiers in the trenches are plentifully supplied with papers and magazines, the Red Cross realizes that flowers are rarely to be seen and, consequently, try always to have some at the canteens for their visiting soldiers to enjoy.

How the use of flowers came about is a pretty little story. At first, the canteens were strictly utilitarian. There were no flowers, no pictures; nothing but tables, chairs, counters and other necessary furniture. Red Cross workers got their first clue to the fondness of the French soldiers for flowers when they noticed that frequently, heavily laden though they might be and on a wearisome march, many of the men would stop to pick the tiniest of blossoms and would treasure them until they had withered away.

The accompanying illustration shows a canteen, "somewhere over there," within range of the guns and air raiders and, because of its very nature, one of the most tempting targets for the latter. E. A. D.

Production and Prices

Our correspondent at Kalamazoo makes some sensible comments in a recent newsletter from that city on the manner in which the growers ought to prepare for the future. In our opinion he hits the nail squarely on the head when he says that "Personally I think $1 for a dozen Carnations and from $2 to $3 per dozen for a good grade of Roses is all the average man can be expected to part with, and if we cannot produce the present varieties at somewhere near these prices the remedy should be to plant more freely of productive varieties which can be sold profitably at prices ordinary people can afford to pay."

Our correspondent's idea is that we grow the most productive pink, red, white and yellow Roses and Carnations now on the market, even if these are not of as high quality as other varieties of Roses and Carnations, and likewise of all other kinds of flowers of which some varieties are more productive than others. This does not mean to grow worthless varieties because they are extremely productive, but to grow the most productive of the reasonably good varieties of the several kinds of cut flowers.

Henry Penn, Chairman S. A. F. Publicity Committee, sends us the above form of Cheque, for the purpose of inducing florists, retailers and others, to use a similar idea in spreading the propaganda, SAY IT WITH FLOWERS. Mr. Penn says that he has for some time been searching for a model form of cheque for general use that would be applicable to all florists, and feels that this present one is worthy. We heartily endorse Mr. Penn's suggestion as not only a good method of spreading the propaganda, but because this form of cheque acts as a complete receipt for bills paid through the endorsement thereon of the payee, and further gives the payer uniformity in filing his receipts.

All of us may not agree with the selling figures just quoted, since they vary with conditions in different parts of the country. It is obvious, however, that if customers will not pay the prices that it is necessary to obtain for the usual stock in order to allow a fair profit to grower and retailer in the face of greatly increased costs, the only way to meet the situation is to grow such varieties as can be sold at a price acceptable to the customer, and yet come within the requirements as to cost of production and coal restrictions.

There are undoubtedly fashions in flowers as there are in other things, and the public can be educated to realize the merits of certain varieties not now on the market, but which may well take the place of those usually offered. This popularization may be done by suitable advertising and by showing the public how the substituted varieties can be attractively used to take the place of those generally produced.

In Fritz Bahr's notes in the "Week's Work" there may often be found valuable suggestions along these lines and much can undoubtedly be done through co-operation between retailers and growers, especially through the florists' clubs. It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the trade must carefully study the situation, plan intelligently, and co-operate willingly and heartily, so that every available means may be made use of to tide us over the difficulties which confront us.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

The demand during the past two weeks for cut flowers has been exceptionally good. There has been a steady demand for funeral work, although no very elaborate pieces have been sent out. There have also been a large number of small weddings, many of them calling for expensive flowers, such as orchids and Lily of the Valley. Counter trade has held up well, and flowers for the hospitals have had a brisk call, especially outdoor flowers. June has been a record month, for, although there have been no elaborate affairs, nor large funeral pieces, yet there has been a large number of small orders.

Outdoor flowers are prominent in all the leading flower shops, and take the place of greenhouse flowers, which are scarce. Roses are of good Summer quality, but are not over plentiful, some of the growers reporting that they are not cutting any. Orchids are entirely off crop in the local greenhouses, and Carnation blooms are exceedingly small in size and short in quantity. Easter Lilies are in fine crop, and attractive specimens are seen in the retail shops, both in potted plants and cut flowers.

Lily of the Valley is scarce. In outdoor flowers, Delphiniums are most conspicuous; these are of handsome proportions, and sell well. In many cases they are combined with Easter Lilies, thus making a striking combination. Shasta Daisies are at their best, and sell readily. Outdoor Snapdragons, although short-stemmed, sell well, especially for basket work. Sweet Peas are of excellent quality, for the outdoor variety. Gaillardias are appearing on the market, and Coreopsis, Feverfew, Bachelor Buttons, Zinnias, Centaurias, Gypsophila, and other smaller flowers sell on sight. Hollyhocks are used for their decorative effects in the flower stores. Colonial grass is used by one of the retailers in making up old-fashioned bouquets of the smaller outdoor flowers. In the plant line, although the variety is small the quality is excellent. Hydrangeas in pink, blue and white are offered; also excellent Easter Lilies and Begonias.

False Economy on Flowers

The writer on a recent visit to Detroit, Mich., was talking to one of the prominent retailers of that city who said, that his wealthy patrons were using the war as an excuse to economize on flowers, when such economy was not only unnecessary, but was also a great loss to themselves, in that they were deprived of the inspiration and pleasure which flowers furnish. This retailer stated, however, that this loss of trade among the wealthy was more than counterbalanced by the fact that the middle, or working classes, who were earning more money than ever before were spending it freely for flowers.

With The Colors

Among those who have recently joined the army are George A. Doswell, who enlisted and went to Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, O., on June 15, and Wiliam Branning, formerly with the Frank J. Knecht Co. who has gone to Valpariso University, Valpariso, Ind. to take a special three months' course in gas engine work, preparatory to being called. Several other florists who are in Class 1 expect to be called during July.

The florists, both retailers and wholesalers are donating flowers several times weekly, for sale at the outdoor socials that are being held here for the local Red Cross. Large sums have been realized.

The New Haven Floral Co., of which Henry Freese of the Freese Floral Co. is a member, is removing its stock from the Hale ave. greenhouses in this city, to the greenhouses at New Haven, Ind., and will use the latter place entirely for growing stock.

The representative of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Ill., called on the trade.

A heavy frost on the night of Saturday, June 22, did great damage to the crops in this vicinity, especially Corn, Tomato plants, and other garden truck.

D. B.

Cleveland, O.

The Cleveland Florists' Club will hold its annual outing on July 24.

We are in the midst of another warm wave and the high temperature is having the customary effect upon stock. Carnations are about done for and Roses are coming in partly open, particularly the Winter varieties. Good Easter Lilies are in weak supply, although there is a persisitent call for them. Receipts of outdoor Sweet Peas are liberal and of excellent quality but the best prices are $5 to $6 per 100. Garden stock is plentiful and is being much employed for window trimming and also for week-end sales. Such Summer Roses as Russell, Shawyer, My Maryland, Stanley and Double White Killarney are eagerly absorbed, the offerings, as usual being far beneath the daily requirements. Receipts in general are seasonably light and the market is well cleared up by the end of the day.

June Business

The consensus of reports from representative trade sources points to a slightly reduced volume of businesss for June, attributable to the absence of wedding decorations, the unprecedentedly small use of flowers at school commencements and the complete absorption of the public in patriotic activities. Throughout most of the month the weather was favorable and the quality of flowers correspondingly good. In spite of labor shortage greenhouse work progressed as usual, plantings of stock being heavier than ever.

The New Express Service

The merging of the major express companies into the American Railway Express Co, under Federal control, taking effect July 1, is a matter of importance to florists. A. C. White, former general agent of the American Express Co., is the Cleveland superintendent, assisted by J. N. Morris and Arthur Williams, former Adams and Wells-Fargo agents. These gentlemen know their business from A to Z and their working in harmony will result in materially increased efficiency. Outbound express is to be handled exclusively at the 26th st. depot and inbound at 38th st., all deliveries being made from the latter. Flowers and other perishable stock as formerly, will be billed at the offices in the various railway stations, in order to expedite movements, but supplies, accessories, etc., must be taken to the 38th st. depot for shipment. Pick-up service will be regular and will differ from former methods only in that one wagon instead of three, will call, and receipts entered in but one book.

Club Meeting

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held at the rooms in the Hollenden on July 1, with Pres. Carl Hagenberger in the chair. About 50 members were present. Attention centered largely about the discussion of a program prepared for the examination of subjects particularly vital at this time. Frank A. Friedley paid a glowing tribute to the club boys "over there" in his formal presentation of the service flag, bearing 14 stars, to the club. He recommended that stars be included for all trade members from greater Cleveland; as a result a motion was enacted electing them to honorary membership during the period of the war. H. P. Knoble spoke on the club's finances and advised the raising of the club dues from $4 to $10 a year, for florists and executives and $6 for employees. The recommendation called forth much discussion of a constructive nature.

F. C. W. Brown gave a brief talk on the new F. T. D. emblem supplemented by a strong appeal for the general support of that great organization. An excellent talk on present versus past trade conditions was given by Adam Graham, Sr. The remainder of the program was postponed till next meeting.

Frank Friedley, Richard Rolston and R. B. Bryden were appointed to handle the soldiers' fund and business pertaining thereto. July 24 was selected for the date of the annual club outing. Certificate of merit was awarded F. W. Ziechmann for a splendid seedling Amarylis named Pride of Cleveland. Letters were read from soldier members George Schaub and Philip Koellisch. Nominations of officers for the ensuing year will be held at the August meeting.

Notes

F. E. Bauers has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother, who died June 27.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hagenberger celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary June 25, calling upon Cleveland friends in the trade.

M. W. Wilson, the Lakewood Florist, is the latest member of the trade called to the Colors.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Russell celebrated the fifth anniversary of their wedding on July 1.

Frank Kocher, of the J. M. Gasser Co. is off on his annual vacation. J. M. L.

St. Paul, Minn.

Cut stock has met the demand, except Roses which are scarce and local growers are unable to meet the call. Carnations are also scarce but are not greatly in demand. Outdoor Sweet Peas are just beginning to come in; indoor Sweet Peas are deteriorating somewhat in quality; they sell for 75c. and a $1 per 100. Several weddings and funerals have cleared up much stock. In pot plants little is left excepts ferns and a little left-over bedding stock.

The Merriam Park Floral Co is building a new smoke stack of concrete, their steel stack having been blown down half way, last Winter.

The Como Park planting is looking at its best. It has been given a military character, being laid out in the form of cannons, etc. At the St. Paul Court House grounds a bed has been laid out in effective flag design, the plants used being Alternanthera, Echeveria and Coleus.

The Minnesota State Florists' Ass'n held a meeting on July 2 at Lyndale Park rose garden, with a lunch at Lake Harriet pavilion and a short trip afterward. E. C. T.

Gathered Here and There

William Feniger on Adams st., has sub-leased the eastern half of his store to a clothing firm.

Metz & Bateman are now located in their new store on Superior st., to which they moved from the Ohio building about two weeks ago. Extensive alterations are being made and when completed will give them greatly increased facilities. The large work room is arranged so that funeral designs can be loaded at a rear door.

Max Spanner is now located in the Ohio Building in the store formerly occupied by Metz & Bateman. He expects to be ready for business in his new location in about ten days.

Schramm Bros. have added a new refrigerator to their facilities as well as a new cash register. F. M. S.

Cincinnati, O.

The supply of Roses is weak; all that come into the wholesale houses clean up readily. Carnations have about reached an end for the season until the new crop comes. The Gladioli supply is limited; they sell well. A fair quantity of rubrum Lilies is available. Easter Lilies are not plentiful. Feverfew is meeting with a good market. Snapdragon sells fairly well. Other offerings include a few outdoor Sweet Peas, Delphiniums, Shasta Daisies and Coreopsis.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held Monday, July 8.

Miss Stella Bushman, formerly with the Jas. O'Malley store, passed away the early part of this week.

C. E. Critchell will close his store at 5 p.m. during the Summer months.

Miss Blythe Fidelis Monroe was recently appointed junior professor of soil technology at the University of California. She is said to be the first woman to occupy an office of this kind in the history of the University.

Lecture at Next Club Meeting

Dr. P. Gray, for some time head of the insecticide laboratory in the College of Agriculture, University of California at Berkeley, is to lecture before the Pacific Coast Hort. Society on the evening of July 6, on the subject of "The Possible Use of Chemicals in Weed Control."

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Pacific Coast Hort. Society held its monthly meeting and annual election on June 25, at the home of Mrs. H. Plath, Ocean View, San Francisco. The officers were re-elected as follows: Mrs. John Vallance, pres.; Mrs. H. Plath, vice-pres.; Mrs. John Gill, sec'y, and Miss Gladys Plath, treas. Mrs. Martin A. Poss, of San Mateo, was elected a member. The July meeting 's to be suspended, the next meeting will take place August 27, at the home of Mrs. John R. Walsh. J. R. W.

The Market

July 2. The relatively more active conditions which obtained in the wholesale flower market during last week and Monday of this week ended abruptly today, Tuesday. This is probably in a measure attributable to the fact that both school commencements and June weddings are over. At any rate, today stagnation reigns in the wholesale stores. The supply of flowers in general has not been large, but is now being increased daily by the heavier arrival of the distinctively Summer flowers and of Carnations from those greenhouses where the plants have not been thrown out.

The few receivers of what are known as Summer American Beauty report large arrivals and an abrupt decline in the demand for these. Special grade blooms are selling at from 8 to 25c. and other grades at corresponding prices. Hybrid tea Roses are in moderate supply and in general not of a very high quality. The demand for these is much less. The best blooms now arriving are selling at from 4c. to 6c. each, in general, with occasional small sales at 8c. No. 2 grade blooms are selling at from 75c. to $1 per 100. Indications are that there will be a further decline in prices at an early date.

The supply of Carnations at so late a date as this is rather large and the demand for them decidedly weak. They are selling at from 50c. to $1.50 per 100, with occasional small sales at $2. Cattleya orchids are in larger supply and the demand for these is less. Prices have declined to 50c. to 75c. each with occasional sales of very choice blooms at $1. There is a moderately large supply of both white and pink Lilies, the former meeting with a fair demand at from $6 to $8 and the latter at from $3 to $5 per 100. The small supply of Lily of the Valley is selling at from $2 to $6 per 100 with occasional sales of extra choice blooms at $8.

The present supply of miscellaneous flowers is large in quantity and affords an abundant opportunity for selection, since it comprehends such a variety of flowers. These Summer flowers are meeting with a fair demand at quoted prices. The demand for greens is small.

Summer conditions now prevail in the wholesale and retail flower stores of this city. A visit to the wholesale flower stores during what are usually the selling hours of the day will convince you of the small demand for flowers which the retailers are making upon the wholesalers and if you ask the retail florists when you meet them, or when you visit their stores, how business is and if they cannot give you a little story about some decoration which they have made for a social occasion, or a church and house decoration and a bouquet outfit for a wedding, the answer invariably is: "There is nothing doing." It would appear that the changes which the war has brought about in the florist's business and the usual smaller demand for flowers during the Summer would make this Summer in the flower stores a very quiet one indeed. The usual vacations have now begun, but the fact is that there are not so many workers left in the stores to take vacations as there were a year ago; the staff of employees has been for one reason and another reduced so much. The usual store renovations have now begun, but there is no inclination to make any expensive changes in the stores, or in their equipment.

New General Post Office

A matter of interest is the fact that the old post office building occupying the square near City Hall and Park Row, has lost its title of General Post Office and July 1 became merely one of the many sub-stations of the post office department. The beautiful new post office building at 31st st. and Eighth ave. assumes the designation of the New York General Post Office hereafter.

Frank Traendly of Traendly & Schenck, 436 6th ave., and family are now sojourning for several weeks on their Rowayton, Conn. farm.

We regret to learn that W. J. Stewart, editor of Horticulture, is ill and that his physicians have ordered him to remain at home for several weeks.

The first early Asters of the season were noted this week at the store of the United Cut Flower Co., 11 W. 28th st.

Clarence L. Slinn has moved across the street to his former quarters at 123 W. 28th st.

John Reynolds, salesman for Riedel & Meyer, 49 W. 28th st., is on a two weeks' vacation and Miss Mollie Boxer bookkeeper for the same firm, will start on a vacation of the same length on Saturday.

In spite of the relatively small supply of flowers now arriving in the market weekly contributions of these are still going on for distribution among the base hospitals in this city and vicinity. This work is certainly very worthy and commendable.

Where the 50% Restriction Doesn't Apply

Two gardens of many others in Flatbush—New York's most favored suburb (that ought to get us into hot water)—were both pretty with Ramblers. That was a week ago. Today, only one of these two particular gardens has Ramblers. The other garden answered an S. O. S. from 28th st. (what a chapter in the life of the trade famous old 28th st. will provide!) A stepladder, a pair of house scissors, and then to the store of one of the old reliable wholesalers nearly completes the story. The finishing touch is a little pin money for the girl who climbed the ladder, manipulated the scissors and transported the Roses via the route where there are more straphangers than seats.

The Market

July 2. During the last week of June business was good; unfortunately the present week shows a falling off. There is a fairly good supply of flowers although I have seen more variety at this time of year. The quality is good, which can easily be accounted for by the exceptionally cool weather, which enables flowers to last better.

The supply of American Beauty Roses is ample for all requirements; the call, however, is more sluggish; prices are from 3c. to 20c. apiece. There is an adequate supply of hybrid tea Roses, of good quality, although the demand has fallen off somewhat. Prices are from 50c. to $10 per 100, latter figure being for long-stemmed flowers of such varieties as Russell, Hadley and Ophelia.

Carnations are of surprisingly good quality considering that July is here. Prices vary from 50c. to $2 per 100.

Cattleya orchids are not overabundant and prices are holding well at $6 a doz. Lilies are not overplentiful and prices are good, at 8c. to 10c. apiece. Nor is Lily of the Valley abundant. It sells at $8 to $10 per 100. Exceptionally attractive Peonies are coming in from Bar Harbor, Me.; they sell at $6 to $8 per 100.

Sweet Peas are very scarce. There are some good Larkspur of pleasing blue shades to be had, which sell well. Water Lilies are abundant. Candytuft and Feverfew are hard to move. The call for miscellaneous flowers is limited and such items as Daisies, Snapdragons, Calendulas, Canterbury Bells and Coreopsis are moving sluggishly. There is a plentiful supply of good Asparagus of both of the usual varieties.

The annual outing of the employees of R. and J. Farquhar & Co. was held on Saturday, June 29 at Thompson's Island. The employees from the store and the nursery, with their friends, made a party of about 100. The weather was fine and the outing most enjoyable.

Decorated for Bravery

It is a pleasure to learn of the success of Corporal Frank E. Hurley, a former employee of R. and J. Farquhar & Co. Corporal Hurley, who was decorated with the French Croix du Guerre last March has been cited to receive the American War Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Welch spent the greater part of last week in New York, returning to Boston Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. William Penn and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Wax have gone to Maine for a month.

Brighton and Madbury establishments. Two of the young men have been killed in action.

I regret very much to have to report the death of John Fee, grower, of Jamaica Plain. He had many friends in the trade.

Recent members of the Gardeners and Florists' Club to join the Colors are J. E. Blocksidge, Arthur W. Birkaier and Paul A. Eisenhardt.

James Shea has been appointed by Mayor Peters to the position of park superintendent and chairman of the Park Board; the salary attached to position is $5000 a year. Mr. Shea was with John Pettigrew for many years.

Sweet Pea Exhibition

On Saturday and Sunday, July 6 and 7 the Mass. Hort. Society will hold its Sweet Pea exhibition. There are also classes for Iris Kaempferi, Hollyhocks, wild flowers, fruits and vegetables.

LAKEWOOD, OHIO—M. W. Wilson of Lakewood, O., has enlisted in the U. S. Army, in the heavy artillery and left for camp on June 26. He has given up his store in the Homestead Building, but the greenhouse will be run as usual by his sister, Miss G. A. Wilson.

Chicago and the West

The next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held on July 18. Details are given below.

Encouraging

July2. —General market conditions are all that might be expected. There is not nearly as much stock as there has been, so that no so much effort is required to make a cleanup daily. A strong demand would mean a tight market and better prices, but as it is, neither the demand for stock nor the supply is such as to enable the wholesalers to get more than average Summer prices.

The supply of American Beauty Roses is short and little good stock is obtainable. In all other varieties the supply is short also but still enough to meet all demands, with the exception of Mrs. Russell; that variety is now more extensively grown than ever for this market and will therefore continue to dominate the supply for some time to come.

The supply of Carnations is getting less each week and good stock is a rarity,

During the Summer

we will close every day at 4 P. M. Place your order early in the day. With a good demand for flowers there is no probability of a surplus and when placing an order it is to your advantage to give us all the time possible.

We recommend to you for this week:

Easter Lilies, Feverfew, Candytuft and Gypsophila

In Roses RUSSELL, PRIMA DONNA, SUNBURST, OPHELIA

Sphagnum Moss

5 bls. bale $2.50 6 bales for $13.50

Put in your supply of MOSS now for next season. Later in the year we may not be able to have our MOSS shipped to us. You will pay a great deal more for your MOSS next Winter and it is to your advantage to stock up now.

count of its light, graceful qualities. The supply of greens is ample. The situation so far as fancy ferns are concerned has reached the turning point. There is a fairly large supply of cold storage stock on hand and the new crop has commenced to come in freely.

Express Companies Combined

The American Railway express Co. under Government supervision, succeeded the old line companies on Monday. It is believed that the new company will give improved service when the working system is thoroughly understood. Practically the same employees are in charge of the shipping of the wholesale cut flower market. The shipper has nothing to do with the routing of his shipments. It is all collected and taken to a building where it is assorted and routed by the company via the most direct way to destination. Another important change in the wholesale cut flower market is the Sunday closing which goes into effect at the end of the week.

Chas. McCauley, treasurer of the Chicago Flower Growers Ass'n had the misfortune to have a large tile drop on his foot from a freight car, at Geneva last week. The injury, while not serious, is painful and will lay him up for a week or more.

Secretary John Young, of the S. A. F. was in the city Monday on his way to St. Louis, where he is going to make arrangements for the forthcoming convention to be held there the third week in August. While in the city he was taken in charge by Geo. Asmus and Fred Dietsch of A. Dietsch & Co.

Herbert Schneider, another of A. Lange's employees has joined the Colors. This makes eight stars in the service flag of the firm.

Tony Then, son of Anton Then has taken a position with the Flower Growers' Ass'n. John Welsh is on a two weeks' vacation. The seventh annual meeting of this association will be held July 15, at 3 p.m. in the office of the association, 182 N. Wabash ave.

Jack Lonregan, who has been helping out at Winterson's Seed Store during the Spring has accepted a position in the supply department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co.

Wm. Reid formerly with the W. W. Barnard Co. is in the city. He is located in Kansas City as local representative for the A. L. Randall Co. Other visitors were John Klaus, manager of the Graceland Greenhouses, Greenwood, Mo., Blain Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia., Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Weigand, Indianapolis, Ind. F. W. Heckenkamp Quincy, Ill. and Vincent Gorley, St. Louis.

Midsummer Club Rally

The next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club will be a grand Midsummer rally and will be held at Karthauser's Grove on the north side on July 18. The committee For the Good of the Club held a meeting on Friday, at which all the details were agreed upon. The meeting will be called at 7 p.m. in order to allow ample time for the discussions that are to follow the business meeting. A number of the prominent growers have been invited to be present and give their views on the present situation and how best to meet it. At the August meeting the wholesalers will be invited to give their opinion as to the betterment of present conditions from their standpoint as wholesale commission men. The September meeting will be a get-together meeting for the retailers; the leading retailers will be invited to speak on conditions as they find them and suggest plans for co-operation for the general good of the trade in the city.

Wm. F. Schofield, 734 N. State st. one of the most popular florists on the north side, is confined to the Michael Reese hospital suffering from severe cuts about his head and several broken ribs as the result of an automobile accident on Thursday evening, while driving northward at 31st street and Cottage Grove ave. His condition, while critical, is encouraging.

Robt. Pyle, West Grove, Pa., has been in the vicinity of Chicago for the past two weeks; he has been lecturing before various garden clubs, his principal subject being Roses.

Fritz Bahr, Jr. son of Fritz Bahr of Highland Park, and who has been in the Army for some time, located at a camp in California, is at the home of his parents in Highland Park on a furlough.

Frank Farney, well known to the florists' supply trade in Philadelphia and Chicago has resigned his position with the A. L. Randall Co., and has gone into business for himself, representing several manufacturers.

C. J. Pass, North Platte, Neb., and G. A. Fosberg, of the J. C. Rennison Co., Sioux City, Ia. were recent visitors as the old crops are being thrown out and the greenhouses undergoing an overhauling before replanting.

Peonies are almost gone, the present week will see the end of the supply, excepting in one or more cases where some late stock went into storage.

The first of the outdoor Gladioli in this section have made their appearance. Sweet Peas continue to come in from late planted crops and all good stock sells freely. There is, however, much poor stock that has no call. There are sufficient Easter Lilies at from $8 to $10 per 100. Valley and orchids are short in supply but there are generally enough to be picked up to meet the existing demand. Shasta Daisies, Delphiniums, Feverfew, Coreopsis, and Calendulas are in large supply and move fairly well at low prices. Gypsophila paniculata is coming in and is a favorite with Summer buyers, on ac-

Florist Suffers Bereavement

The trade will regret to learn that W. A. Harkett, florist, of Dubuque, Iowa, lost his son Charles, aged 40, on June 17. The latter for the past 20 years was in charge of the cut flower and shipping departments at the greenhouses. This is the second bereavement that Mr. Harkett has suffered within the past six months, another son, W. F. Harkett, passing away on Feb. 17.

Philadelphia

Improvement

July 2.—The small supply, coupled with the cool weather, seems to have put some "pep" into the market. The past week has been most satisfactory, with most lines cleaning up daily. As one wholesaler puts it: "We could dispense with the ice box, as we haven't a chance to put anything in it."

Carnations have advanced a point and clean up on arrival. Roses are firm and all varieties and colors are taking briskly. American Beauty are almost off the market. Valley and orchids continue scarce. Easter Lilies are plentiful and in excellent demand. Gladioli are coming in somewhat stronger; more could be used. Sweet Peas are showing up better and are in favor. Miscellaneous outdoor flowers are in fair supply, all of which are in daily call. All greens are plentiful.

Notes

Since the death of Christian Eisele of Eleventh and Westmoreland sts., Mrs. Eisele has been running the place. Owing to the difficulties of the coal and labor problems she has decided to close down the place.

The Joseph Heacock Co. is now located in its new city quarters, No. 9 S. Mole st.

The Henry F. Michell Co. reports a continued activity in the call for young vegetable plants. The demand has been heavier this year than ever before.

Harry Heileman and Chas. F. Edgar are now traveling for the M. Rice Co.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had the making of the huge Liberty Bell to be used in the patriotic parade on July 4. It was composed of natural Magnolia leaves and stood about 8ft. high. Walter Van den Hengel was recalled from his vacation to make up the piece.

Probably nothing finer in Sweet Peas was ever shown before in this city and possibly anywhere else than the exhibit of Sweet Peas made by the W. Atlee Burpee & Co. at the recent show of the American Sweet Pea Society, held at Wanamaker's. There were about 6000 blooms, comprising more than 100 varieties, staged in tiers against a background of dark green velvet.

This is the commencement of the vacation period and with the national holiday this week there is little to note in the way of business.

H. Bayersdorfer has opened his cottage at Atlantic City for the Summer.

Indianapolis, Ind.

The wedding season is rapidly drawing to a close. There were a few June weddings, but nothing in comparison, however, with those of previous years. Funerals and hospital work have been relied upon as the mainstay throughout the Spring months.

There is not the usual noticeable oversupply of early Summer flowers of former years and nearly everything acceptable is taken in this market, at good prices.

A few Carnations are available, at $3 per 100 wholesale, and 60c. to $1 per doz. retail. Good Roses are exceedingly scarce, at $6 to $10 per 100 for most kinds, and $6 to $15 for Columbia and Russell. An attractive lot of Am. Beauty Roses are being received, at $5 to $35 per 100. Auratum Lilies are available at $15 per 100 wholesale, and $4 to $5 per doz. retail. Lilium giganteum sells well at $10 to $15 per 100. A quantity of Gypsophila is available for funeral work at $5 to $10 per 100 sprays. Larkspur is beautiful, at $5 per 100 sprays, and Hydrangea arborescens plentiful at $3 to $4. There are few blooming plants to be had for the conservatory that could be specimens.

Prices in general are much firmer than at the corresponding date last season.

About Town

L. Newby, the well-known florist of Logansport, Ind., was a recent visitor.

The opening of the new Hotel Lincoln called for a quantity of beautiful baskets, vases, etc., and caused a flurry in the local market.

Edward Bertermann is away on a three weeks' vacation.

Chas. Hitz is back at Bertermann's after being laid up for three months with Rose-thorn poisoning.

Inquiries are being received from many directions for good Carnation plants. Late rains have decidedly improved these and there will be a fine crop later on.

Twenty-eight new members for the F. T. D. is quite an addition, for the S. A. F. and also for the F. T. D. It is, however, only in keeping with the great strides this portion of the flower business is taking.

L. B.

St. Louis, Mo.

The next meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club will be held on July 11 at Bourdet's Greenhouses. The annual picnic will take place on July 18 at Ramona Park.

Business is about the same; quiet as is to be expected for this time of year. Stock is fairly plentiful but of poor qualty. Roses are arriving in fairly large numbers, especially Ophelia and Russell, the latter bringing from 6c. to 15c. Ophelia, Killarney, Richmond, Ward are also in moderately heavy supply, stock running from 4c. to 8c.

Carnations are in good supply and meet with fair call at 2c. to 3c. Gladioli are coming in heavily at 8c. to 10c. Daisies clear up at 50c. per 100. Cornflowers at 35c. per 100 are good sellers. Lilies sell well at 10c. to 12½c.; Larkspur and Delphinium at quoted prices. Greens are plentiful.

Club Picnic on July 18

Correcting last week's statement the St. Louis Florists' Club's annual picnic will be held at Ramona Park, July 18. A big crowd is expected and an added feature will be a big ball game between the wholesalers and retailers

The July meeting of the club will be held at Bourdet's Greenhouse on July 11.

Frank Windler and O. K Sanders have joined the Missouri Home Guards.

Advertising

And now we come to the Seabrook Farms Strawberry campaign itself. When Mr. Seabrook over the dinner table mentioned to me that he had half a million quarts of berries to advertise for the New York markets, I was amazed. It looked like a problem so huge as almost to defy solution. But when the four million people in the city of New York alone came to mind it looked entirely possible. A three weeks' campaign of two issues a week, in two New York papers resulted in selling the crop at the rate of 2½ carloads a day, at a price from 1½ to 3 cents above prices secured any other year; prices far above current ones. Supply and demand unmistakably govern prices. The demand was created by the advertising. The supply was there to meet it. You see when you create your own demand you can have something to say yourself about the prices. In the face of the dire prediction of the wise old heads, Mr. Seabrook has proven that advertising is just as feasible for a short crop like Strawberries as it is for Dromedary Dates in packages, or Hawaiian Pineapples in cans. A week in advance of the crop advertisements announced the fact that Seabrook's Honey Heart Strawberries would be on sale the following week. The next week, a large space told that they were on sale.

Then followed a series shown on the next slide telling of their goodness and further dwelling on their size—4in. around, three bites to the berry. These words were the key note of the entire campaign. Notice the strength of the border. The lack of crowding of the text; and the vigor of the typical signature. The name Honey Heart was created especially for this campaign. It proved one easy to remember and one of appetizing allurement.

In addition to two goodly sized "ads" appearing in the produce papers, telling the dealers of Seabrook's Honey Heart Berries, each was sent a letter on this special stationery, shown on the slide, carrying the firm name signature like the "ads." These letters called especial attention to the clip-on slips.

The latter were furnished to restaurants and clubs in any quantity desired, for clipping on their bills of fare. You will note from the slide that the Strawberry is in natural color at the top with beneath the words "Seabrook's Honey Heart Strawberries, Three Bites to a Berry," which at once links it up with the advertisements seen in the papers. Then below it are the words: "Served with inch stems and a 'dip' of powdered sugar or served the old-fashioned way, with cream and sugar." A letter was also sent to all the likely clubs and restaurants, enclosing a number of clip-ons, asking them to let us know how many they needed.

Every detail of this campaign was, as in the others, most carefully worked out well in advance, so that the gears would mesh smoothly from start to finish. The results are certainly a tribute to the foresight and business sagacity of Mr. Seabrook, who had the nerve to tackle such an untried, unheard-of proposition.

With these three examples now in mind, surely the question of whether advertising can be made to pay need no longer be under discussion. For the individual to advertise may not always be feasible. But for a community of growers to band together, surely is. If the Ashtabula association, for example, can make a success in mutual marketing methods, they can make a still larger success in association advertising.

It will, however, never pay to advertise second rate products. Nothing will sooner gag results than top-notch claims in the advertisements, and lower-notch goods to meet them. Great care will be necessary in packing advertised vegetables. An absolute standard must be set and kept. Goods must be trademarked and packed or wrapped in a distinguishing way, if the height of results are to be expected. If the fruit growers of California can so successfully pool their advertising interests, so can the vegetable growers. With this country never so prosperous as it is now and the facilities for both growing and marketing greenhouse products in such an advanced stage, all things seem ripe for the advertising action of these growers who would broaden their markets and deepen their profits.

Advertising will not only do both but more closely link the mutual interest of grower and commission man. The field of crop disposal will be yours, because you will have secured a firm grip on the buyers. You will be in a position to command the situation. The irresistible force of the superior quality of your goods, combined with consistent advertising, make a team against which the unadvertised products will find it pretty tough tugging.

But once you go in for advertising, go in with the idea of staying. It's not a thing to dabble with. It's liable to back fire. There is every reason why increased sales and larger, better profits, will take care of the advertising investment and leave a handsome additional profit besides. But don't disc harrow. Plough deep if you would win.

Ten Health Commandments for Business Men

At a recent gathering of manufacturers Dr. Thos. Darlington, former Health Commissioner of N. Y. City, told the delegates that while they have been taking plentiful care of the health and welfare of their workers, a great many of them are neglecting their own, and he gave them these ten health commandments:

1—Keep your mouth closed when breathing—also when angry.

2—Drink cold water with your meals, also between meals.

3—Bathe daily; a shower if possible.

4—Eat slowly; this leads to eating sparingly. Never read or transact any business while eating.

5—Exercise daily and breathe deeply while so doing, but avoid over-exertion. Never eat when fatigued.

6—Work ten hours; sleep eight; use the balance for recreation and meals.

7—Always rest on Sunday.

8—Always keep a contented mind; equanimity means longevity.

9—Neglect no portion of the body. Employ a physician to examine you at regular intervals, and so watch for the beginnings of disease and build up resistance.

10—Be moderate in all things; even virtue in excess may become vice.

Geraniums

Easter comes April 20th, 1919, which will be rather late for bulb stock, even if it were available, but it will just be a good time for Geraniums, and every indication is that large plants will be in demand. Now is the time to start getting ready, if you want to have them in best shape. Good, strong, 3-in. plants, potted into 4-in., and then shifted along until the proper size is reached. An occasional pinching back will help, and don't forget that a potbound Geranium will bloom better than a growing plant.

We had large plants last season that sold at $7.50 each, without any decoration at all.

Our list of varieties is the best in the country. We have good stock, ready for immediate shipment.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

Seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

All sorts and mixtures except where noted are: $5.00 per oz., $1.25 per ¼ oz., 5000 seeds $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c.; any 5 packets, $1.00. Please order by number.

22. GIANT KENILWORTH STRAIN. The flowers are of perfect form and substance, many of the immense flowers are from 3½- to 4-in. It is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.
24. GIANT KENILWORTH SHOW. An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance. A beautiful collection of colors and markings.
26. GIANT KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 in. long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.
28. GIANT MASTERPIECE. A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance; large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stem.
30. GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES. A superb mixture Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich, velvety colors; reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large, dark blotches.
32. GIANT PARISIAN. The flowers are of enormous size and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground; an unusually showy mixture.
34. GIANT BRONZE. A fine mixture of all shades of velvety brown, bronze, Havana brown, mahogany and copper shades.
36. TRIUMPH OF GIANT. Remarkably beautiful. The imposing five-spotted flowers on long, vigorous stalks surmount the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size, perfectly round and of unusual substance. The individual petals are very broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double, the border of every petal being conspicuously curled. The plants are of a robust growth and form compact bushes of a round shape.
20. PRINCESS. (The New Upright Pansy.) This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture on heavy stem carried well above the foliage. Attractive by brilliancy of its colors.

10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION

Is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of all varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivalled mixture. 500 seeds 30c., 1000 seeds 50c.; ⅛ oz. $1.35, ¼ oz. $2.50, oz. $10.00.

New Early-Flowering, or Winter-Blooming

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, with dark eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with dark eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. Each color separate or mixed.

500 seeds 25c., 1000 seeds 40c., ⅛ oz. $1.10, ¼ oz. $2.00, oz. $7.50.

70. ORCHID-FLOWERED, MIXED. A dwarf, free bloomer, with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other Pansies; a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, blush mauve, fawn, light brown orange and chamois

GIANT PANSY SEED

What Shall We Plant?

Truly a vital question to every florist. Judging from inquiries and orders received, Snapdragons will be the main stay of many florists. There is no plant that will fill the gap so well as Snapdragon. Easy to grow, great producer, ready sale for every occasion. Will stand low temperature and respond to treatment when required. Be wise and plant heavily of SNAPDRAGON.

It is now time to sow seed. We have all of the good ones. Seed of our famous Silver Pink: $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50, 7 for $5.00. Seed of our new Hybrid Pink, same price. Seed of Nelrose, Garnet, White, Yellow, Light Pink, Buxton and Fancy Mixed, 35c. per pkt.; 3 for $1.00. Free cultural directions. All orders cash.

Do the wise thing today and sow some Snapdragon seed. Grow your own plants and save transportation worry.

"Plant Another Tree"

This would be a good slogan for the florist to use when he starts his nursery show grounds—How John Albrecht of Pencoyd, Pa., is "Working the Oracle"

There is today an unmistakable demand in every trade l profession for more efficiency and better service, ich, when once properly appreciated, live, ambitious n will make every effort to supply. The demand will ely be expected from the allied nursery and florists' de, who should form some kind of working agreement, co-operate with advantage in promoting and securing ter service: The trouble with many of us is that we too conservative, doing many things like our fathers them before us, and not adapting ourselves to the es in which we live; we must have some great crisis the present one to make us realize that our old habits out of date, and that we must look for success only modern methods and efficiency.

would like to see every florist in the land get prac-lly interested in trees. The florist's opportunities to in close touch with prospective buyers are of the v best, and there is going to be a greater demand trees as the years roll by. What is needed first today n educational propaganda. Wherever there is a local er published, the local florist should by all means have name in it, either as an advertiser or as a contributor short articles, suitable for the neighborhood. He uld get into the good graces of all the best people get talked about. The public should know that he supply plants and care for all kinds of trees, plants flowers, and he should be ready at all times to offer suggestions.

t is natural for every human be- to have the home making in-ct more or less, and to have his her own definite ideals for a e which, as soon as conditions mit, becomes a reality. The ad-t of the automobile has so won-fully popularized country and urban homes that during the last years thousands of beautiful es have been erected in the out-ts of all the cities, which are ost invariably surrounded by ns and grassy plots, planted n suitable ornamental and shade s, which not only give shade create beauty and give pleasure a large number of our busiest ens. In Philadelphia there is a e fashionable association for nen, the chief slogan of which is ant another tree." Every home r loves trees because they im-ve the house and increase its e, purify the air, are cooling in mer, and radiate warmth in ter. Trees need no spokesman; speak for themselves.

lorists who have hitherto con-d themselves exclusively to green-se work, will find it to their ad-tage to look for outside work, as landscaping and planting of all kinds; these ches are interesting and profitable. But the gen-public, although well meaning and anxious to se-the best service, is, because of its inexperience, n imposed upon by irresponsible persons to the iment of the trade. To gain the confidence of the lic, faithful and intelligent work is essential.

our neighborhood we are proud to know a fine e of a practical and accommodating florist. John recht has conducted a successful florist's business 30 years. His congenial and happy disposition, and ingness to help every worthy cause are, unlike the er that wastes its fragrance on the desert air, not on his neighbors, for he is popular with everyone comes in contact with him. When, a few years ago, bought several acres of land right on Montgomery which, for a distance of 15 to 20 miles is one of finest residential avenues in the country, and very ular with automobilists, and planned to spread out starting a home market nursery business, we knew he would be successful. For, as soon as he had ew samples planted, and his name on the gate post, iness came to him because he was in a good location, a good reputation and there were hundreds of pros-tive buyers every day. Owing, however, to the great rcity of help and the fact that his son Conrad, who charge of this branch, had joined the Army, the e has been working under disadvantages. Neverthe-Mr. Albrecht has in mind a vast scheme for the elopment of this trade which, as soon as the war is r, he will not fail to carry out. The illustration shows office and part of the grounds. There are plenty of ilar locations all over this broad land which offer ilar opportunities.

Cleaning Off Bordeaux Deposits

Soon the florist who has outside Tomatoes coming on that have been well sprayed with Bordeaux, as they should have been, will be worrying how to get the Bordeaux spots off the fruit in a cheap, quick manner. If he will take a pint of acetic acid to a small tub of water, and wash the Tomatoes in this, he will find that these spots come off as if by magic. This amount of solution will clean a large amount of fruit. This method, of course, may be used on any other vegetable or fruit so covered, as this acid is nothing but the pure acid of vinegar.—D. F. Harrison Co., Kankakee, Ill.

Simple But Effective Flue Protector

When the firing season is over, most of us florists leave the ashes and soot in the boiler until Fall, and when we are ready to start up the fires again, we find some of the flues and smoke pipes rusted out. When a new boiler is sold instructions for laying up the boiler when not in use are sent. These usually advise the coating of all parts exposed to the fire with linseed oil.

The usual way of oiling the flues is to fasten a rag in the shape of a ball on the end of a long pole and swab out the flues. After one or two of the flues are oiled the rag gets loose and the rest of the flues get little or no oil; the job is given up and probably never repeated. We have had this experience and finally found a better way, as shown in the accompanying illustration. On the end of a ⅝in. or ½in. pipe two lock nuts and two metal washers are screwed. Between the washers enough circles of cloth are placed to make a pile ½in. high. The metal washers can be cut from the ends of tin cans and should be ½in. smaller than the diameter of the flue. The cloth washers can be cut from cloth such as discarded cement or grain bags or a piece of carpet. These circles of cloth should be a little larger than the flue. The oil is poured in the ends of the flues through a piece of pipe. Linseed oil should be used; don't use kerosene or ordinary machine oil. Use lots of oil and turn the device when using it, so the top of the flue gets well oiled.—Hild Bros., Lake Forest, Ill.

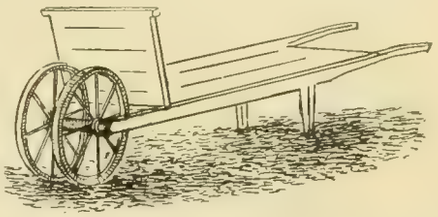
Improved Wheelbarrow

In a florist's establishment a wheelbarrow is indispensable, but one with two wheels is far better than a barrow with one wheel. The ordinary wheelbarrow is easily upset, so that considerable stock is damaged in the course of the year, and much time is lost in gathering it up. This is obviated by the use of the two-wheeled barrow, as the latter is much steadier than the ordinary type. The wheels are both on the same axle, but are independent, so that, in turning, the barrow acts the same as though it had only one wheel. Either iron or wooden wheels can be used. C. L. Black, Jr.



Additional Copies of Long Quotations

Here is a "labor saver" for stenographers in the seed, plant, landscape gardening and nursery business. A customer places his order "as per quotation." The order clerk, in executing the order, will then need a copy of the quotation (generally in a great hurry) and is usually not permitted to remove the copy that is on file. On other occasions, also, additional copies of long quotations and orders are often called for a long time after the originals have been written. By making two additional carbon copies at the time the original is made, of such quotations, of which copies may be called for again in the future, the considerable time required for retyping may be saved. These extra copies had best be placed in the stenographer's own file till wanted, in order not to clutter up the general files.—Victor G. Hipple, care Henry A. Dreer, Riverton, N. J.

Sub-irrigation Simplified

The accompanying drawing shows how I water my vines, such as Cucumbers, Squashes, etc., by taking a glazed 3in. sewer pipe and cementing into it a 3in. soft drain tile, putting a 1in. cement plug in the bottom of the drain tile, as shown. I set these sub-irrigating pipes to a depth as shown and plant the seeds around them. This waters the plants below the ground and prevents the soil from caking or from scalding the vines. The vines can be watered any time of the day, no matter how hot the weather. The pipes get quite hot in the hot sun, and thus warm the water before it passes on to the roots of the plants. This is like a warm rain. Watering twice a week is all I give them, as the sun and wind do not dry up the water and cause the ground to bake. I am using 14 of these sub-irrigating pipes this year.—A. B., Portland, Ore.—From Rural New Yorker.

European Notes

With fires and our warmest clothing an absolute necessity, it is hard for us to realize that we are within a week of Midsummer Day. A few very heavy and destructive hail storms have in some measure relieved the drought and the prospects apparently favor a showery time, but personal investigation during the day shows that the soil three inches below the surface is as hard and dry as a well-baked brick. This is especially the case with our strong land, where some of our most important crops are growing, and the prospects are, to say the least, very discouraging. On the lighter and drier land the conditions are even less favorable and a shrinkage in the crops is inevitable.

In the meantime the myriads of vermin foretold in the notes which appeared in the Florists' Exchange for June 1 have arrived, accompanied by immense reserves, and are actively engaged in work of most destructive character. It is at present well nigh impossible for us to form any correct estimate of what the ultimate results will be; we must be content to wait until the seed is actually in our stores. European Seeds.

C. O. D. Shipments

Having read "The Exchange" report (such a complete one, too) of the recent convention of the American Seed Trade Association, held at Chicago, I failed to find allusion to any discussion having taken place as to whether "collect on delivery" shipments of seeds should be continued or temporarily abolished for the duration of the war. I presume if such had been discussed it would have appeared in the issue of June 29. [Not necessarily; part of the sessions were held in camera.]

The past season has evidently been full of trouble over C. O. D. shipments, presumably due to railroad delays to a great extent, and so numerous were the consignments thrown back on the shipper that many seedsmen are of the opinion that these shipments should either be abandoned or conducted in such a way as to insure the shipper against loss.

On referring to the printed instructions to customers regarding ordering and shipping, in the catalogs of six leading seed houses, who are credited with doing a considerable mail order trade, I find that three of them do not mention C. O. D. shipments; two offer to send C. O. D. if 25 per cent. cash remittance accompanies the order, while the sixth mentions that no plants or other perishable stocks are sent C. O. D., but no allusion is made to seeds, fertilizers, etc.

Here then is an encouragement to the buyer to order goods C. O. D., while the seedsman takes the risk of all losses and trouble in collecting and settling claims, and the chance of the goods being delayed with a subsequent refusal to accept delivery by the purchaser.

Packet seeds when returned have invariably to be broken up and repacketed due to rough handling en route, waste of time, material and labor. Bulk seeds shipped C. O. D., perhaps delayed and refused, bought elsewhere in the meantime (perhaps cheaper), are again returned to the shipper, who stands the loss, while in the meantime he may have had cash or reliable credit buyers for the same goods, and may have been obliged to turn them down. During the past season of shortages this has probably occurred time and again.

Skilled labor and experienced office help is scarce now, and those available have more useful work to do than following up claims and collecting payments on C. O. D. shipments.

Whom do we accommodate when we ship C. O. D.? Usually those who will not take the trouble to look up the price of the goods in the catalog, or who through lack of foresight and forethought have neglected to order at the proper time and who, finding the selling or sowing time rapidly slipping by, try to procure in the quickest and easiest way. Many others, we may suppose, adopt the C. O. D. method because they are in the habit of ordering their daily meat and groceries over the 'phone in the same manner, and apply the same principle to their garden purchases.

While I do not think that the method should be abolished, I do not consider it advisable to adopt it while railroad transit is uncertain. If it is continued, seedsmen should come to an understanding and demand a remittance with order that would insure them against losses, and this should be distinctly stated in all shipping instructions printed in their catalogs.

Routing Shipments

Another instruction to customers printed in many catalogs reads as follows: "Please give instructions as to how you desire your order sent." This apparently is correct for those who can conceive some idea of the bulk and weight of their order, but I think the seedsman is the better judge in most cases, and the routing should be left in his hands, to send by the best and cheapest method. Of course if the order is prepaid he has the privilege of this, and this should be distinctly stated in the catalog.

To point out the fallacy of always allowing the customer to decide: An order for bulbs was received by a certain house last fall to be shipped several hundred miles "by express." The bulk of the order was sent in this way, but 6 Lily bulbs had not arrived in time and were to go forward later. These were duly sent by parcel post (the cheapest way), and two weeks later the customer wrote to say that she (always the female of the species) had just found the parcel of bulbs outside her front door, left there by the carrier, but she never used the front door in the Winter, for which reason she distinctly stated the goods were to come "by express." The bulbs were frozen and had to be replaced free of charge because the purchaser was paying delivery charges and though the parcel post was three times cheaper yet her instructions were not carried out.

It is quite proper for a customer to give "routing" for freight shipments, but express and parcel post consignments should be left to the judgment of the shipper, unless there is no express office at destination. Nemo.

New York Seed Trade

Dutch and French Bulbs

All the seedsmen are on the alert for any news about the Dutch and French bulb situation. The statements about the probable arrival of Dutch bulbs, and the difficult conditions under which French bulbs might possibly be imported, made in last week's Exchange by H. Langeler, representing Van Waveren & Son of Hillegom, Holland, were read with much interest, because Mr. Langeler has the reputation of being very well informed about such matters. We are further informed from another source that if bulbs arrive they will be unloaded at a Government pier, without any attempt to keep the cases of bulbs of the several importers in separate lots, and that it will therefore be necessary for agents of the different importers to be at the pier when the bulbs are unloaded in order that each importer may get his own.

Vaughan's Seed Store, 41-43 Barclay st., reports that there is an active demand for its "Improved" Purity Freesia bulbs. A second shipment of these bulbs is expected to arrive soon.

Some of the more progressive seedsmen, we note, are displaying lists of the seeds which may be planted now to produce an Autumn crop. Such lists are easily prepared by seedsmen and are extremely

Chicago Seed Trade

William Reid, well known to the seed trade in Chicago, having been connected with the W. W. Barnard Co. for several years, has joined the British Field Artillery and will leave for Canada this week.

C. O. Wilcox, of the W. W. Barnard Co., came in from a trip through Michigan to spend July 4 with his family. He reports frost in the upper part of Michigan last week that slightly injured the Corn and Grape crops.

Harry Goldstein, of the American Bulb Co., has returned from a business trip to Japan.

Vaughan's Seed Store has received its second consignment of California grown Freesias.

C. M. Jackman, who has been interned in a German camp for two years, has reached New York and is expected in Chicago this week.

A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., spent a few days in Detroit, Mich. Robt. Newcomb, who has been in California for several months, is expected in Chicago at an early date.

Carl Cropp of Vaughan's Seed Store reports that the Phlox Miss Lingard has been especially fine this season at the firm's grounds at Western Springs.

Dutch Bulbs

The Holland bulb situation does not improve as time goes on. Importing and forwarding houses in Chicago state that the Holland-America Line has no set sailing dates and that it has been impossible so far to get them to make freight rates. The government of the Netherlands has not as yet given its permission for the exportation of these bulbs, but should it do so later on the bulbs will require prompt handling as soon as they reach the docks in New York, as these docks have all been taken over by the Government and must be cleared of all stock immediately upon its arrival. Should the bulbs come, importers in the West will do well to have someone on hand in New York to look closely after their interests.

Imports and Exports for April, 1918

In April, 1918, we imported seeds to the total value of $9,073,884. This is in striking contrast to April, 1917, imports which were only $8,801,779.

Imports of plants, trees, shrubs and vines for April, 1918, were $84,702 compared with $94,746 in April, 1917. Of these totals $18,466 and 5,245 represent imports of bulbs and bulbous roots or corms cultivated for their flowers or foliage, for April, 1918, and April, 1917 respectively.

Our fertilizer imports for April, 1918 were $363,935, a slight falling off from the April, 1917, figures, which were $394,982.

Seed exports for April, 1918, were $310,258; for April, 1917, $375,757. We exported in April, 1918, 16,629 tons of fertilizer, valued at $633,620. This shows an increase in value over the April, 1917 exports for the same item, which were 26,869 tons, valued at $514,100.

The foregoing figures have been taken from the Monthly Summary of Foreign Commerce of the United States.

Americans Must Grow Seeds Formerly Imported

War conditions have made it necessary for the United States to produce at home seed supplies formerly imported from Europe. "Temporary seed shortages have developed under new economic conditions, and they may continue," says the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture in "The Seed Supply of the Nation,"a new publication recently issued as Yearbook Separate 757, "but farmers and seedsmen are resourceful and they may be expected to find ways and means to meet not only the needs of this country, but also those of other countries which may be dependent upon us."

Although, as a matter of necessity, seed production has increased in this country since the war, the experts of the department state that the possibilities of commercial seed growing in the United States have only been slightly developed. The publication mentioned may be obtained by seedsmen and those especially interested. It discusses at length the various American farm crops, from a viewpoint of seed supply.

American farmers plant upward of 7,000,000 tons of seed per year, most of this being the great staples, Wheat, Corn, Cotton, etc., and practically all of these seed supplies are produced at home. Nevertheless we were accustomed before the war to import large quantities of seeds from Europe. For some vegetables, Sugar Beets, and other crops, we depended almost entirely upon the European seed supply. Seed importations from Europe were curtailed or entirely cut off after the war.

Important to Seedsmen

An important letter from President Frank W. Bolgiano of the American Seed Trade Association, discussing the matter of the importation of Asiatic labor, appears in our wide measure columns this issue.

An article illustrating the difficulties of a large seed trade house during the recent Spring rush, when both freight and express deliveries were creating unusual delays, will be found in full in our wide measure columns. It is entitled "Seed Trade Selling Experience in 1918."

Some of the salesmen in the seed stores which have trial grounds are agreeably employed on these a part of the time at this season of the year. We heard one store salesmen who had recently returned from a week or ten days at the trial grounds, looking brown and hearty, say that he would like to work on the trial grounds all the season. It is such salesmen who eventually get to the top of the ladder in seed business, because they have learned the business from "A to Izzard," or as an old seedsman put it, "They can not only sell Pumpkin seeds but they really know Pumpkins when they see them."

HOUSTON, TEX.—The San Jacinto Seed Co., Houston, has been incorporated. Capital stock $10,000. Incorporators: J. P. Rikard, R. Gerard and J. D. Franklow.

Using Greenhouses for Growing Early Vegetable Plants

This article is the first of a series of three or four which will deal with the use of greenhouses for growing early vegetable plants, and the methods employed to that end. The second article will discuss methods of starting such hardy plants as Cabbage, Lettuce and Prizetaker Onions. The third article will cover less hardy plants, such as Tomatoes, Egg Plants, Peppers, etc.

Florists and commercial greenhouse vegetable growers are no doubt well informed concerning the coal situation for next Winter. The necessity of large amounts of coal for industries manufacturing products for the successful prosecution of the war, and for the navy and army, caused the United States Fuel Administrator to issue, on April 24, 1918, an "Order Establishing a Regulation to Restrict Fuel Consumption by Florists." The word "florist" in this case includes any grower of flowers, plants or Winter vegetables in greenhouses heated with artificial heat. No restrictions are placed on the amount of coal used by those growing early vegetable plants for transplanting outdoors to produce Summer vegetables. Complete details concerning this order were published in the May 4 issue of THE EXCHANGE, page 894.

This means that no restrictions will be placed on the use of coal for the growing of early vegetable plants in greenhouses next Spring for transplanting outdoors to produce Summer vegetables. During the war there will be a great demand for vegetable plants because the number of home gardens is increasing in nearly every section, and the habit of eating more vegetables is being confirmed. Even after the war a great many of these new gardens will be continued, but it certainly is safe to say that at least during the war period there is quite an opportunity offered to florists in the growing of early vegetable plants.

A large number of florists grew vegetable plants last year, and since the Fuel Administrator has provided for a full allotment of coal for greenhouses operated exclusively for growing early vegetable plants, a great many more should take advantage of this opportunity. Very good returns may be secured from the sale of these plants. A greenhouse that must be closed in order to get along with the 50 per cent. allowance of coal, could be put to good use for this purpose.

Take an example of a grower operating a range consisting of four greenhouses. If it takes, say, 200 tons to run the four greenhouses during the Winter, approximately 50 tons would be used for each house, depending upon the temperature required for the crop. The 50 per cent. allowance of coal will cause two greenhouses to be closed up unless other arrangements are made to grow cool crops not requiring much heat. If one of these houses is used for growing early vegetable plants, then the full 50 tons of coal could be secured for this house if it is used exclusively for this purpose. Thus a total of 150 tons of coal could be secured, which would be sufficient to run three greenhouses.

Of course, in this example no attempt has been made to state how much coal would be necessary for warm crops and how little for cool crops, but this would vary depending upon the rotation of crops that each florist uses. Each grower must decide this matter for himself when plans for next year are being made. One thing that is important to keep in mind is that such vegetable plants as the Tomato, Pepper and Egg Plant require a rather high temperature. Tomato, 60 to 70, and Pepper and Egg Plant 65 to 80 degrees. This means that a full allotment of coal is necessary to keep up these temperatures while they are in the greenhouse.

An order from the U. S. Fuel Administrator, dated June 14, 1918, came to me a few days ago. In one section of this order it is stated that "all florists, as defined in the order of the U. S. Fuel Administrator of April 24, 1918, may use wood and peat or either of them, when not transported by railroad, as fuel in the production of flowers and plants in excess of the quantity of fuel permitted (50 per cent.) by said order of April 24, 1918, and said order is hereby modified accordingly.

"All producers of flowers and plants as defined in said order of April 24, 1918, shall within five days after beginning the use of wood and peat or either of them, as fuel for the purpose aforesaid, notify their respective State Fuel Administrator in writing of the exact time they began the use of such wood and peat for fuel."

Nothing was said in this order about the growing of early vegetable plants for outdoor planting to produce Summer vegetables because the first order provided for a full allowance for this purpose. Florists who expect to grow vegetable plants next Spring should make the necessary arrangements to get the coal as soon as possible.

When several different kinds of plants are being grown, they cannot be placed in one greenhouse at the same temperature. As mentioned, Tomatoes, Peppers and Egg Plants require high temperatures but they are not started as early as some others. Early Cabbage and Lettuce that are started two or three weeks before Tomatoes, for one shifting before they are planted outdoors, may be placed in a cooler house, when the Tomato seed is sown. To harden off the plants, Cabbage may be placed in houses where little or no artificial heat is used, or in cold frames. When Tomatoes are large enough to be hardened off they may be transferred to a cooler house and later to frames. This gives a few suggestions regarding the use of houses for growing vegetable plants, but the subject will be discussed more in detail in the next issues, when the respective kinds of vegetable plants will be mentioned having regard to methods of growing the plants.

The reason for discussing the subject at this time of the year is to show the possibilities of this line of work and methods of growing plants so that growers may decide soon about their plans for next year and secure the allowance of coal during the Summer when it may be secured more easily than in the Fall.

Getting a Stand of Snap Beans

A great many people have trouble in getting a good stand of Snap or String Beans, especially in heavy soils. The lighter types of soil are best for Beans, but many people are using soils this year which are less favorable to the growth of certain crops. In light soil the seed may be sown about 2in. deep, but in heavier soils a little more shallow, depending upon the moisture. While the germinating seeds have considerable power to push their way up through the soil, a heavy soil may prevent many of the seeds from reaching the surface. The following suggestions may be helpful at this time of the year when the late crop of Beans is being planted.

The soil must be in fine condition before planting. Lay off the rows and then drop two seeds together at intervals of 4in. to 6in. and then cover the seed with fine soil. Firm the soil over the rows with a rake which will not pack it hard like a hog. If a crust forms after a rain, it should be broken by striking gently with a rake. The two seeds, being together, have a greater power in pushing through the soil, and if they are sown at the proper depth, in well prepared soil, and the crust is broken if it forms, there will be little trouble in securing a stand of Beans.

New Company Organized

The Robt. C. Kerr Co. has been fully organized for business. At a meeting of the stockholders, held July 1, officers were elected as follows: Robert C. Kerr, pres.; A. F. Koehle, vice-pres. and general manager; E. C. Eichling, sec'y. and treas., and Clarence L. Brock, Charles E. Hogans, C. W. Hurley and M. C. Walker, directors. Mr. Koehle is well known with the trade, having had 25 years' experience in growing cut flowers and plants.

The company has a capital stock of $35,000, and is organized principally for supplying the trade in the South. About $50,000 a year is spent in Houston for cut flowers alone. Material for the greenhouses is now on the way. Roses and 'Mums have already been planted, and it will be necessary merely to build the houses over them.

R. G. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouses, says that he believes there will be much difficulty in shipping this year, and he intends to have all the blooms possible on his own place.

Henry Kuhlmann, Jr., of the Kuhlmann Floral Co., is on a short vacation trip.

Tom Wolfe of Waco has returned from his trip to Seabrook, passing through Houston on his way home.

Among visitors were George Cohn of Wertheimer Bros., New York City, and Martin Reukauf, of H. Byersdorfer Co., Philadelphia, Pa. C. L. B.

Louisville, Ky.

The florists are enjoying a rest from the extremely busy times of last month. Business for June was above the average, but so far this month there has been little work, aside from the general run of funeral designs. There is a general shortage of cut stock; the florists are experiencing considerable difficulty in securing enough to keep up with orders. Carnations are all cut, Asters are not in yet and Roses are small. Outdoor Gladioli are beginning to bloom.

Greenhouse planting is about finished. A number of the local growers report stock as looking exceptionally well; with a continuation of the present good weather it should be in excellent condition for the Fall trade.

Wood for Fuel

Anders Rasmussen of New Albany, Ind., has recently obtained a two-ton truck, with which he is hauling scrap lumber to be used for fuel this Winter. He intends to put in about 1000 loads of it, averaging about 1½ cords per load. Other growers are also laying in a supply of wood.

August R. Baumer gave two days during the latter part of June to the War Savings Stamp campaign, and met with fair success.

J. E. Barton, formerly State Forester, has been appointed Commissioner of forestry and geology, under an act of the 1918 legislature consolidating the two offices. O. V. N. S.

Baltimore, Md.

We are in need of a correspondent to represent Baltimore. Will applicants please address with full particulars, Editor THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, P. O. Box 100, Times Sq. Sta., N. Y.

Washington, D. C.

J. D. Owens, formerly bookkeeper for the Leo Niessen Company in this city, has gone to Camp Humphreys, Va., the engineers' training camp.

Lewis Palmer, formerly with the Gude Bros. Co., has been sent to Camp Bliss, in Washington, to take the electrical course for enlisted men of the Army.

A letter received here from Ben Carrick, formerly an employee of the Gude Bros. Co., but now a sergeant in the Army, tells of how the outfit with which he is serving paraded through the streets of London, the first American aggregation to be reviewed by the British King and Queen. Speaking of Army life, Sergeant Ben says there is nothing like it.

Albert Schnell, manager for the Leo Niessen Co. in this city, is wearing a button that shows him to be a colonel in the W. S. S. campaign. Mr. Schnell was one of the first subscribers here in the thousand-dollar class. E. A. D.

Lilies in the South

The accompanying illustration shows Charles L. Baum of Baum's "Home of Flowers," Knoxville, Tenn., and his grandson inspecting the firm's home-grown Lilies. Mr. Baum expects a fine crop of bulbs; he is growing these to force for next Easter, as from all reports there will be no bulbs coming from Japan this season.

Mr. Baum has been experimenting with Lily bulbs for the past three or four years and finds good bulbs can be grown here as well as in Japan. The illustration shows only one of three beds, 150ft. long, and from which will be harvested about 10,000 bulbs. Mr. Baum cuts off the bloom and bud with a stem of about 3in. which preserves the vitality of the bulb. He has found on investigation that soil and climatic conditions in this section are very favorable for growing Lilies and in fact all kinds of bulbs. These Lilies shown in the illustration were not dug last Fall.—M. U.

Feeding 'Mums

How to Apply Nitrate of Soda

If your plants are doing well don't make the mistake of hunting all through Webster's Dictionary for the names of chemicals in the way of phosphates and sulphates to feed them with and make them do still better. Too rich food has seriously harmed many previously healthy stomachs; the least overdose of nitrate of soda or phosphate of ammonia has the same effect on the soil in the benches. One of the worst things you could do when you notice yellow foliage or a stunted growth on your plants is to dose them with commercial fertilizer. There is a big difference between applying fertilizer on an open field and on a bench under glass holding 5 in. of soil. Go slowly. If you can notice an active, healthy growth, a light mulch of well decomposed manure is in order. It will replace food taken out of the soil by the plants. Don't start yet with nitrate of soda, unless you want to push the plants a little. In that case take a 3½-in. pot full of nitrate of soda in dry form and scatter over the surface of a 100ft. x 4ft. of bench, followed by a good watering. For the small grower this is less work than dissolving the nitrate in a barrel of water, dipping it all out with a can and having the trouble of applying it on the bench afterward, and it is just as effective, in fact I rather prefer it for the plants. Don't get the whole dose with the first watering. A dose like that once a month is quite enough; in fact five weeks between meals is better.

Chrysanthemums

Perfect Foliage Desirable

There is hardly any good excuse for the smaller grower with just a few benches of 'Mums planted out to have trouble with disfigured foliage. The best remedy for caterpillars is to catch them by hand. Which is cheaper, to have a lot of fine flowers next Fall with eaten up foliage, or to go over the benches each day and remove the cause? We have insecticides and remedies for aphis and greenfly, but it takes some awful doses to clean up the caterpillars, and just a few of them not reached promptly can do an awful damage in just a couple of days. To go over 25,000 to 30,000 plants is "some job," but it is an easy matter to keep a few thousand of them free from the pest; keep your eyes open and if necessary put on the specs.

Cypripedium insigne

The smaller florist may not want to go into orchids extensively, but Cypripediums, whether the old standby insigne, or some of the other later and still more desirable sorts, all can be handled to advantage without much trouble. From now on until Fall it means that the plants will want plenty of moisture so as to develop into good specimens ready to furnish flowers later on. If you handle Cyclamen in frames outdoors, you can put the Cypripediums there as well. That will be a far better place than a dry greenhouse bench. Keep the plants sprayed and don't overlook giving them at least two doses of weak liquid cow manure each month up to October.

Calliopsis

The hardy Gaillardias and the Coreopsis are at their best with most of us right now. Both are desirable cut flowers and it isn't too early to sow seed for next year's requirements. For a cut flower of the same type, only much smaller, but for all that attractive and useful when cut with 15in. stems, we have the Calliopsis. Sow seed now for next September flowering; they can stand quite some frost. Sow in rows where the plants are to flower. Crown of Gold is a golden yellow, Crimson King a dark crimson, and Tinctoria flore pleno a semi-double, all three splendid cut flowers. But maybe it is as well to get a couple of ounces of mixed seed; that means an investment of about 30c. That isn't much, is it?

Calendulas

A Cold House Crop

At present any crop which can be grown in a cool house during the Winter months interests the florist. Calendulas by many are considered hardly worth while growing under glass, and so with other flowers. There are quite a few of us who find them a paying proposition, however, and especially during Midwinter, and I am sure any retail florist who has his doubts about getting his requirement of coal for the coming Winter will find Calendulas a desirable crop to grow on. Seed sown now outdoors and the plants benched, or what is still better planted on a solid bench, will flower from October and be at their best during December and January. Even in a house just above the freezing point, they will flower and with just a little care will hold out until Spring when they will make up for any lost time. If you are growing for your own retail trade don't try to grow five or six times as many plants as you can handle for your trade. That doesn't pay. Don't plant more than you think you want, but by all means grow some. Sow the first lot of seed now; another, if you like, in about a month from now. Those you sow now outdoors, if left alone, will flower in September and keep it up until a really heavy frost finishes them. It is not uncommon to cut good Calendulas outdoors as late as November.

The Annual Gypsophila

The seed of the annual Gypsophila is so cheap, the culture of the plant so simple and the little flower so valuable for the retail florist that there shouldn't be a week during the Summer and Fall months without your being able to cut your own supply. Keep on sowing out in rows about 1ft. apart every two weeks. It takes the plant just about from five to six weeks to flower from the time the seed is sown, so get started; it will bring you good results.

Hunnemannia fumariæfolia

I don't know who gave this beautiful flower such a name. It isn't at all appropriate, so let us call it giant yellow Tulip Poppy, which surely sounds better. Here we have one of the finest cut flowers for Fall use, if sown now. With it and some of the annual Gypsophila you have a combination for a centerpiece that you can't beat. Cut the flowers when only partly open and they will last four to five days and the fine feathery foliage gives the flowers a perfect setting. The plants do best in a rather stiff soil and they don't want to be transplanted. A good way to do is to sow in rows about 6in. to 8in. apart in beds 5ft. in width. This will afford a chance to place temporary frames over them next October and sash protection if necessary. Anything different from the usual Asters, Dahlias and Gladioli should have your attention. We want as great variety as possible; it means more business. Grow Zinnias, Calendulas, hardy 'Mums and Marigolds, but don't on that account neglect this beautiful Poppy, and while you are making out the order for the seed, why not include a trade package of Iceland Poppy? This is really a perennial, but should be sown now. It will be one of the first ones of your outdoor stock to flower next Spring. It is another fine cut flower, which requires so little care that one can't help but wonder why it isn't seen more.

Calliopsis lanceolata

Rooting Geraniums in Open Frames

What is the best way to root cuttings from Geraniums growing in the field, in late August or early September? Can they be rooted successfully in an open frame (no sash) in a mixture of sand and loam? Would be thankful for information from any reader who has been successful.—P. F., N. Y.

—The best way to root Geranium cuttings taken from the field in late Summer and early Autumn is in benches of pure sand in a greenhouse. They might be rooted with fair success in a frame of pure sand, under cheesecloth, if the sand were always kept moist with tepid water, and an extra cover of cloth placed over the frames on cool nights. J. H. S.

Geranium Flowers of Two Colors in Same Truss

Early in the Spring we bought some 3 in. Geraniums, from whom or where located I do not recall. These we put in 4 in. pots, and when one of them bloomed it produced one cluster of pink and another cluster of red flowers. My first thought was that two small cuttings had been placed very close together in one pot and the roots had intertwined. On examination I found this to be so, but when another plant of the same lot in another pot produced one cluster with red and separate pink flowers on one stem in the same cluster I had no solution.

In the 12 years that I have been growing Geraniums this is my first time to see anything like this. Is there such a Geranium on the market or is this one a freak? I am enclosing the cluster of red and pink florets. Of course it will be withered when it reaches you, but the colors should show. Other clusters of flowers now opening on this plant appear to be all pink.—E. C., Mo.

—The writer has sometimes seen Geraniums produce flowers of two distinct colors in one truss, but regarded them as sports, whose habits of producing such flowers were not constant. The truss of blooms submitted by the inquirer appears to belong to this class. There used to be sold a Geranium called "New Life" which produced flowers of two colors on the same truss, but in a different way and in different colors than the specimen submitted. J. H. S.

How I Saved the Coin to Buy a Book of Thrift Stamps

Having occasion to visit the metropolis a friend invited me to accompany him in his automobile half the distance. Offer accepted; congestion on Mr. McAdoo's lines relieved to the extent of 185 lbs. of human freight, and a thrift stamp saved by yours truly. Added to this, I carried a box of flowers and patriotically relieved the congestion of Mr. McAdoo's express company and incidentally saved more money toward fulfilling my thrift endeavor.

Dining on two sandwiches, washed down by a near prohibition beverage, containing two per cent alcohol, two thrift stamps were acquired.

When I annexed a two dollar discount, my thrift book began to loom large, and daylight saving gave time to use the trolley home, and further relieve congestion on Mr. McAdoo's railroad and still further add to my thrift stamp account.

It gave me great pleasure to purchase my stamps from fair maidens, and had I not been of the vintage of 1846 I would have been greatly tempted to purchase an extra stamp provided a kiss were thrown in.

BUT: having the goods I am speculating whether it will be legal tender at the delicatessen shop when the non-essentials are busted.

In my horoscope of the future I endeavor to locate myself as an essential. Being too ancient to fight ("the spirit may be willing but the flesh is weak"), and too corpulent, indolent and short winded to be of much account anyway, I am thinking of applying to Mr. McAdoo for a position as a flagman at a grade crossing. That essential position would, at least, have in prospect a raise in wages.

Buying thrift stamps is easier than I anticipated, besides the performance furnishes food for thought, and the conclusion reached is when a non-essential can Poor Richard enough out of his scanty income to buy W. S. S. he ought to have a star on a service flag for every book he acquired. JOHN G. ESLER.

Hints

The Dept. of Agri. recommends that fertilizer be purchased in 200 lb. bags rather than in smaller bags because of the great scarcity of burlap.

If the first appearance in this country of weeds, such as Russian Thistle, field Hawkweed, and Canada Thistle, had been reported, much of the loss and trouble which they are causing might have been avoided. It is important to report the appearance of new weeds and to take precautions to prevent their dissemination. —Dept. of Agriculture Bulletin.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT

A Novel Use for Philadelphus coronarius aureus

The subject of this note is one well known to the trade—everyone knows the Golden Mock Orange which, for its leaf coloration, is highly valued in landscape effects. Our illustration shows a use for it which to say the least is unique and strikingly handsome. As seen, it is planted in a 6ft. wide bed along the front of the terrace wall, some 150ft. in length, and backed up with a beautifully kept Privet hedge, the green of which brings into strong relief the golden color of the Mock Orange. Viewing it from a distance one would conclude it to be the much used yellow Coleus so greatly does it remind one of the latter.

Such a decided planting, however, would not be possible to secure from the Coleus at the date this picture was taken (May 21). Here, then, is a thought that presents itself from two angles: First, we have in this Golden Mock Orange a hardy plant which produces an effect practically equal to that afforded by an annual (annual in the sense that it cannot withstand the frost), and covering a period of at least six months against that of three and one-half months given by the Summer plant. Secondly, there is the all important question of labor saved which, by the permanent use of the hardy plant, has quite obviously been obtained.

For the space taken up by the Mock Orange we would need at least 900 Coleus plants, which represents, in addition to the labor of planting, etc., each year, a considerable amount of time and expense in propagation, plus glass, plus fuel.

The use to which the plant has been put in this particular instance precludes to a large extent the flowers it would otherwise afford, the paramount thought, of course, being to secure the best foliage effect only. To realize this, the plant is given an annual pruning in the early Spring with the result that there is a greater strength of foliage and color in the young growth and this it retains through the major portion of the season.

The Japanese Dogwood

Considering the popularity of our native Dogwood (Cornus florida) it is strange that the Japanese species (C. Kousa or Benthamia japonica) is not more common. The white, pointed bracts appear after the foliage and are about 2½in. across; slightly smaller than our native bloom but could readily pass for the latter with the average person. The fact that they flower a month later (June) than our native sort means a longer Dogwood season for those who possess both. The tree—it makes a small tree in time—which prompted these notes was planted some years ago near Philadelphia, by the late Thomas Meehan and is now 15ft. high with a trunk 5in. in diameter at the base. It does well in the shade and as regards hardiness, a recent bulletin of the Arnold Arboretum states that the Japanese Dogwood came through the past Winter in Massachusetts without injury, whereas the native sort suffered.

The Meadow Rues

In the hardy flower garden one naturally expects to find the old favorites like Peonies, Phloxes, Irises, etc., but there are many plants not rare but uncommon which might be used to advantage. The Meadow Rues (Thalictrum) are noted for their graceful, fern-like foliage. This feature alone is sufficient to commend them for use. Added to this, however, we have in T. glaucum a fluffy, yellow, plume-like bloom, slightly fragrant. It may well be placed in the "not rare but uncommon" class.

The corymbose panicles, about the size of one's fist, are borne in June, on the end of stalks about 5ft. high and are splendid for cutting. T. dioicum, with greenish yellow flowers in larger and more open panicles, blooms earlier than T. glaucum. T. aquilegi folium (or Columbine leaved) comes with white (var. album) and pink (var. roseum) flowers. T. adiantifolium and nutans have white flowers, the former blooming in May and June and nutans a month later. Both grow about 2ft. to 3ft. high. The foliage of all is worthy and blends well when grouped with ferns. Try some Meadow Rues for that shady spot.

Some Speedwells—Veronica

Seeing a mass of Veronica candida blooming in the nursery in early June the thought occurred: Why not use it as an edging or border plant in the formal garden? It grows to a height of 1ft. and the combination of its silvery foliage—whence the common name Hoary Speedwell—and its lavender-purple flower spikes is indeed most pleasing, especially effective when the plants are massed. Blooming as it does about the same time as the Scotch Pinks (Dianthus) it may be grouped effectively with these garden favorites in pink and white, where low-growing plants are desired. Other desirable Speedwells are V. circaeoides, Teucrium, rupestris and spicata. All are blue, low growing and suitable for rock gardens. V. spicata blooms in late June and July but the others mentioned flower in advance of V. candida. The best known and really the showiest is V. longifolia subsessilis (Hendersoni) which grows 2ft. to 3ft. and has blue flower pin spikes 6in. long, appearing in July and continuing for a month. Then, too, we have the Virginian Speedwell (V. virginica) or Culver's Root as it is also called. It grows 5ft. to 6ft. high with a cluster of white flower spikes throughout July. It is not desirable in the average flower garden but is appropriate in connection with native plants and grows well in partial shade. Seeds, division and cuttings are the various methods of propagation.

Acer rubrum, Red Maple

Few people when seeking an ornamental flowering tree for their grounds would look for it among the Maples, nor is it classed as one in the nurseryman's catalog, yet viewing it when covered with its scarlet flowers we would not hesitate to place it in the list of flowering trees. Moreover, it holds a unique position in this respect that there is no rival for honors during its blooming period, for even while Winter is yet with us it forms the one bright spot among trees in the landscape.

True, the individual flowers are mere segments compared with the floral envelopes of many other flowering trees, but when the multiplicity of them is considered, and seen under good sunlight, the effect is a brilliant one. The flowers are monœcious, the male or staminate being in separate bundles from the pistillate ones. Both have the scarlet coloration, the former perhaps by reason of the protruding anthers is the prettier.

Around the last few days of March we received through the mail from a tree lover in Asheville, N. C., a spray of the fruit of this tree for identification. The note accompanying it stated that the whole landscape was aglow with the color given by this tree at the time of writing. It was quite interesting to note the advanced stage of the North Carolina tree as compared with ours in Pennsylvania. Here they had but reached the flowering stage, while from the southern one sent us developed seed, showing a difference of about four weeks.

In a threefold sense does this tree earn the title of Red or Scarlet Maple, for following its bright red flowers are the scarlet-winged fruits and, later in the year, in the Autumn days, it again shows up in wonderful leaf coloration of crimson and gold.

The tree delights in a moist soil, as is clearly shown in Nature, for we find it following the water courses and banks of streams. Its seeds, which mature quickly, should be sown soon after ripening to obtain the highest germination.

There is another Maple which is sometimes listed as "Acer rubrum" and is apt to confuse us with our native one. We refer to the Himalayan species, Acer lætum, or as it is more commonly called, Colchicum rubrum. This is a pigmy tree compared with our native one, the true Acer rubrum, and bears no resemblance to it except in a botanical sense.

Nurseries of France

Through the courtesy of Winfred Rolker of A. Rolker & Sons, New York, we are enabled to publish the following extract from a letter by Norbert Levavasseur of Ussy and Orleans, France, dated June 12, 1918. The writer represents Levavasseur & Sons, which firm is one of the most important exporting houses in France:

"At present we feel seriously the effects of the war. While we have sustained very heavy losses in the nursery business which could not be covered with the low prices at which we sold the items demanded for exportation, all other business went up tremendously, and wages went up the same way—from $3 to $5 a day for an ordinary man. For instance, my main office assistant left me last March, saying he could earn wages that he knew we could not pay him. Several others did the same. Well, now we have to pay these high wages to get help and still we cannot secure enough. You may see what an amount of work lays on my shoulders. Of course the nursery production is a limited one, having grown only such items as are liable to be exported to the United States and England, and some forest plants liable to be planted in France. This means about 20 per cent. of the old output. Naturally, we had to increase the prices in accordance with cost of production. This was done by our commercial committees of Ussy, Orleans and Angers when meeting at Angers some 10 days ago.

"We believe it is quite important that orders be taken early, so we know what is sold, and to make arrangements ahead in view of obtaining licenses in time, also to enable us to lift very early in season, as soon as plants are matured, for we shall endeavor to be ready for Fall shipments the latest by Dec. 15. With early orders in hand we shall try to get enough lumber to pack and ship in cases instead of in hampers, which we had to use last season because we could not do any better." (Signed) N. LEVAVASSEUR.

of the stockholders of the Market Florists' Association will be held at the office of WILLIAM SIEBRECHT, Bridge Plaza

Long Island City

on July 22, at 12 o'clock, noon

H. C. STEINHOFF, Secretary

New England States

Providence, R. I.

A slight reduction in business was noticed during last week. Local stock is more than sufficient to meet all demands. Some of the growers are cutting heavy crops of Lilies, bringing the price down about 35 per cent. below last week's quotation. Prices are as follows: Roses $2 to $12; Carnations $2 to $3; Lilies $6 to $8; Adiantum $1 to $2. J. C. L.

Hartford, Conn.

The florists of this city have begun closing their stores at 1 o'clock Saturdays and will continue to do so during July and August. The uptown stores close weekdays at 6 o'clock, while others out of the rush close at any old time.

Trade in general is fairly good, considering the times.

Stock on the whole is good; Roses are selling at a fair price, while Carnations continue at a good figure; in fact I never saw Carnations keep up so well in price for a great many years. We are getting better prices for our stock than at any time in my experience, and that covers about 30 years.

Miss Sadie Coombs, who has been head saleswoman and bookkeeper for John Coombs on Main st. for many years, was married on Tuesday, July 2, to Thos. Martin of New Haven, Conn.

GEORGE G. McCLUNIE.

New Bedford, Mass.

A general depression is felt by nearly all: there is little demand for cut flowers of any kind; funeral work has also fallen off. The weather has kept cool, which accounts for the good quality of the stock of Carnations, Roses, etc., offered.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Murray are away on their vacation.

Mack Blackwell, son of F. G. Blackwell, was home on a short furlough, having just returned from a trip overseas.

FRED REYNOLDS.

Worcester, Mass.

Business has been rather quiet. The call for funeral and wedding flowers has been light, and cut flower trade is unusually slack, with the possible exception of Saturday, when many of the stores offer specials.

Mrs. P. G. Forbes has sent in the first Sweet Peas of the season.

Paul F. Brigham, proprietor of the Westboro Conservatories, intends to meet the Government coal order by closing half his place.

Ralph M. Forbes has his houses well filled with Tomato plants and expects a good crop of ripe fruit in about two weeks. He also has a war garden of about five acres, planted with vegetables. Mr. Forbes and F. L. Midgley have been appointed to assist Leonard C. Midgley, supervisor of war gardens for Worcester and Worcester county.

The next show to be given by the Worcester County Hort. Society will be held on Thursday, July 13. The schedule calls for fruit, flowers and vegetables.

The market has not been overstocked, owing to the weather, which has continued to be cloudy and rainy on an average of three days each week. It is not likely now that the market will be swamped with flowers, as most of the growers have cleaned up their houses and vegetables are being grown outside where flowers were grown last year.

Prices generally were as follows: Carnations $1 to $1.50 per 100; Roses $1 to $8; Sweet Peas 50c. to 75c. per 100; Gladioli $3. F. L. M.

Growing Freesias in California

By JAMES A. BROWN, who gives our readers a leaf or two out of his experience

Preparing the Soil

We prepare the soil for planting in June or July, irrigating first, so that it may be plowed; we have no rain at that time of year. A thin coat of lime is put on if soil is inclined to be acid, together with some stable and hen manure, both being used sparingly. This is all plowed under and the ground worked up into good condition.

Methods of Planting

There are several methods of planting the bulbs. The one giving the best results, we believe, is the use of single rows because in this way we are better able to cultivate, irrigate and weed. Trenches are made with a hoe, by hand, about three inches deep; about one-half to one inch of beach sand (we are located about one-half mile from the Pacific Ocean) is put in the bottom of these and the small bulbs or bulblets, as the case may be, are put on top of this sand and the rows covered with finely worked soil. The bulbs are not permitted to dry out from then until the rainy season; then the rains take care of the watering for us. Of course it is a big job to keep these beds free of weeds. All the work of hoeing, cultivating and weeding has to be done by hand. Some growers, in order to obtain larger bulbs, like to irrigate in the Spring after the rains are over, but we have proven by prominent florists in the East who have forced them for us, that better bulbs for florists' use are obtained by letting the fields dry up and the bulbs open air for four or five weeks before the bulblets are removed because, if not properly handled at this time, the bulbs will chalk or dry rot. The result of premature curing is that even though the bulbs may arrive at destination without mildew or sweating, they begin to chalk where the bulblets were broken off and this chalking even continues after the bulbs are planted by the florists, with the result that a large per cent of the bulbs do not flower as they should.

Methods of Grading

We are adverse to grading through screens as a bulb proves worthless after being bruised. We favor the plan of grading by hand. Every bulb is picked up by a girl and tried in a bevel edged wooden gauge which has the different sized holes that we grade to. In this manner no bulbs are bruised as is the case with the screens which, we admit, lessen the cost of grading and cleaning. Another important point in grading first class Freesias is to take the bulblets for replanting only from the largest bulbs harvested the season before. By watching these closely, we have been able to improve the stock we originally started with.

In concluding his article Mr. Brown tells of success achieved in growing Callas and the Dutch bulbs of which he states they are working up quite a stock, and with which they have had no disease or trouble of any kind finding them easy to grow.

Mr. Brown, however, takes the point of view which every grower in California is forced to take to the effect that to make the American bulb industry a success in future we must have tariff protection after the war is over and also protection from the extremely low freight rates from Europe, which are quite likely to be the case shortly after the war is over, taking into consideration the immense number of ships which will be in commission at that time.

cure after the Spring rains are over. We have had no rogueing to do because we have never had a bulb of any kind but Purity, therefore there can be no bulblets left in the soil from plantings in the past that might volunteer and introduce rogues into stock.

Irrigation

We don't irrigate by the ditch system, but use the slow revolving Sunshine system of spraying from high tanks into which we pump water from wells on our own ranch. We firmly believe from our experiments that bulbs planted and grown close together in beds tend in a measure to force themselves, and while they produce better flowers there, because this method of growing is similar to that in a greenhouse, giving the same results as from bulbs grown in a greenhouse, such bulbs are not inclined to be as good for forcing another season as those grown in single rows.

Lifting and Curing the Bulbs

The lifting of Freesia bulbs is a slow and expensive operation. After the foliage is completely dead and the ground has become dry and hard, which is necessary for the bulbs to properly cure, we have to soften the soil by a light irrigation. After about two weeks' watering a man loosens the dirt close to the bulbs and on each side of the row with a tool which goes down into the dirt lengthways of the rows and leaves about 4in. of dirt with each row. A narrow bladed shovel is used to shovel this dirt on to tables. It takes about six girls to pick the bulbs out of the dirt by hand and push the dirt off the tables after each digger. When we tell you that a good digger and six girls can only lift about 1200 feet of single row bulbs a day you will see that it takes a lot of help and a long time to lift an acre of Freesias and that it is an expensive operation. The bulbs are put in trays and stacked out of the sunshine in the

100% Heat with a 50% Coal Supply

JOSEPH H. SPERRY

This is an article by a man of wide experience; its reading will well repay the attention you give it

Setting Forth the Problem

Let us suppose that we have a greenhouse for the heating of which we have been accustomed to use 100 tons of coal yearly. How can we heat that greenhouse with 50 tons of coal to approximately the same degree of heat as we have in other years with 100 tons? If that is not entirely possible, how can we make up the difference between the greatest possible amount of heat which we can obtain from 50 tons of coal when used in the most effective way and that amount of heat which we have obtained from 100 tons of coal as we have been accustomed to use it?

The answer is twofold.

First, we must see how we can obtain more heat from the 50 tons of coal which we are to have than we have obtained in other years from the same amount of coal. To do this, we must have a heating outfit which will give us the greatest possible amount of heat from those 50 tons of coal. "There, there," I hear some grower say, "we have heard enough of that; you fellows are always harping on getting better heating apparatus; the other fellows have told us all about that; do say something else; my old outfit has stood by me for years, and I would be all right now if I could only get coal enough."

Well, you will not get coal enough, if by enough you mean a 100 per cent. supply, and we are going to say again, after our poor fashion, what the heating sharps have been saying so plainly to you, and someone, we hope, will yell it in your ears until you give heed to the good advice. We are going to say something more, too, and you need not get mad. There is a French proverb which says, "The man who pleads his own case in court has a fool for a lawyer." In a great many of the small greenhouses, and in some of the larger ones, too, the owner has installed his own heating apparatus, a second-hand boiler and pipe, perhaps, and in many cases he had a fool, so far as greenhouse heating is concerned, to install his heating plant, and he is paying dearly for the foolishness of this ignoramus every year—this year, unless a change is made, it may put him out of business. Do you hear that?

Efficiency of Apparatus Saves 15 tons plus 17 tons

Let us suppose, for argument's sake, that with a 100 per cent. efficient heating plant you can get as much heat this next year out of 85 tons of coal as you have been obtaining from 100 tons. Then, of course, 85 tons will do you for next year. There are some devices now on the market, the purpose of which is to effect a more perfect combustion of coal than can otherwise be obtained, and hence a greater volume of heat than can be obtained from the most perfect furnace without this device. The U. S. Government engineer, in an official report, says that one of these devices gives an "equivalent saving in coal of 35½ per cent." Let us suppose by using this device we save even 20 per cent. of the 85 tons named in our calculations, that means a saving of 17 tons of coal. This would reduce our necessary coal supply to 68 tons.

How to Save the 18 tons Still Short

Secondly, we must use this coal only when absolutely necessary, and having obtained the greatest possible amount of heat through the most perfect heating plant and coal combustion devices, we must try to conserve this heat so as to use not 68 tons of coal, but 50 tons per year; in other words, we must save 18 tons more of coal. How can we do this? Perhaps by economical firing and heat conservation. There are many times when more coal is burned than is necessary. This is especially true in greenhouses where no regular day or night fireman is employed. The fire is often kept on in the morning of sunny Winter days longer than necessary, and there is often heavier firing than is called for nights when the temperature outside rises as the night advances until, when the sun rises, it is from 10 deg. to 30 deg. warmer outside than it was at nightfall. In short, you can save some coal by watching your fire more closely, both day and night. The small grower may find it necessary this Winter to sleep in his boiler house with an alarm clock near his head. This will, of course, be a hardship, but do you know among your acquaintances anyone in these days, when we are contending for the democracy and safety of the world, who is not enduring in the way of labor, or anxiety, or care, or sorrow, more than he was called upon to bear in the "piping days of peace"?

There are several ways in which heat may be conserved in the smaller greenhouses. When Winter is close at hand you can bank the sides and beds of your greenhouse heavily nearly as high as the eaves with coarse manure, or manure and leaves, or meadow hay; manure is preferable. This should be kept in place by a few posts and boards.

On sunny Winter days close your ventilators early in the afternoon, so as to have some sun heat stored up in the greenhouse to meet the falling outside temperature of the oncoming night. Growers are often careless and let the temperature run down in mid-afternoon by leaving the ventilators open too late.

In Winter nights, when a cold wind is blowing over the greenhouse roof and carrying off the heat fast, or when the outside temperature is very low, strips of canvas of moderate thickness and of a width convenient for handling could be stretched across the roof in such a way that the edge of one strip would lap well over the other. These strips should be long enough to reach over the roof and down each side of the house almost to the ground, and tied securely by ropes attached to ends of the canvas strips to short posts set firmly in the ground. It would need two men to put these coverings in place. Inside heavy curtains can be used at both gable ends of the greenhouse, if the gables are glassed. These would, of course, be triangular in shape, and roll down on a roller attached to the bottom of the gable.

All of the changes in heating apparatus and devices for conservation of heat which we have suggested will, of course, increase your expenses, but this will be partly offset by the fact that you are paying for 50 instead of 100 tons of coal.

The growers who will suffer most from this 50 per cent. coal allotment are those whose heating plant during the last three years has been most nearly 100 per cent. effective. Theirs seem to be a case where the worthiest will suffer most.

That 40-Ton Provision

At hour of going to press the legal department of the Fuel Administration had not as yet legalized the use of the full 100 per cent. to users of 40 tons and under.

A witty man who has been all his life until recently engaged in the business tells us that the florist's is "not a business but a disease." What did he mean?

35 to 50 Billions in "Non-Essentials"

Among them that of the Florist

"When all this talk about non-essentials started, accusing eyes were turned on the florists. Apparently there could be no business of less importance in the winning of the war than the raising of Roses and orchids. However, that wasn't the only side of the case. It was pointed out that if coal was withheld from the hothouses for a day millions in investments would be wiped out and thousands left suddenly without employment. One so-called non-essential industry was found to involve a billion in credits. The saving made by keeping coal from it would be nothing compared to the loss and injury that would result. It is estimated that the industries that had been mis-named non-essential represent from $35,000,000,000 to $50,000,000,000 of capital and employ 10,000,000 persons."—The Nation's Business.

Honoring Our Fallen Heroes

The question has been put to us: "What are other florists doing under these circumstances: A former employee of ours was recently killed at the front, and we have been sending flowers to his family each morning since receipt of the advices. Would it be a good idea to continue this practice, and how long? We would much like to know the proper course."

One national organization at its recent meeting passed resolutions to place on a Roll of Honor a list of all members of the association or of their employees who placed their lives in peril through the war. This is the first case of the kind we have heard of, and is a step which is quite likely to be taken by all national horticultural representative associations. More enduring steps will probably be taken at the close of the war, through the erection of tablets or in other way permanently recording the names of the fallen.

As to the local handling of the matter we replied as follows: "This is a hard question to answer at large, as in each case it would depend upon the relations existing between the sender and the family of the deceased. Our own idea would be to send flowers but once to the home, and later and for all time manifest such practical sympathy with the family of the deceased as you feel able to give, for really it is these actions in daily life which count the most, not necessarily gifts of cash or the equivalent thereof, but unostentatious sympathy shown in kindly deeds and reassuring words."

The Seedsmen's Plea for Asiatic Labor

A letter from Frank W. Bolgiano, president of the American Seed Trade Association, published in these columns, makes a strong plea for the importation of Asiatic labor.

Mr. Bolgiano makes the statement that within the next eight months, if something is not done, our people will cry for food that could be produced and is not being produced, and surely such a statement coming from so responsible a source should be paid heed to.

There is another feature in connection with food production which we have not seen touched upon: Immediately on conclusion of the war, this country, with a limited support from Australia, and possibly Argentine, will be called upon to supply food for at least 300,000,000 Europeans, in addition to those we are already feeding. After the war ceases the pangs of hunger will be greater than now, for it will make itself felt with more force when the mind has but one thought to concentrate upon. So long as people are fighting and struggling for existence, the mind is diverted and so much privation can be withstood, but at the very moment the tension of war is relaxed and self-preservation becomes the prevalent thought, at that moment the repressed hunger will manifest itself acutely and take exclusive possession of the faculties.

There is no doubt that in the United States we are under a great moral responsibility to produce food, so as to be ready to supply the starving enemy nations; when the time comes we will have a great fleet to carry the foodstuffs, the question now is to be ready to furnish without delay ways and means to provide these foodstuffs.

Your Trade Paper an Essential

"No business man can afford to be without his trade paper," was recently proclaimed by a keen observer.

This assumes, as a matter of course, that the trade paper itself is fully alive to the times and able to deal fairly and without prejudice with the momentous questions of business control which are succeeding one another these days with a rapidity unexampled in any previous stage of the world's history. The statement quoted applies with equal force to all trade papers, whether representing so-called essentials or non-essentials, although the latter have the more difficult task, as not only have they the supreme work of endeavoring to protect and conserve the resources of their clientele, but as well they are confronted with their own problems of existence in this respect, suffering alike with their own people.

The reason the business man cannot afford to slight his trade paper is because that even in an obscure paragraph he may discover a pointer for guidance that will help him, and in any one issue there may be contained many resourceful suggestions which will prove of value to him in his daily work.

An ably conducted trade paper sifts the news and gives the facts on both sides of the question; otherwise it is remiss in its duties. So far as The Exchange is concerned, we have endeavored, particularly within the past few months, to cover, without faltering, the questions of the day as they have matured, and certainly these have been many and significant. Business for all concerned was classed as really good up until well into the month of May. There had been exceptions and difficulties in the way of freight and express deliveries, it is true, and these were disagreeable features. It was not until the issuance of the coal restriction order by the Fuel Administration that the first real trouble made itself manifest, this being followed by the agitation in favor of plant exclusion, the embargoes on imports, together with the loss of employees creating a shortage of labor. All a sequence to the great war, taxing the facilities of this country to its uttermost.

A writer in these columns tells us conditions might have been much worse. We agree with him. We further believe that we have plumbed the full depth, practically reached bottom, of our difficulties—we know the worst—and that from now henceforth the light will break through and the road become easier.

The troubles we have faithfully chronicled; we have not endeavored to hide anything. In reference to the past, those who have not scanned our columns closely are business losers, because they have lost contact with the situation, and are therefor not in as good condition to help themselves when the opportunity comes as will be those who have followed the situation carefully.

Our future endeavors will be to deal with the problems of the general business of the florist, nurseryman, seedsman and allied industries, even though from want of space it becomes necessary to eliminate much of the purely personal matters hitherto occupying our columns; in fact, we have already taken steps in that direction.

Reassuring facts are brought to view through the conventions recently held by the American Seed Trade Association and American Association of Nurserymen. Both these organizations are fronting the situation with confidence, and, instead of relaxing their efforts have, on the contrary, planned not only for increased business, but for better business, to be conducted on improved lines—methods which will give more and yield better returns. Let us hope that the forthcoming meeting of the S. A. F. and O. H. at St. Louis will be equally productive of good in this same direction, evidencing what can be accomplished through team work and co-operation.

It shall be the endeavor of The Florists' Exchange to co-operate to the uttermost with these representative horticultural societies, and as well, on its own account, exploit fresh avenues for the development of the energies of all lines we represent. In this endeavor it is our firm assurance that strong men will give us their hearty support.

The road to recovery may be a bit longer than some of us anticipate; on the other hand, recuperation may come quickly. Much depends on each man's own efforts, for the recuperation will come more quickly to those who work for it than to those who allow themselves to go down stream with the current.

American Red Cross Wants Flowers

A letter setting forth the need of the American Red Cross contributions of flowers for the army and navy camps, to be used in cheering up the convalescent patients, has just been received by the Washington Bureau of The Florists' Exchange from Assistant Director General Harry B. Wallace of the Department of Military Relief, in which he says:

"It has been suggested that the florists of the country would undoubtedly be glad to supply flowers to the 44 Red Cross convalescent houses at each of the army and navy camps and cantonments throughout the country, if the opportunity were brought to their attention.

"I am told that you are in a position to lay this matter before the florists and I am accordingly writing to ask if you will not undertake to do this. We feel that this suggestion offers the florists one of the biggest opportunities to do a patriotic work in their own line and at the same time be of immense help to their Red Cross society in looking after our soldiers and sailors.'

Florists who desire to "come across" in this way need only address or take their offerings to the American Red Cross in care of the camp nearest them, and they are assured of a warm welcome. Soldiers who have been injured in action are coming back to this country now for treatment—there are no flowers and little of beauty to be seen in the front line trenches—and they will appreciate the spot of color a bunch of flowers makes against a hospital window. E. A. D.

Vegetables Under Glass

With this issue we commence the publication by Prof E. F. Stoddard of a series of three to four articles which will deal with the use of greenhouses for growing early vegetable plants and the methods to be employed to that end.

We commend this series of articles to our readers' careful attention, and would add here the fact that the Fuel Administration has placed no restriction on the amount of coal used by those (florists or others) who grow early vegetable plants for transplanting outdoors to produce Summer vegetables. As Prof. Stoddard says, a man with four greenhouses devoted to cut flower growing may have to close two, but he is at liberty to use one or both of these remaining greenhouses, with a full supply of coal to run them, provided he devotes these houses solely to the growing of early vegetable plants for transplanting outdoors to produce Summer vegetables.

Forcing L. Brownii for Easter

Scheepers & Co. are exhibiting at their offices, 9 Stone st., N. Y., some fine blooms of Lilium japonicum more commonly known as L. Krameri), and some of what Mr. Scheepers calls "an improved form of Lilium Brownii." These were grown on the estate of T. A. Havemeyer, at Rosedale, L. I. The bulbs of L. Krameri were imported from Japan, those of L. Brownii from England.

L. Krameri, probably the best of the pink Lilies, is too well known to need much description. Although the foliage is rather scattered, the color of the flower is attractive indeed. Mr. Scheepers is of the opinion that it could readily be had in flower for Memorial Day trade.

The improved form of L. Brownii is indeed worthy of note. Its foliage is of a much better character than that of the typical species, resembling more the foliage of L. formosum. The color of the flower is a creamy white on the inside, this being especially pronounced in the bud stage. On the reverse, three of the segments are creamy white with a narrow purple band running lengthwise through each segment; the other three are creamy white, heavily and evenly flushed with purple. Mr. Scheepers believes that this Lily can be forced for Easter and that the bulbs can be readily grown in this country. If so, this form should prove a desirable addition to the list of Lilies used for forcing purposes.

A Plea for Asiatic Labor

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

I want to thank you as president of the American Seed Trade Association for the full account of the proceedings of our association given in your issue of June 29. We are glad there is a tendency to discuss the importation of "Chinese for the duration of the war." We were perfectly aware in making the recommendation we did, viz., for the importation of at least 500,000 Chinese, that we laid ourselves liable to criticism, but we felt we had a duty to perform that was beyond all others to our country and to the "boys over there" and those whom it would be necessary to send.

Since our return to Washington we have had the pleasure of hearing one talk and, for about one hour, a discussion of the labor situation, before the War Trade Board Advisory Committee. We are, after hearing this discussion and having traveled and received a number of letters, ready to put ourselves in the position of recommending that there be imported under Government restriction not less than 1,000,000 Chinese farm laborers.

People do not seem to realize that it takes from six to eight men to keep one man in the field. While we would feel the sudden curtailment of 1,000,000 men from the labor supply of this country, yet that number could be readily made up from the surplus labor, but the taking away of 8,000,000 to 9,000,000 men from their usual occupations within the course of one year, and the prospect of doubling this number, we can all appreciate the consequences. We now not only appreciate the consequences but we feel the terrible shortage. But this is only the beginning. Within eight months, unless something is done, our people will begin to cry for food that could be produced, but is not being produced because someone is unwilling to take the responsibility of acting on the labor situation as the cause demands.

Food will win the war. For God's sake don't let it lose it for this country. Our boys are over there. Don't let them cry for bread because there is fear of a labor problem. Every man in the trenches is there for you and me. Will we do what we can? We all purchase bonds, are willing to work to the limit of our endurance, are willing to desist from eating things so that we can supply them. The women are willing to sacrifice nearly everything for the boys. Now, don't, from a misguided sentiment, either hamper the war or lose it because we are afraid to do that which our Allies have already found is expedient to do.

It is a fact that both England and France have imported labor, and are importing large quantities of Chinese for the period of the war. Why should we not follow their example? There certainly can be no valid reason.

Finally, our boys may be supplied, but the boys of Engand, France and Italy will certainly be pinched. They have fought the battles that we would have had to fight if they had not fought thus far. Let us who cannot go, do our best to do without, but by all means keep the boys cheerful as best we can with full stomachs.

Admiral Aaron Ward

A Tribute from the American Rose Society

The sudden death, at his home in Roslyn, L. I., of Admiral Aaron Ward, struck his friends with a sharp blow. The admiral was a true-hearted, able man, with the vigor and clear vision of a good sea captain. Born in Philadelphia, in 1851, he became in due time a trained seaman in the U. S. Navy, and advanced step by step until he reached the top, retiring from active service as rear-admiral.

At the beginning of this war he commanded and took across the water the first Red Cross ship on its errand of noble mercy. In New York he was at home, having for some years had oversight of certain naval affairs of the port. He had sailed the great deep of the oceans from land to land in all latitudes, but his name, however, is far wider known among the people of America, for his connection with the Queen of Flowers—the Rose. When he named the beautiful yellow Rose, which grows to perfection from Long Island to Vancouver, from ocean to ocean, it was after the one he loved best—his wife. Here lay in his character the sentiment for that which is beautiful—the strong man for whom the great winds and rough waves had no terrors. He had the love of home and beauty in the fiber of his being. "A Rose for every home, a bush for every garden," is a sentiment which makes the world the better. In the American Rose Society, as far as his duties permitted, he was always ready to give a guiding, helping hand. At the entrance of the United States into the war, he resigned his connection with the executive committee work, with a word to the effect, "America first."

His many friends in the American Rose Society have expressed a desire that their esteem and respect for the man, Admiral Aaron Ward, may be a matter of record, as he has left us for the realm, where the spirit of just man is made perfect.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND,
President American Rose Society.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists

ST. LOUIS CONVENTION, AUGUST 20, 21 and 22

INFORMATION SUPPLIED BY THE SECRETARY, 1170 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

The prospects for a successful convention are cheering indeed. In these days of concentrated energy along lines pertaining to the despatch of armies and their provisioning and equipment we are apt to overlook or belittle the importance of matters concerning civil industries. It is pleasing to note that many of those connected directly or indirectly with the florist trade have no misgivings regarding the stability of business in their respective lines, and are prepared to take advantage of the trade exhibition in St. Louis to increase or renew their relations with the trade visitors at the convention.

Among the earliest to seek reservations at our annual exhibitions were the following:

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.; Burlington Willowware Shops, Burlington, Ia.; Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa.; Chicago Carton Co., Chicago, Ill.; S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Ill.

So far as the trade exhibition is concerned, the plan prepared for the postponed National Flower Show in St. Louis last Spring, which provided for trade exhibits on customary lines, is still in force, that is, the lower floor of Moolah Temple, where the convention is to be held, will house the trade exhibition, and the layout is unchanged. Copies of this plan were widely circulated, and those who contemplate making exhibits may consider these plans as being in full force. In cases where the plans have been mislaid prompt application to the secretary for duplicates should be made. The rate for space is 40c. per sq. ft., and the locations available are all good. Applications for space should be sent to the secretary's office as early as possible for the convention is little more than five weeks distant, and arrangements for it are becoming very active.

A record attendance is expected at the convention, due to the fact that the proceedings will be of more than ordinary interest to florists. A feature of the program will be an address by a representative of the United States Fuel Administration who will speak with authority and, undoubtedly, settle many questions which are at present rather disturbing in the minds of many florists.

National Publicity Campaign

The secretary last week visited Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and nearby points, where he found the florists greatly interested in the publicity campaign. He feels deeply obligated to the many members of the trade who in various ways helped to make his work effective.

The publicity fund is growing but, sad to say, slowly. There is a considerable number of florists who have not yet given the publicity movement their thought and aid. All doubt as to the great value of the campaign to the entire trade is removed. The movement is an admitted success, but what has been attained can only be made of a permanent character by the continuation of the good work.

At the start the committees did not think it would be difficult to raise the required $50,000 for a year's work. We are still, while halfway through the year, far short of the goal—and this with, approximately, 20,000 or more florists who are getting the benefit of the work accomplished. Just think of it. Don't get the idea into your head, Mr. Nonsubscriber, that there are plenty of well-disposed florists to complete this fund without your assistance. Did everyone look at the movement this way there would be no fund, no publicity and, ultimately, perhaps no business. And do not think for one moment that our publicity begins and ends with the advertisements in the magazines. Were we required to pay cash for all the publicity we are getting, at its worth, a million dollar fund would not be too large. So why hold back that contribution? The work done is for your benefit, in your interest, and to your advantage, no matter where you are located, whether you are in a large or small way of business, a grower or a retailer. Help the fund and charge the contribution to your overhead expense—where it belongs on your books—but in reality it is an investment, and one that pays handsomely. Reach for your check book now, this minute, get the matter off your mind, and become conscious of the fact that you have done your duty, both to yourself and the trade.

There is still on hand a good supply of stickers for use on envelopes, boxes, packages and the like, miniature reproductions of our slogan sign, "Say it with Flowers." There are three sizes, 2in. 4in. and 6in. long, all in the original colors. There are also a number of sets of lantern slides for use in moving picture houses. There are four slides to the set, each handsomely colored, designed to cover completely any screen on which they are projected; these slides make cheap but effective advertising.

Co-operation and advice, Mr. Florist, you most likely will need before we get through, so join the S. A. F. and become entitled to it. Sign up now.

Obituary

John Schweiger

John Schweiger, head of the firm of J. Schweiger & Son, florists, Pittsburgh, Pa., died June 25, aged 80 years. He came to this country when a boy and was one of the oldest inhabitants of West View, where he lived. He is survived by his widow, two daughters and three sons.

Jacob C. Spencer

Jacob C. Spencer, who for a number of years, conducted a greenhouse and florist's shop at Utica, N. Y., died on June 28, at the age of 72. He was well known in his section of the State and had been a resident of Utica since 1876. For a number of years he was secretary of the Utica Florists' Club. He is survived by his widow and two daughters.

H. Frederick Byxbee

H. Frederick Byxbee of Norwalk, Conn., died on June 28, at the age of 63. He had for many years successfully grown the old-fashioned fragrant Daphne odora, which he made a specialty. Last Fall he had thousands of plants when the cool weather set in, but was unable to get coal, so that long before this Spring his entire stock was killed by frost. The loss of the results of his life's work undoubtedly affected his health and had much to do with his death. An appreciative note concerning his work will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Norwalk, Conn. R. G. H.

Rear-Admiral Aaron Ward, U. S. N.

Rear-Admiral Aaron Ward, a famous amateur rosarian, died of heart disease in his 67th year at his country home, "Willowmere," Roslyn, N. Y., on July 5. After his retirement in 1912, Rear-Admiral Ward lived in Roslyn, where he spent his time cultivating Roses. His garden was known throughout this country and Europe. He kept a log in which he recorded the date of planting of each Rose bush and its progress. He was accustomed in the Summer to rise at 5 o'clock in the morning to cultivate his flowers. He wrote a little book called "One Year of Rose Work," the proceeds of which he gave to the American Ambulance Fund. In his garden he had more than 3000 Rose bushes, and when he exhibited for charitable purposes persons came from great distances to see them. The well-known Mrs. Aaron Ward was named for his wife, who studied Rose culture under M. Pernet, the famous French floriculturist. The Rear-Admiral kept a ship barometer in his garden to guide him in his planting and cultivating.

Seed Trade Selling Experience in Spring, 1918

The seed house which supplied us with the notes following on the difficulties attending the handling of a retail seed business this past season, has not unduly emphasized them.

All seedsmen have had these experiences more or less seriously, according to the nature of their business. Readers of THE EXCHANGE may feel a certain satisfaction in being assured that they are having company in their miseries. One of the laughable things these days (if it is permitted to laugh) is when two men get together and compare notes. One listens to the complaints of the other, then says: "But you know my conditions are so different from yours"; whereas, to tell the truth, their trials and tribulations are traceable to the same first cause.

The following is a brief narration of seed trade obstacles encountered Spring of 1918 as against the placid methods of other days. The story comes from a large seed house:

"In my opinion the seed trade has never experienced a season like the one which has just passed away. I have spent my entire life in it and feel safe in making this statement.

"We began the present season with short crops of many varieties. This was followed by conditions of transportation almost beyond description; for instance, one carload of Beans was four months on the way from California. Even at the present writing (early June) we have shipments out made months ago that have not yet been delivered to us. Unfortunately, seeds cannot be manufactured to meet the demands.

"The period has been one of great trouble and heavy expense, because in conforming to our regular plan we had to back order all such items as we had en route, and it was found necessary not only to notify the customer that certain items were being back-ordered, but later to write again to tell him why the goods had not been shipped. Much of our help was green on account of labor conditions, so thousands of customers who were not notified at the proper time could not understand the delay and wrote in demanding action. Naturally, this congested our correspondence department; literally thousands of explanatory letters were mailed out each day, but at that we could not keep up with the complaints which in many instances were from causes entirely beyond our control. Hundreds of letters crossed each other, necessitating additional letters. Finally, when the season got too far along for certain varieties it was again necessary to write customers refunding their money and giving them the reason therefor, although the goods they wanted were still en route to us. Many customers could not understand conditions, were displeased that we held their money, and did not refund it in time for them to endeavor to get the seeds from other sources—these customers, when they wrote, being unfamiliar with the fact that the items on which we held their money until the end of the season were items which could not be procured from any other source.

"It is safe to say that while we have had a big year, the correspondence involved in doing business this year, which was three to four times as heavy as in previous years, materially reduced the profits."

We are astonished at the endurance of our soldiers in the trenches and on the battlefield, and wonder in ourselves where they get the strength to stand it all. The difficulties faced by men in business cannot begin to compare with those borne by the men serving under the Colors; the former are not risking their lives hour by hour, although some may fall from business worries. We should look upon our trials with equanimity, feeling assured that we at least have a fair chance for our lives; meanwhile, we are storing up experience which we could not otherwise have had and which undoubtedly will serve us in good stead in other years to come. So let us plug along faithfully, keeping up a bright mentality, refusing to be made downhearted by the difficulties surrounding us, knowing that we are doing well our part. When the exigency is over we will have any number of satisfying reminiscences, and be fully recouped for all we have gone through, possessing a pride which will be justly ours after having faced the issue boldly and having gone through it with honor unscathed, even though our bank account may have been seriously depletted.

Trade Opinion in California on Plant Exclusion

It has been the dream of plant optimists in California that "some day" her growers would supply the markets of this country with the major portion of their economic and ornamental plants, just as she now does with her surplus orchard products. In this direction there are beginnings—the nucleus of what under intelligent exploitation and development will in the near future grow into a recognized and profitable industry. In seed production the foundation has already been substantially created and, as population increases and markets expand, there is every reason to believe that commercial plant growing will not only follow, but that it will eventually assume proportions in keeping with similar lines in Europe. Allowing for these premises it naturally follows that the discussion in THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE appeals at a different angle than it does in New York City, the chief import city of the nation. This, however, does not imply that the florists and nurserymen are blind to the fact that the subject must be approached along broad and sane lines; any precipitous prohibitive measures are quite apt to produce disturbances in the ordinary channels of trade. Hence, when THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE suggested that I "feel out" the trade on this subject, there were those who were averse to going into print in a discussion, while others plead ignorance of the economic and quarantine measures that plant exclusion involved. In carrying out the wishes of Mr. De La Mare, the aim has been to learn trade opinion in both Northern and Southern California. In two cases opinions are positive and emphatic, in others the matter is viewed more leniently.

Lester L. Morse Interested in Winning the War

From the general tone of the letter of Lester L. Morse, of the Pioneer Seed House of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, it is obvious that he is more interested in winning the war than plant restriction, for which we beg the privilege of tendering him a salute of 21 guns; but here is the body of his letter to the writer complete: "I have your favor of the 13th inst., and have read the article in THE EXCHANGE of June 1, to which you refer. One paragraph in the first column of the article states that there would be no embargo on exclusion of the importation of ordinary farm, vegetable and flower seeds, which are usually imported in large quantities from Europe, which statement disposes of practically all the matters we are interested in. We will be interested in the restriction or exclusion of nursery stock only in a general way, since we handle but very few plants, and these principally through the Vallance Nursery Co. In the writer's opinion, however, it is almost a waste of time to talk about developing anything in the horticultural line during the period of the war. There isn't labor enough now, nor equipment to handle especially new lines of luxuries at that. After the war, the American people will probably want to buy where they can buy the cheapest, as they have always done, to a large extent. I can feel but little interest in any progressive measures now that are not actually confined to the prosecution of the war and the feeding and clothing of our people and our Allies."

D. W. Coolidge Votes "No Exclusion"

D. W. Coolidge, president of the Coolidge Rare Plant Gardens, of Pasadena, is not only a good story teller but a man of opinions and convictions. After reading his letter I am afraid my New York friends will be asking him to join the 217th Aero Squadron now stationed at Garden City (and of which the son of the writer is a member) where they will be able to "get at him," especially when bouquets are taking place. Coolidge votes "No," as follows: "I am unalterably opposed to the proposition or measure tending to exclude all foreign grown plants. Southern California, noted far and wide for its ornamental and economic vegetation, would not have much to show were we to rely on domestic or American plants entirely. In looking over any of our prominent gardens, one will see fully 90 per cent. exotic plants. However, I have always contended that America should grow much of the material that heretofore has been imported; but for Heaven's sake, do not put out of business a concern like the Coolidge Rare Plant Gardens that was organized and is carried on for the purpose of constantly adding to the wealth of our flora by bringing in from all possible sources new species and varieties of ornamental and economic plants. I vote NO."

Favors Exclusion of Imports

John S. Armstrong, head of the Armstrong Nurseries of Ontario, strongly reflects the idea advanced at the beginning of this page. He says: "The oft repeated quotation 'Necessity is the mother of invention' we believe thoroughly applies to this subject. We are firmly of the opinion that the growing of stocks, and nursery stock in general, which have been imported, will not be developed in the United States to the extent that it should be developed until importations are excluded. It also occurs to us that the main difficulty in this matter is a lack of co-operation on the part of the nurserymen in all parts of the United States, particularly the western and eastern nurserymen, and the sooner we get together and find the best localities for growing certain stock and commence development along this line the better off we will be. Answering your direct questions regarding growing, prices, transportation charges, etc., we are firmly of the opinion that these matters can all be worked out and the ultimate outcome will be to elevate the standard of the nursery business in the United States."

Chas. W. Ward, Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Eureka, Cal., who has made large investments, particularly along decorative and nursery products at that point, is strong in his assertions that practically all the decorative material now imported from abroad can be produced within certain defined areas in California, principally along the coast. The stocks of decoratives he mentions as being within the possibilities of successful commercial growing include all the hardy Azaleas, Rhododendrons, Boxwoods, Myrtles and all broad leaved as well as coniferous evergreens, and all florist flowering plants which are forced for Easter or Christmas. Additionally, Gloxinias, Tuberous Begonias, Cyclamen, Gladioli and all the Lilies; Manetti stocks for grafting, and plum stocks can be grown anywhere along the California coast, while Apple, Pear, Quince and Cherry stocks can be grown commercially in many sections throughout the country.

Mr. Ward appears to favor the importation of decorative stocks for propagation purposes through the Department of Agriculture.

These letters fairly reflect trade opinion in California bearing on the matter of plant exclusion. From a careful reading, added to what is "talked on the street," it is fair to assume that California is for exclusion only in moderation. The factors that loom large are the possible introduction of pests and disease which, under intelligent regulation can be largely controlled; war conditions, which render labor high and often unavailable, hence retards development along lines calculated to foster and promote investments in enterprises of this kind; and finally the want of a co-operative spirit, a continuity of purpose and a cohesiveness in the trade that will give encouragement to home enterprise, home initiative and home production, not only in the way of purchase, but in the more essentials of investing its capital in a way that will insure home supplies. Will conditions have become so changed when once peace is established as to give the American nursery trade a new rebirth and imbue it with the important advantages the country possesses to produce a large per cent. of what it has been in the habit of importing? Echo answers, will it?

HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

Americanizing German Names of Plants

Editor Florists' Exchange:

The plan proposed in some quarters to change the names of Roses and other flowers to the writer seems both unjust and absurd; unjust in that the originators surely had a right to name the variety and also are entitled to all the honors that go with it, which would mean a perpetuation of a name unless the changes were made for some good reason, commercial or otherwise.

The originators of many good Roses bearing German names have long since gone to their reward. They were men who had no quarrel with us, nor with the great country to which we belong. Therefore let us hold their memory in veneration; and let us also respect the Germans living here amongst us who are loyal and true to the Stars and Stripes. Let us save our shots for our foes, not venting our spleen on our friends; let us discriminate between the two, and let us be fair and just.

Fertilizing Value of Wood Ashes

Owing to the well-known shortage of potassium in the form of potash salts, wood ashes furnish one of the most available sources of this element. They also possess many desirable qualities as a fertilizer. The following facts concerning the fertilizing value of various sorts of wood ashes and the quantity of ash per ton are taken from recent Commercial Reports:

Wood	Chemical element percentage
	Phosphorus	Potassium	Calcium	Sulphur	Magnesium
Oak (without bark)...	16.95	34.80	22.40	2.73	16.50
Oak (with bark)	4.37	7.25	76.50	1.50	4.92
Larch (without bark).	7.70	23.52	45.10	2.07	13.22
Larch (leaves).....	16.25	22.73	26.50	3.65	10.50
Spruce (without bark).	2.45	19.60	33.90	2.60	11.20
Beech.....	6.75	28.60	37.60	1.35	11.20
Birch (without bark)..	14.70	23.60	19.00	1.65	16.45
Pine.....	7.85	16.85	30.20	4.27	9.75
Acacia.....	27.60	40.00	9.77	5.10	6.34

According to Bottinger, 21.27 per cent. of wood ash is soluble and is composed of these chemicals in the proportions indicated: Carbonate of potassium, 15.40 per cent.; sulphate of potassium, 2.27 per cent.; carbonate of sodium, 3.40 per cent.; and chloride of sodium, 0.20 per cent.

Vegetable ash in general contains many chemical constituents, such as carbonates, phosphates, sulphates, silicates, chlorides, bromide of sodium, calcium, magnesia, and potassium. From a fertilizing standpoint the potash is of primary importance, and in this connection it might be mentioned that the following amounts of ash and potash remain as the result of burning one ton of any of the different woods and plants here indicated:

	Ash, pounds	Potash, pounds		Ash, pounds	Potash, pounds
Spruce.....	7.50	1.00	Ferns (or bracken)	80.25	9.37
Beech.....	12.78	2.80
Ash.....	26.90	1.63	Wormwood plant (Artemisia Absinthium).....	214.73	160.93
Oak.....	29.76	3.31
Elm.....	55.11	8.60
Willow.....	61.73	6.28	Fumaria plant (Fumaria)...	482.81	174.16
Grapevine.....	74.95	12.12

On a general average there is between 6 and 10 percent of potash in woodash

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

Resurrecting Old and Devising New Uses for Flowers

The writer tells two stories by way of introduction—Wreaths of flowers in the hair for men and women—Decking the bridal chamber with flowers—The boutonniere—Flowers in place of confections—

JOSEPH H. SPERRY

SOME of our retail florists, fortunately not in the majority, we are glad to say, are sticklers for precedent. It is to the large, live-wire minority which form the exception that credit is due for whatever progress is made by the retail florist. It would seem that there is a good opportunity in this business for still more progressives that it may make that advance which is seen in other lines.

Speaking of precedent reminds us of the story of the old man who had a large farm and likewise a large family. When his sons and daughters married they brought their wives and their husbands back to the farm and lived there in common, the old patriarch holding a pretty tight rein over them all. Each Autumn they were accustomed to kill a fat steer for the Winter's supply of beef. A rope was hitched on the steer's head and he was led into the big barn up to a certain block, standing on which one of the sons struck him on the head between the horns with a maul and, when the steer was felled by the blow, cut his throat. One Autumn a refractory steer refused to be led or drawn up to the block, and one of the sons advancing on the steer with the maul said, "Confound this steer, if he will not come up to the block let us kill him where he is." "Stop, stop," cried the old patriarch, " my father stood on that block to kill the steers, and I stood on it, and you boys have stood on it; pull the steer up to the block, pull him up to the block." Many men in every line of business, like the old patriarch, never violate precedent, but always "pull the steer up to the block."

The sticklers for precedent and the conservatives for the most part "belong in the same boat." You may have heard of the two men, the one a progressive and the other a conservative, who slept one night in a double bedded room at a hotel. The progressive came in and went to bed first, but before retiring opened a couple of windows to admit fresh air. When the conservative came in he exclaimed, "I can't stand this night air (an old theory) in my room," and he closed the windows. In the morning as they were dressing, the conservative said, "The air in this room seems to be in a very fixed condition." "Yes," said the progressive, "and, confound you, you fixed it." These sticklers for precedent or conservatives, call them which you please, in any line of business often "fix" the business, that is, prevent progress.

When ancient Greece and Rome and the other Mediterranean nations, and those still farther east were in their palmy days, not only the women wore wreaths of flowers and foliage in their hair, but the men, too, were accustomed at their banquets to wear wreaths of foliage on their heads. Julius Cæsar paid little attention to the scurrilous attacks upon him in poetry and in public speeches, but he was very sensitive about his bald head and, it is said, was exceedingly gratified when the Roman Senate voted him the privilege of wearing all the time the Laurel wreath on his head, because this concealed his baldness. The Romans usually went about with uncovered heads. You may smile, Mr. Florist, and probably will make some sarcastic remark, if you are a conservative, but I am going to tell you that you could, by using a little tact and diplomacy, revive this custom of both women and men wearing wreaths at banquets. You might introduce it anew first at some college banquet, or banquet of the younger women and men. We attended the annual Greek ball in New York City, a few years ago, and we noted how the beauty of the pretty Greek girls and handsome Greek matrons was enhanced by the wreaths of Smilax and flowers which they wore in their hair, and we noticed one or two of the younger Greek men also wearing wreaths. In one of Owen Meredith's poems we read:

"She was at Paris, at the opera there,
And she looked like a queen in a book that night
With the wreath of pearls in her raven hair
And the brooch on her breast so bright."

Every woman cannot afford to wear a wreath of pearls in her hair but many can wear a wreath of foliage and flowers.

When the queen in Shakespeare's "Hamlet" was standing by Ophelia's open grave, she said:

"Sweets to the Sweet: farewell!
I hoped thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife;
I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,
And not to have strewed thy grave."

From this and other passages in literature we learn that there was a beautiful old custom of decking with flowers the bridal chamber, a custom which it would be easy to revive upon the occasion of the newly married couple returning from their bridal trip to the apartment or house where they were going to live.

When Charles Dickens visited this country, more than a half century ago, he wore at the public readings which he gave, a boutonnière on his coat lapel, and it is said by so doing introduced that custom in this country. This custom on some festive occasions still obtains to an extent, and with some gentlemen it is an every day habit, but has never been encouraged and pushed by the retail florists as it ought to be. It is in just as good taste for the business and professional man to wear a Rosebud or Carnation or some other appropriate flower on his lapel each day as it is for a woman to indulge in the very pretty habit of wearing a corsage of flowers when traveling or when out calling or on business.

It is quite customary for a gentleman who is invited to dinner or tea or to pass the evening at the home of friends to take with him and present to his hostess a box of candy. If retail florists would persistently suggest to their customers a box of flowers instead of one of confections, it would in time have its desired effect and increase the flower business.

The use of natural flowers in Summer on ladies' hats for wearing on morning walks or rides or at garden parties, was inaugurated in Europe some years ago, and the custom was later introduced into this country, but was never taken up and encouraged by retail florists as vigorously as it should have been.

If through the efforts of retail florists the custom of wearing boutonnières should become common, it would mean a daily sale of a million or more Carnations and Roses for that purpose in New York City alone. Furthermore, the introduction into this country of the other ways of which we have spoken of using flowers, namely, the wearing of wreaths of flowers and foliage on festive occasions, the decking of bridal chambers, and the reviving of the custom of trimming ladies' Summer hats with flowers, would add greatly to the volume of the retail florist's business.

The retail florist should be ever alert to see new uses also for flowers on all social and festive occasions, both private and public. In closing we will make just one suggestion as to new uses of flowers, an iconoclastic suggestion indeed, because it overthrows one of the old conceptions of the proper use of flowers. The suggestion is this: Men in all walks of life are equally as fond of flowers as women, and it is just as appropriate that a man or a woman should present a man with a bouquet, for almost any of the various reasons for which bouquets are usually presented, as it is for a man to give a bouquet to a woman. I hear some florist exclaim "This suggestion is ultra and revolutionary and visionary." Our answer is there is need of a wider vision in the retail florist business and of blazing out new trails

Dards' War Savings Stamp Window

The accompanying picture shows a War Savings Stamp window at Dards', Madison ave. at 44th st., New York The scene is laid in the Vosges Mountains, France. In the center is a dugout, with a soldier within and just over the entrance is the emblem "Buy W. S. S. now." A shell is bursting over the door. The dugout is surrounded by barbed wire.

In the foreground, to the left of the dugout, there is a "tank" at rest, and in the background, to the right,

Chas. A. Dards' War Savings Stamp Window —See Text

"tank" in motion climbing a hill. To the left there is a ruined mountain village with a military railroad and a train moving up to the front line trenches, and a telephone line and flags, and W. S. S. emblems, and there are other American flags and W. S. S. emblems several points in the scene.

The mountain effect is produced by the use of broken stone and trees. Overhead there are two observation balloons and also a battle plane, run by electricity, and circling continually around above the dugout.

Our readers will recall that Chas. A. Dards is chairman of the Florists' War Savings Stamp Committee. Mr. Dards is devoting practically all of his time to this and to Red Cross work, and to getting subscriptions for the maintenance of the French orphans whose fathers have been killed in the war, until they become self-supporting.

Mr. Perry, Mr. Dards' store manager, is also giving nearly all of his time out of business hours to patriotic service.

Your Supply of Wire and Paper Boxes

In view of the reports of a possible increase in the cost of wire, in fact, even an actual shortage, the following will undoubtedly interest EXCHANGE readers. I had an interview with a man well posted on the wire market and he would advise all florists, particularly in the East, to buy next Winter's requirements before Sept. 1. Anything in the line of corrugated paper boxes should be bought immediately, as there already exists a shortage in the most popular sizes. Advertisements of reliable firms selling the above articles will be found in THE EXCHANGE.

The Movie Star Window Display that is Different

ERNEST A. DENCH

The movie star photo window is not by any means novel, but there are new ways of putting across the same stunt and by so doing reviving public interest. A recent window display by a New York florist was only an adaptation of an idea which originated in the motion picture magazines, yet it attracted extraordinary attention because it was used in an unfamiliar place.

Enclosing the window at the back was a wallboard in three sections joined together. Fastened to the two side sections were kodak pictures of a famous film star at home. The little snapshots showed such incidents as the screen idol resting in a hammock, digging in her garden, walking in the fields, basking on the beach, in the hall of her home, playing billiards and, finally, resting by the fireside.

On the middle panel was a card which said:

Film Stars are only human. They appreciate home comforts as much as you and I do.

To make your home look cheerful take home some flowers.

Exactly how the florist in question obtained the informal snapshots I do not know, but the usual way is to communicate with the star personally, asking for the loan of some snapshots. If the star considers the publicity will increase her popularity, her press agent will send them to you. The ideal floral window display is the one which displays the florist's products in the front and leaves a little room for the motion pictures tie-up at the back.

If you find it impossible to obtain suitable snapshots from either of these two sources, invest 15c. or 20c. on a motion picture magazine. Select for your purpose an article on some player's home life, clip the informal photographs with which the story is illustrated and mount the pictures neatly on a wallboard. Do not remove the captions when clipping the illustrations.

Try to select some star who is popular locally. She may not be filmdom's greatest star, for the extent of a star's popularity depends a great deal as to whether or not her pictures are screened in the town. You may be in a town or community where no Mary Pickford or Douglas Fairbanks pictures are screened, consequently if the local theaters show productions featuring Lillian Walker and Edward Earle and other players not quite so prominent, these stars will be more popular on account of the peculiar local conditions. It is well to bear these facts in mind because then the effectiveness of your movie star window display will be increased.

Combating "Please Omit Flowers"

The increasing use of the request "Please omit flowers" in funeral notices is being given specific attention by the publicity committee of the Cleveland, Ohio, Florists' Club. That the practice is growing in proportions and exerting its detrimental influence upon the business of the florist is undeniable; indeed, in a recent list of 24 deaths in a daily paper in that city six, or 25 per cent. of the entire number, requested the omission of flowers. That something must be done effectually to counteract the spread of this sentiment is imperative, according to the committee, which has appropriated $200 for use during July and August for publicity designed to counteract the movement. Although a subject that must necessarily be approached with extreme care and tact, there is little doubt that this brief but constructive campaign will be productive of much good. J. McL.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

R. K. Pohl of Brooklyn, N. Y., is with the 27th Division abroad.

W. M. Williams, Mahopac, N. Y., is now fighting in France.

Paul B. Reinhard, York, Pa., is in the National Army.

Eugene Shellem, son of Mrs. John A. Shellem of Philadelphia, is in the Army.

Leo Le Gierse of Philadelphia has been made sergeant in the Engineering Corps, and is somewhere "over there."

M. H. Wilson, florist of Lakewood, O., has been called to the colors.

Herbert Schneider, in the employ of A. Lange, Chicago, Ill., has joined the Colors. This makes eight stars in the service flag of the firm.

William Reid, well known to the seed trade in Chicago, having been connected with the W. W. Barnard Co. of that city for several years, has joined the British Field Artillery and will leave for Canada this week.

Phil Foley, Jr., of Chicago, has enlisted in the aviation department at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

Curtis Kindler, well known to the florist trade from his connection with the Raedlein Basket Co., of Chicago, has enlisted in the Navy, and has reported for duty at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

Arthur Weber, son of the late Fred Weber, Bowmanville, who has been managing the greenhouses, has been called in the draft and reported for service on June 22.

Robert Roland, eldest son of Thomas Roland of Nahant, Mass., who has been in the Ambulance Corps in France and Italy for the past year, arrived home on the night of July 3.

John Dowd, formerly buyer for Thomas F. Galvin of Boston, Mass., has been promoted to sergeant and is at Fort Warren, Boston.

"A glorious death is his,
Who for his country falls."

Adolph Cornell

Among the first florist heroes to give up his life for his country must be recorded the name of Adolph Cornell, late employee of the Bon Ton Flower Shop, South Manchester, Conn., killed in action in France June 19. The deceased was 22 years old, a member of Company G, 102d Infantry, 26th Division. On June 11 this year he was made a sergeant. He had previously seen service on the border during the Mexican trouble and went to France early in the war. He is survived by his father, mother, one sister and one brother.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Last week's market was in fair condition and stock was in good supply. Sales were quite satisfactory, though there has been no special rush since July 1. Floral work is the only business the merchants can figure on. No complaints can be made so far with the condition of the market. JOSEPH A. MCGUIRE.

Lancaster, Pa.

Walter Hammond says that trade is about normal; there is nothing startling about it. Mr. Hammond points out that a shoe dealer says that two years ago the average price paid for shoes was $3 to $5; today these shoes are hard to sell, but the ones ranging from $8 to $12 are the main sellers. The same applies to the men's furnishing business; two years ago the sale of $5 and $6 silk shirts was rare, whereas today the sale of a $12 shirt is common. These rules do not apply to the florist's business. Why?

Harry Schroyer's eye trouble is improving rapidly.

J. F. Johnson has sold his greenhouses and is going out of the business. For many years he was a prominent figure on the markets.

Fred Ritchy is building some new houses out of the material from the Bachler range which he bought a year ago. Just what he is going to do with them he has not yet decided, as the 50 per cent. coal allotment will not heat any additional glass.

We are all looking forward to the picnic at the B. F. Barr farm on the 18th; if we don't have a good time it will not be through any fault of the Ladies' Auxiliary, nor of Mr. and Mrs. Barr.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Business continues to hold up well in this section. Stock is not plentiful. Roses and Carnations are still to be had in limited quantities. Roses continue to be of excellent quality, especially Ophelia and Prima Donna. A few Pink and White Killarney are offered. There are also some good Russells. American Beauty Roses are about off the market for a short while. Sunburst and Wards are holding their own well and sell readily. The Carnations on the market are excellent for this time of year; they are not sufficient to meet the demand.

Gladioli are arriving in larger quantities and sell well. We are expecting larger shipments soon and naturally the price will drop. They have been selling at $8 and $10 per 100. Good Lilies are at a premium, as only a few reach this market. There are some Asters coming now which help out. Larger shipments are due the coming week.

There is still a goood demand for all kinds of garden flowers and some good stock is seen. Delphinium is still of good quality and sells well. Valley is good but does not go as well as it did in June. All kinds of greens are moving briskly. Outdoor Sweet Peas are now arriving in larger quantities; they are unusually fine. N. McC.

Stamford (Conn.) Hort. Society

A very successful Summer show open to the public was held on July 5 at Moose Hall, Stamford. The Hall was well filled with noteworthy exhibits of Sweet Peas, perennials and vegetables. Judges were, H. Wild, W. Morrow and A. Wynne.

An interesting meeting took place in the evening. Mr. Whitehouse received the prize for the best paper on any horticultural subject by an assistant gardener. His subject was "Orchid Culture."

Productivity of Carnations

A. P. Wezel talked on Carnations from a productive standpoint, having kept a record during the past season. His varieties averaged as follows: Alice 23, Enchantress 20, Enchantress Supreme, Beacon, Matchless and Mrs. C. W. Ward 15, White Enchantress 14, Benora, Belle Washburn and Cottage Maid, 12, Princess Dagmar 11, White Perfection 10, and Good Cheer 9, giving an average of 15 flowers for all, from Nov. 1 until July 1. Belle Washburn is well thought of, and never splits. It was voted that the society invest $100 in War Savings Stamps. Two new and one honorary members were elected and three applications received. A. P. WEZEL, Corr. Sec'y, Noroton, Conn.

Practical Landscape Gardening

ROBT. B. CRIDLAND

Never has any technical book been so heartily appreciated by florists and nurserymen. Read what W. F. Webb of the Guaranty Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y., said of it:

"I have looked this book through carefully and it seems to me that it fills a long felt want which our salesmen would appreciate. While it is true that not all nursery salesmen may be able to grasp the essence of this book, still it is the exceptional men who really do want to learn what there is to landscape gardening and who lay the foundations to our business. I would like to be able to furnish every man on my force with one of these books. It is the best book on the subject I have ever seen and I try to keep familiar with all the literature published on landscape gardening."

Second Edition Just Fresh From Our Presses

Magnificently illustrated with 91 photographic reproductions—pictures which teach—67 sketches and 33 plans with planting keys. The book is not only at your command for the information desired, but it is as well a splendid book to interest your customers in. It encourages them to buy your products, for they feel they must emulate at least some of the good landscape features they see scattered so freely throughout its 266 pages. A Notable Grower of Daphne odora

The following appreciation of the work of H. Frederick Byxbee was sent in by a friend, together with Mr. Byxbee's obituary, which appears on another page.

There are men in many trades with the spirit of the artist. There are more than a few of such fortunates among florists. H. Frederick Byxbee of Norwalk, Conn., was of these. At one time he grew Violets for the market, but for the last 35 of his 63 years his real interest was in Daphne odora. For 20 years his houses on Toilsome Road, three miles out from Norwalk, had been given over to this one flower.

Three years ago he numbered his plants at 10,000. This great stock ranged from year-old slips 2in. high, to 20-year-old shrubs 8ft. tall. To see his houses in bloom and to drink in the fragrance of their thousands upon thousands of flowers was an experience never to be forgotten.

On the one occasion on which I went from Philadelphia to Norwalk, at January's end, to visit him, the day was mild and Mr. Byxbee had opened his houses so that the sweetness of his Daphnes might greet my companion and myself before we were near enough to see them. This was in 1916, a year of as full bloom as his plants had known.

I did not see them in 1917. Mr. Byxbee was not well that Spring and Summer, and last Winter found neither his health nor his supply of fuel sufficient to meet the Winter's rigor. His houses were frozen. Not more than 150 of his plants survived. They had been his all.

His entire stock of plants had come from one that his grandmother had owned. A niece had been named Daphne because of his devotion to this sweetest of old-time house plants. To have his Daphnes in good up-keep, with leaves glossy and thickly studded with pink and white flowers, was to him a satisfaction exactly of a kind the painter or sculptor enjoys in his completed labor. What did it matter if he did only a few hundred dollars' worth of business a Winter? He had grown perfect specimens of what was to him the most beautiful of flowers. What more could man ask of life? Then they froze. What more had life for him? He had little, too little, to live for, so he gave up. He did not survive the ruin of his Daphnes many months.

The Market

July 9.—In the wholesale cut flower market there is a little activity on Saturdays and Mondays and a very small demand during the other days of the week. The funeral this week of ex-Mayor Mitchel has caused a considerable demand for orchids and the higher grades of the Roses and Lilies and a few other flowers. If it were not for such occasional spasmodic demands as this, the cut flower market would be in a very bad condition most of the time. The general supply of flowers, though increasing, is not at this time unseasonably large. The trouble lies in the weak demand.

American Beauty Roses are in fair supply and today (Tuesday) they are meeting with a little better demand. Special grade blooms are selling at from 10c. to 30c. each and the other grades at corresponding prices. The supply of hybrid tea Roses, though not excessive, is more than enough for the present demand. Top grade blooms are selling at from 3c. to 6c. each in general, with occasional small sales at 8c. for preferred varieties, and No. 2 grade blooms at from 50c. to $1 per 100.

There is a seasonably large supply of Carnations. The cool weather favors the quality. The general range of prices on account of the limited demand is from 25c. to $1.50 per 100.

The supply of Cattleya orchids is very limited. Today the variety gigas is selling at from $1 to $1.50 each and Harrisonii at about 25c. each. There is little Lily of the Valley in the market. The best of this is realizing from $5 to $10 per 100. There is an abundant supply of both white and pink Lilies, both of which are moving slowly, the former at $4 to $6 per 100, and the latter at from $3 to $4 per 100.

The market is moderately well supplied with the usual kinds and varieties of Summer flowers and indoor and outdoor grown greens, which are meeting with a small demand.

Rear-Admiral Aaron Ward, U.S.N., retired, died at his home at "Willowmere," Roslyn, L. I., on July 6. He was one of the most successful and most noted amateur rosarians in this country. See obituary page.

Leon P. Russell, of Russell Bros., Syracuse, N. Y., was a caller at THE EXCHANGE office on Wednesday of this week. Mr. Russell was on his way to Washington, D. C., where he hoped to see Wm. F. Gude, and, if possible, Mr. Noyes in reference to an exemption so that with the aid of the local Fuel Administrator at Syracuse he may obtain from the coal dealers a 50 per cent. supply of hard coal.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co., 129 West 28th st., has vacated its store, and E. J. Van Reypen, for several years manager of this company, is receiving his mail and express matter at Riedel & Meyer's, 49 West 28th st.

John Engebrod, head salesman for Badgley & Bishop, 34 W. 28th st., is now on his annual vacation.

James Rutz, who has charge of the Rose department at J. S. Fenrich's, 51 W. 28th st., is passing his vacation at Kingston, N. Y.

The death of ex-Mayor Mitchel has kept many of the florists of this city busy executing large orders for funeral designs, in which the higher grades of the choicer kinds of flowers have been used.

Muarice Glass, a member of the N. Y. Florists' Club's committee on gathering flowers for distribution at the base hospitals, received a letter from Mrs. J. Clark Curtin, chairman of the Home and Overseas Relief Division, in which she expresses her personal appreciation of the generous gifts of flowers received, and telling what joy they are giving "our boys." As an instance of one day: "One-half of these flowers were taken to the Flower and Park Hospitals; of the other half, some were left at the Willard Parker, where are boys with contagious diseases; some were taken to Bellevue to cheer some French boys. In passing a troop train on our way to the naval hospital, a Rose was thrown to each of the boys, until finally 200 wore boutonnières. The pleasure the flowers gave these weary, travel-stained boys was immense, one boy taking and kissing his Rose fervently.

Among the growers who have donated plants to Camp Mills are J. Ebb Weir & Co., Ft. Hamilton ave., Brooklyn; George Rogers, Hempstead, L. I.; John Fieber, Metropolitan ave., Brooklyn; John Bracker, East Williston, L. I.

Eliminating Freight Congestion at New York

Plans for a new freight handling system have been formulated by Jas. S. Harlan, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and approved, which are expected to eliminate the freight congestion at the port of New York. Briefly speaking, the idea is an extension of a system prevalent on the railroads of Great Britain, except that this plan goes them one better by bringing all the incoming freight points under control of one management. The new system is along the lines of the store-door delivery service, and involves immediate delivery of incoming freight to consignees by means of an organized drayage system.

Only those trucks having permits will be allowed on the piers or freight stations. Goods for delivery will be arranged according to zones laid out for the city, and in this way a full load secured by each truck. It is predicted there will be a gain of time of 50 per cent. in handling freight. No notice will be given consignees of any freight arriving; no free time will be allowed on the docks, and all inbound freight will be removed immediately on arrival to the store door of the consignee.

Nothing more desirable could well be devised as an aid to the business men of this city, as the losses through truck delays during the past three years or more have been simply incalculable, mounting up into the millions. This service should make for betterment in every direction, saving time, which is a vital factor these days, and the expense of maintaining individual trucking systems.

Boston

Sweet Pea Exhibition

The Sweet Pea exhibition of the Massachusetts Hort. Society, which was held on Saturday, July 6, was rather small and although it was scheduled to be open on Sunday it was closed up on Saturday evening. There were few competitors. Wm. G. Taylor took many prizes in the Sweet Pea classes. The Blue Hill Nurseries had a very fine display of a white perennial Delphinium named Mrs. Eric Wetterlow which received a first-class certificate of merit. This is by far the best white perennial Larkspur I have seen. Well grown fruits and vegetables were also shown by various competitors.

Robert Roland, eldest son of Thomas Roland of Nahant, who has been in the Ambulance Corps in France and Italy for the past year, arrived at home on the night of July 3. Robert Roland is 20 years old and went from Dartmouth College, where he had been a student.

The friends of John Dowd, who was buyer for Thomas F. Galvin for several years, will be pleased to learn that he has been promoted to sergeant and is at Fort Warren, Boston.

Patrick Welch and his family have gone to their Summer home at Old Orchard, Me., for the remainder of the Summer.

Joseph Margolis of the firm of Henry M. Robinson & Co. has gone with family to Sterling, Mass., for a month's stay.

Edward Close, who was employed for many years by Patrick Welch and in charge of his Springdale greenhouses, died on Friday, July 5. The funeral was on Monday, July 8. He was noted as an expert grower of Kaiserin and Carnot Roses. R. C.

Satisfactory Market

July 9.—For a Midsummer market all conditions are quite satisfactory. There is no great supply of stock, but what is offered meets with a ready demand. The shipping business keeps well up to the average for the season, and local trade has been much more active during the past two weeks. Cool weather helps in a great way in holding stock in good condition, and is beneficial to the shipping trade.

The supply of Roses is fair; no more than can be disposed of daily. Mrs. Russell is selling well and Columbia is becoming more popular each day; more of it could be sold if the supply were larger. In all the other varieties there is just about enough, with the exception of White Killarney, which is difficult to obtain in quantities sufficient for the call.

Carnations are also on the scarce side. The season's supply is nearly over and many of the growers have thrown out their plants and are arranging for the new plantings.

The Peony crop of the season is gone. The few in storage will be disposed of before the week is over; with the coming in of the new crop of Gladioli Peonies have lost favor with buyers. Easter Lilies are in good supply and are used largely for funeral work. The orchid supply is short and few good ones are to be had. Valley, while not plentiful, is in sufficient supply for all demands. The new crop of outdoor grown Gladioli is coming in well and is meeting with good demand so far, bringing as high as $8 per 100 for good stock.

In hardy outdoor grown stock, including annuals, perennials and shrubbery, as well as field flowers, there is a large variety of stock offered, prominent among which is Delphiniums, Centaureas, Shasta Daisies, Candytuft, Coreopsis, Gaillardias Phlox, Gypsophila, Tiger Lilies, Deutzias, Pyrethrum, Pond Lilies, Bullrushes, and many other odds and ends of stock from the fields and gardens. All move well but the price is low.

Sunday Closing

Sunday closing of the wholesale houses became effective last Sunday and the prevailing opinion is that it is quite satisfactory to all concerned. There was sufficient additional business done Saturday to make up for any loss that might be sustained by Sunday closing. The proprietors and employees enjoyed the day

DUE to the cool weather most of the stock is in much better condition than what we usually have it at this season of the year.

The early ASTERS are coming in now. Good Asters would be a desirable acquisition to the cut-flower list at this time.
$2.00 – $3.00 per 100.

From now on, during the summer months, you will need good LILIES and you will always find them here.
$10.00 per 100.

The supply of GLADIOLI is much increasing. Nowhere will you find a larger supply of stock, better grown.
$8.00 per 100.

In small flowers for design work we have plenty of FEVERFEW and CANDYTUFT, in white and lavender.

If you place your cut-flower order with us we can assure you of the greatest amount of satisfaction.

off and came to business Monday morning with a better feeling than ever before.

The movement for Sunday closing among the retail stores is reported to be making considerable headway and it is not unlikely that some concerted action will be taken on this matter very shortly.

The American Railway Express Co. has been in operation during the past week and while it is generally believed that the company will ultimately give better service there are some complaints of the service so far, from the wholesale men. There is a delay in routing the shipments, packages do not get away from Chicago as quickly as they did when each of the old companies handled its own shipping independently. Several complaints have come in during the past few days that stock reached its destination from 12 to 24 hours late. It is hoped, however, that this trouble will be shortly overcome.

H. Dieu Schiller, former vice-president of the Schiller the Florist Co., is at present a fireman on the city fireboat Graeme Stewart, which has been given to the United States Shipping Board's school for firemen.

H. L. Hill, Maquoketa, Ia., L. Albert of the Buckbee Seed & Floral Co., Rockford, Ill., W. A. Rieman, Vincennes, Ind., Dora Brown of the Colonial Flower Shop, Goshen, Ind., and F. C. Weber, St. Louis, Mo., were visitors during the past week.

Mr. Zech, of Zech & Mann, is making arrangements to motor to St. Louis for the S. A. F. convention and is trying to get up a party for the occasion.

T. E. Waters, chairman of the Good of the Club Committee, reports that all arrangements are complete for the grand Midsummer rally of the Florists' Club at Karthauser's Grove on July 18. Pres. F. Lautenschlager will appoint a booster committee to secure from Chicago the largest possible attendance to the S. A. F. convention in St. Louis next month.

W. F. Schofield, 734 N. Clark st., who was hurt in an auto accident last week, is reported to be getting along nicely.

Phil Foley, Jr., has enlisted in the aviation department at the Great Lakes Training Station. Curtis Kindler, well known to the florist trade from his connection with the Raedlein Basket Co., has enlisted in the Navy, and has reported for duty at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. Arthur Weber, son of the late Fred Weber, Bowmanville, who has been managing the greenhouses, has been called in the draft and reported for service on June 22.

The Market

July 9.—The market for the week of the 4th of July was quiet, with a slight increase in the supply. There is a good demand but not as good as for the same period of last year. There is just about enough stock to be had to make the market interesting; for instance, Carnations are selling up to $3 and $4 per 100, an unheard of price for this time of year. As it is replanting time for Carnations the grower is placed in a quandary as to whether to throw out his old plants at these prices. Roses are coming in more freely in the short grades. Long grade stock is in brisk demand. There are no American Beauty Roses on this market. Easter Lilies are in great demand, with a good supply. The Easter Lily is one of the best keeping flowers at this time of the year, or in fact at any other time. Gladioli are increasing, with cleanup sales. There are a few Cattleya Harrisoniæ. There is a medium supply of Sweet Peas that are taking well. Most of the outdoor flowers, such as Hydrangeas, Gypsophila, Candytuft, Coreopsis and Feverfew, are selling well. There is no lack of greens. There are not yet enough Asters to require quoting.

H. H. Battles has closed the Century Flower Shop for July and August.

Mrs. John A. Shellem is closing down her greenhouses on Magazine Lane. Two of her sons are in the Government service: Eugene in the Army and Francis in the merchant marine.

Leo Le Gierse, formerly in business here, has been made a sergeant in the Engineering Corps, and is somewhere "over there."

J. Otto Thilow spoke before the Islip Garden Club of Islip, L. I., N. Y., on June 28, on "Gardening." He also addressed the Easthampton Garden Club of Easthampton, L. I., on Roses on July 9.

The Joseph Heacock Co. are on with a nice Summer crop of Hadley and Ophelia Roses at Roelof's. The orchid houses at Jenkintown are producing excellent Cattleya Harrisoniæ.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving choice Roses in about a dozen varieties.

Paul Berkowitz of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., together with Mrs. Berkowitz, is stopping at one of the famous beach front hotels.

Robert Gaul of the S. S. Pennock Co., is taking his Summer holiday.

Miss Mary A. Baker superintends the Baker establishment at 5 South Mole st. while Wm. J. Baker gives his undivided attention to his war garden.

"RED SNAPPER" PRODUCTS

"THE EXTENSIVELY ADVERTISED LINE"

RED SNAPPER Plant Food is a specially prepared, rich, nutritious yet harmless organic fertilizer made from the fresh heads of the South American Red Snapper fish. Finely pulverized tobacco snuff is mixed with it, making it very rich in analysis, but harmless to plants. It is put up in convenient and attractive containers and sold in a strictly modern way. Our national advertising campaign with copy appearing in the Saturday Evening Post and leading Woman's publications is creating an immediate and big demand for this article. We also furnish to dealers an attractive lithographed counter display stand in five colors and advertising folders for distribution. Progressive dealers handle national advertised goods. The Middle West

Indianapolis, Ind.

There has been considerable funeral work, with many counter orders. Trade is reported as excellent for the season in nearly all the stores.

Quantities of fine giganteum and auratum Lilies are offered at $10 to $15 per 100 wholesale, and $3 to $6 per doz. retail. The Carnation market has been decidedly short at $2 to $3 per 100 wholesale, and 50c. to $1 per doz. retail. Good Summer Roses, home grown and shipped-in stock, are fairly plentiful, at $5 to $10 per 100 for the better grades. Russells bring as high as $20 per 100, as do Columbias and Hoosier Beauties; short stock sells as low as $1. Garden flowers are much in prominence and bring goood prices; among them are Shasta Daisies at $1 to $1.50 per 100; Larkspur at $4 to $5 per 100; Hydrangea arborescens at $2 to $3; Gypsophila at $2 to $3, and Coreopsis at 50c.

Higher Prices Necessary

It is really surprising the way business has maintained itself and if the florists would stop competing among themselves and would raise prices to the public, in keeping with the greatly increased cost of production, we need not to have any fear for the future. Higher prices are being urged in all the local flower circles and a decided increase is looked for by Sept. 1. It has been fully recognized that the flower business in this part of the country is not maintained as are other lines of trade, and the florists are operating on a much narrower basis of profit than they really should. Credits are also lined up more closely and are generally put on the 30-day basis. Much of the trade heretofore controlled by the undertakers can be made profitable only with the strictest of credits, as 20 per cent. and six months' time is not in the general order of things any more.

There will probably be a delegation of 15 or 20 from here to the S. A. F. convention at St. Louis. The various problems confronting the florists at this time, will no doubt cause more to go than in normal times. It is hoped to have those going from the various Indiana cities meet in Indianapolis this year and go as a body as a direct representation from here.

Cleveland, O.

Moderate receipts of stock and a seasonably brisk demand therefor describes the present situation in this market. Gladioli are arriving, but not in sufficient quantities to cut much figure yet. Outdoor Sweet Peas retain their excellence, due to the cool weather, which is also benefiting other stock. Daisies, Gaillardias, Candytuft, Achillea, Cornflowers, Physostegias, Larkspurs and other miscellaneous stock is being offered in abundance and clear up daily.

Am. Beauty Roses are in limited supply but of excellent quality. Receipts of Roses in the longer grades of such varieties as Sunburst, Shawyer, Ophelia, Stanley and Killarney Brilliant, are inadequate to the call. Easter Lilies continue decidedly scarce; in fact there are few to be had in this market. Japanese Lilies are also conspicuous by their absence. Water Lilies are being much favored for use in window displays. Greens of all kinds are abundant.

Mr. and Mrs. James Salmon of Akron, O., spent July 4 calling on Cleveland friends in the trade. Mr. Salmon contemplates closing his business permanently immediately following Thanksgiving.

Albert Heil, of the staff of the Jones-Russell Co., has taken a position with the White Automobile Co.

The Heepe Co., Akron, O., are making preparations for the early occupancy of their new store.

The florists' annual outing will be held later in the month. The entertainment committee usually includes a fine athletic program for this occasion.

J. McL.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Business during the first week of July showed a general falling off in demand except in funeral work. Counter trade has continued fairly well, with plenty of hospital orders to be filled daily. The recent cooler weather has slightly increased the demand and improved the quality. There is no great supply in any line of flowers, and consequently no appreciable surplus after the day's orders are filled. Some excellent Summer Roses are selling well, with Mrs. Chas. Russell leading. Other good varieties offered are: Mrs. Aaron Ward, My Maryland, Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Richmond, and Shawyer. These are retailing for $1 per doz. up to $3. Carnations are about over, the few available being small, and retailing for CCc. and 75c. per doz.

Skinner System Installed at Total Cost of Only $125 per Acre

FOLLOWING is an extract from a letter from E. V. Dane Estate, Brookline, Mass.:

"The cost of installation, figuring labor consumed, amounted to about $125.00 per acre. The actual outlay was for pipe, nozzles, etc., as the work was performed at a time when the labor of our employees was least valuable for other work."

Gladioli are fast becoming prominent; Peace and America are the leading varieties; these bring $1 and $1.50 per doz. Fine, long-stemmed Shasta Daisies sell well. Outdoor Sweet Peas have been greatly benefited by the cooler weather. All other seasonable outdoor flowers are shown in the retail flower shops. Auratum Lilies in pots are good sellers for the sick room, and potted yellow Callas also meet with a fair demand.

Sunday Closing

There is a movement among the retailers to close their stores on Sundays, and many have already started closing at 6 o'clock on Saturday evenings and at 5 o'clock during the week.

Planting of stock in the greenhouses is proceeding as usual, in spite of labor shortage and high wages. Most of the greenhouses have their 'Mum stock already planted.

The local Commercial Club is reorganizing into a Chamber of Commerce, enlarging both its membership and its activities, and many of the florists have been asked to join. It seems to the writer that no florist should lose the opportunity to make himself felt in the community, in these days especially, feeling sure that all his activities will return in some beneficial way to him, through his business.

Success with Vegetables

A number of the growers who devoted considerable space to the planting of vegetables, especially Tomatoes, have had such excellent results and good prices for their crops all Winter and during the early Spring, that they have decided to devote a number of their houses to vegetables next Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brown, of the A. J. Lanternier Co., are the proud parents of a baby daughter. Mrs. Brown was formerly Miss Ruth Lanternier.

The Country Club held an auction sale of flowers on July 4, donating the proceeds to the local chapter of the Red Cross. For this auction the Flick Floral Co. furnished 50 corsages; other florists who donated flowers were the A. J. Lanternier Co., and the Doswell Floral Co.

Henry Freese, of the Freese Floral Co., has just moved from his residence in New Haven, Ind., to this city.

Vice-President Thos. R. Marshall, Mrs. Marshall and their baby were guests in this city over the fourth of July, when Mr. Marshall was one of the principal speakers at the patriotic celebration. Mrs. Marshall was the recipient of a number of flowers during her stay here. D. B.

Kansas City, Mo.

Extreme Heat

The extreme heat and lack of rain have caused trouble for florists and gardeners in this vicinity. June was unusually warm. For two weeks steadily the thermometer stood high in the nineties and several days 100 and higher, and the entire month was dry. Home gardens and lawns suffered so greatly from this hot spell that few flowers of any kind were to be seen by the last of the month. The grass was burned until it was yellow in many places. Amateur gardeners, who had hoped to have plenty of vegetables, had to labor unceasingly even to save their crops and in spite of the best of care much of the product was not up to expectations. Gladioli blooms which are now coming out show the effects of the heat especially, but the next ones to bloom are expected to be better, as showers fell on July 5 and the temperature was somewhat lower the first few days in July.

Business has kept up well. The general opinion is that so far this Summer it has been up to the average, and in some respects it is even better than in previous Summers. There has been much funeral work and the number of orders for baskets and bouquets for sick rooms and hospitals has been greater than ordinarily for this time of year.

McGrail's Flower Shop had some of the largest orders for the funeral of Thomas P. Flahive, chief of police of Kansas City, who was buried from St. Aloysius Church on June 28. One noteworthy design consisted of an American flag made up of red and white Carnations, Gypsophila, Maidenhair fern and blue Immortelles. This design covered the casket, and the price paid for it was $150.

MASTICA

FOR GREENHOUSE GLAZING

USE IT NOW

MASTICA is elastic and tenacious, admits of expansion and contraction. Putty becomes hard and brittle. Broken glass more easily removed without breaking of other glass, as occurs with hard putty. Lasts longer than putty. Easy to apply.

WOOD LABELS

LABELS FOR NURSERYMEN AND FLORIST Benjamin Chase Co., Derry Village, N. H.

St. Louis, Mo.

Extremely dry and hot weather prevails, affecting everything. Nothing going on at all with the exception of funeral work. Roses are in fair supply and demand. Russell stock running from 5c. to 10c., Ophelia 5c. to 8c. Other teas are in supply at quoted price; also Delphinium, Gypsophila and Larkspur. Carnations are in excellent quality and fair demand at 2c. to 3c. Good Gladioli sell at 5c. to 8c. Daisies are plentiful at 50c. per 100. Lilies are in ample supply at 10c. to 12½c.; also ferns and greens.

Club Picnic

Arrangements are now complete for the big St. Louis florists' picnic July 18, at Ramona Park. The trade and their friends are particularly urged to attend this grand affair and a delightful time is assured all. Any person wishing to give a prize for any of the various athletic events should make his wishes known to Frank A. Windler immediately.

Jos. J. Windler, secretary of the St. Louis Florists' Club, and the reception committee for the S. A. F. and O. H., met at W. C. Smith's rooms last Wednesday and made complete plans for the entertainment of the visiting members to the convention in August.

Wilford J. Beneke, son of J. J. Beneke, has been drafted and left Sunday night for Jefferson Barracks.

Otto Bruenig and family are moving to their new home at Olivette, Mo., where Mr. Bruenig has taken over the Steidle greenhouses. He will grow Roses for the St. Louis market. Geo. Schmidt, formerly with W. J. Pilcher, will be the Rose grower at the establishment.

The St. Louis Florists' Club Publicity Committee will meet at its rooms Tuesday afternoon.

Ralph Walters, son of G. S. Walters, the wire work man, died from the effects of an operation, July 3. The trade extends its sympathy to Mr. Walters in his deep loss.

Patrick Patton, the bard and poet of "Wholesale Row," with Smith & Co. the past eight years, will leave next week for Camp Pike, Ark., where he will engage in the show business.

Geo. Walabart is happy to be around again after his long illness.

Cincinnati, O.

Rose receipts are meagre and are not large enough to satisfy present wants. Carnations, although not very good, still clean up readily. Gladioli meet with a good demand and generally sell out quickly. Rubrum Lilies are fairly plentiful while Harrisii Lilies are inclined to be scarce. The first Asters of the year have come in. Snapdragon and Feverfew is meeting with a fair demand. Other offerings are Shasta Daisies, Coreopsis, Hardy Hydrangeas and a few outdoor Sweet Peas. New green Galax may be had.

The Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn., have been sending excellent Gladioli into the market.

Recent visitors were: P. O. Coblentz, New Madison, Ohio,; Joseph Hill, Richmond, Ind.; C. A. Brown, Dayton, Ohio, and R. E. Blackshaw, Laporte, Ind.

TEDDY.

How Dame Nature Hides Havoc of War

Philip Gibbs, writing to the N. Y. Times from the West Front, says concerning the flowers which were growing in the territory where the battle front has surged to and fro:

"Poor Amiens has been sadly stricken, but it is still a world away from such ruin as that of Arras, where yesterday I heard the cooing of pigeons through the noise of gunfire, where they mated above the broken pillars of the cathedral ruins, which have no rooof but the sky, and where wild flowers grow amid the fallen masonry of the Hotel de Ville and through the crevices of the old Spanish houses which have been smashed and burned these three years past.

"It is astonishing how nature takes possession of the ruin that war makes and hides its ugliness beneath a riot of color. A year ago the long range of Vimy Ridge was all bare where it had been torn up by shellfire, and not a blade of grass grew on its slopes. Now it is all aflame with scarlet Poppies, mingled with clumps of Cornflowers, bluer than a poilu's coat, and flowers that were in Shakespeare's England and in the France of the troubadours, who wove them into garlands of song. So it is along all the British trench system, and the men go up to the fighting line through waves of color, and outside the dugouts are wild gardens rich in scent.

"At Souchez, where the town has been wiped clean off the map, there are Roses blooming where once there were cottage gardens, and it is only the new shell holes made by the German gunners searching for batteries or parties of men going up to the line which clear away the tangled growth and cut down the plants now blossoming over all the battlefields.

"It is worth writing this, perhaps, not because a bouquet of flowers makes shellfire more pleasant, but because it gives a picture to people at home of the look of the country in which their men are living while they wait for the battles that must come before these wild blossoms have withered away."

Mr. Gibbs takes particular pains, quite often in his vivid descriptive narratives, to tell how the soldiers prize the flowers they come across, whether wild or cultivated.

General Trade Notes

HUDSON, N. Y.—Wm. Christians has taken over the Allen Greenhouses at 36 Green st., and will operate them under his own name.

AUSTIN, MINN.—W. F. Kemper, proprietor of the Waseca greenhouses, announces that he will be compelled to close up this Winter on account of shortage of coal.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—At a meeting of stockholders of the Ellwanger & Barry Nursery Co. held recently, it was voted to liquidate the company's affairs and dissolve. The proposed dissolution has no effect on the Ellwanger & Barry Realty Co.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—The Spring season is now ended, with a good cleanup. Ferns in all sizes from 2in. up to 6in. sold well. Bedding plants, such as Coleus, Salvias, Petunias, Geraniums and Ageratum had a good call.

Recent visitors here were: Mr. Conger of Cincinnati, O.; Mr. Manthey, St. Bernard, O., Mr. Schaffer, Dayton, O., and Mr. Arnold, Cambridge, O.

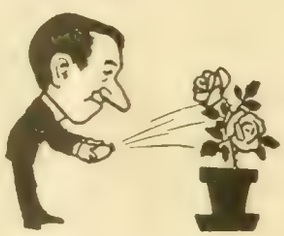
Look the Business Situation Straight in the Eye

ONE of the inspiring things about the war is the way the florists, as a whole, have accepted conditions and are doing their best to keep on the sunny side of the street. Keeping sunny is just as surely a form of patriotism, as buying Liberty Bonds. Both pay just as good interest. Mr. Sefton and I were talking it over last Tuesday and lined up the situation in 4 divisions, as represented by our friends below.

FIRST, there is the serious thinking florist. The man who, altho he knows it's not his fault that the coal supply is cut down, can't quite content himself with letting it go at that. He is thinking every two minutes of some way to overcome it. Or how to grow the cool things that will pay the most. He is looking things straight in the eye. These men will work out some plans that will be of tremendous benefit to their business both now and after the war. They are just the opposite to the men who say—"Oh well, what's the use?"

THEN, there's the commission man whose face is growing longer and longer, who is walking around with a big pencil over his ear, and ledger in his hand, figuring out where he "is at." He knows 1918 won't look as good as 1917 and he peers over his glasses and mournfully tells you so.

And then he lays down that big book and smilingly says, "stock will be scarce, but the demand will be better and prices higher, so we won't be so bad off after all. Neither will the grower."



AND now comes the flower shop man, who, after all, is the most important one of all in this hill climbing contest. He isn't wearing a band of crape on his coat sleeve because stock is going to be short. He isn't predicting direful things. He is the sunniest sunny Jim of the lot.

It isn't a case of American Beauties or Ophelias with him. He knows there will be a lot of the old fashioned flowers grown and that folks are just in the frame of mind for them.

Perhaps the gross sales may not be so large; but the net profits won't be so bad after all.

AND so, knowing how all the above three are looking the situation in the eye, there are a lot of the florists who are ready to hit old Gloomy Gus a whale of a wallop.

They refuse to allow their houses to run down. They are doing just as much repairing as usual. Just as much painting and tightening of the glazing.

They are having a heating expert go over every inch of their system. They know that what they put off doing this year is going to cost them a lot more to do next. Cost them more, because there will be more of it to do.

Materials will be no lower, or labor any easier to find for several years to come.

TO which let us add, that in spite of the fact that due to the up-to-date equipment of our factory, the shipping concerns are awarding us large quantities of work; still, we can take care of your needs. Of course labor is short, especially in the heating department. So looking the situation in the eye, it's up to you to order early anything and everything you want, regardless of when you actually need it. Get it when you can get it—that's the point. Of first importance, you better have our heating expert go over your system with a fine tooth comb. He may save you many a ton of coal.

The Passing of Landreths' Bloomsdale Farm

In a Way a Contribution to the War Not to be Reckoned in Dollars and Cents—Only in Memories

There have been rumors circulated that we have sold Bloomsdale Farm and are going out of the Seed Business. These rumors, so far as our going out of the seed business are concerned, are absolutely without foundation. The fact of the matter is, the Merchant Shipbuilding Corporation of Bristol, which is one of the United States Emergency Fleet Corporation plants, bought a tract of ground next to us and then bought the major portion of our Bloomsdale Farm, east of the railroad, between the railroad and the Delaware River. There still remains about 150 acres unsold on the west of the railroad, but all east of the railroad, over a mile and a quarter long, has been sold. We have made arrangements, in addition to this 150 acres unsold, to work nearly all the ground sold and remain in the buildings until November 1, 1918, when we must vacate.

We have purchased in Bristol, one mile below us, the mill of the Bristol Wall Paper Company, a three-story stone structure, with ceilings 14 feet high, the main building of which is 302 feet long by 60 feet wide, with an additional wing of 139 feet long by 64 feet wide, and with other buildings attached, giving us a floor space of over 100,000 square feet. In this building we will clean, store and prepare our Seed for shipment. This warehouse is well lighted by many windows and has three large electric elevators to all floors. In this warehouse our General Office will be located, and from which building our principal shipments will be made.

This building has its own railroad siding, running its entire length, with room for ten cars at a time to be loaded or unloaded. It is also within three minutes' walk of the Pennsylvania Railroad passenger station and express office; within five minutes' walk of the Pennsylvania Railroad freight station, and within two minutes' walk of the Bristol Post Office, and a ten minutes' walk from the Bristol Steamship Company, which plies between Trenton, N. J., Bristol and Philadelphia on the Delaware River. Altogether it will be much more convenient than the Bloomsdale Farm buildings for commercial purposes.

We are, therefore, in a better position to handle mail, express and freight quicker than ever before; all being under one roof, we are better able to attend to our trade in the future than in the past, for while the buildings on Bloomsdale Farm totaled 75,000 square feet of floor space, the Seeds were in separate buildings, where much hauling and handling had to be done from building to building.

As for Bloomsdale Farm, we will work it much the same this summer as in the past, and this coming January we expect to purchase a large farm which we will call "New Bloomsdale," where we will contiune to grow tomato, beet, cabbage and other seeds too numerous to mention. We insert a print of our new Seed Warehouse at Bristol, and one also of the central portion of our old Bloomsdale Farm.

We will purchase near Bristol land for a trial ground, the most extensive growing being done at our various growing stations in the west as in the past and on the new Bloomsdale Farm. It might be well to make a few remarks about Bloomsdale Farm, celebrated the world over as the "Home of Pedigree Seeds" and "Seeds which Succeed," where many new varieties have been obtained by interbreeding and selection and now known by all planters of seed.

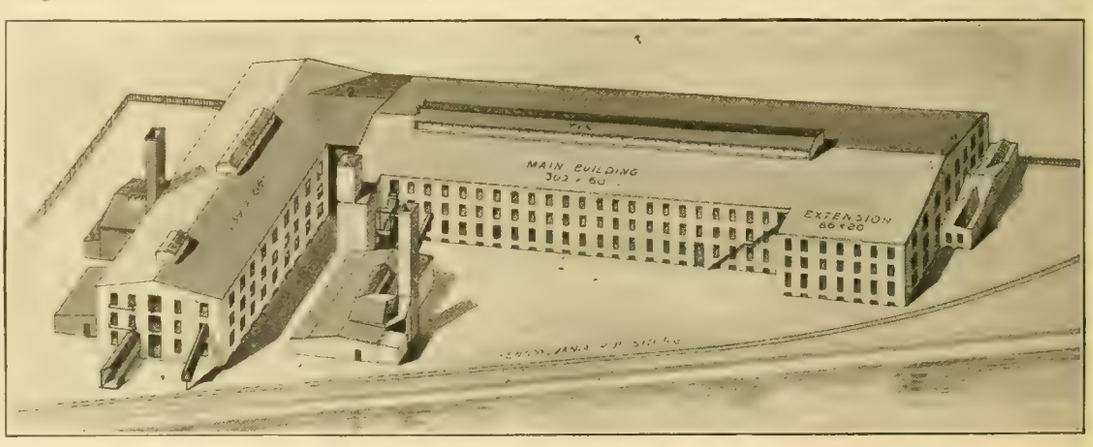
The first Landreth Seed Farm, located below Philadelphia, then known as "down the Neck," the site now indicated by the Landreth Public School, Twenty-second and Federal Streets, this tract being rented first in 1784 and purchased in 1789, becoming too valuable in 1847 for Seed Growing was sold and Bloomsdale Farm at Bristol purchased in the spring of 1847, other farms in other States being purchased at later dates.

Bloomsdale Farm, as many of our friends know, is situated in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, on the banks of the Delaware River, twenty-three miles east of Philadelphia, and sixty-eight miles west of New York, on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which runs through it for a little over one mile and a quarter, and is and has been known by the millions of travelers over that railroad for two generations and has been favorably commented upon thousands and thousands of times on account of its broad and fertile acres, high state of cultivation and its general good appearance.

The growing crops of many varieties of vegetables have been watched from year to year by the passersby, particularly when cabbage, turnip, kale and other seeds were in full bloom, making a bright spot in the landscape and attracting the eyes of all.

Bloomsdale Farm, celebrated for nearly three hundred years because of its historic associations—carved out of the primeval forest of white pine and white oak granted in 1687 by William Penn, British Colonial Governor of Pennsylvania, and for over seventy years celebrated because of its Seed Growing and handsome lawns, thirty acre collection of American and foreign trees; for many years the most comprehensive in America, still in many of its trees possessing larger and more symmetrical specimens than any trees of their kinds to be found in the United States; celebrated, also, because of its worldwide reputation as the home of "Pedigree Seeds," the birthplace of so many and of such a quantity as annually produced during the period of seventy years past, new sub-varieties obtained by interbreeding and selection, for instance, seeds of choice varieties of cabbage, radish, onion, lettuce, tomato and many other esculents, cultivated in every vegetable garden; seeds most favorably known, not only all over the United States, but in South America, South Africa, British India and China—has given place to war's necessity.

The usual peaceful pursuits of seed growing on Bloomsdale, which operations are the most advanced branch of farming, are now pushed aside by the nerve-racking steam riveters and by the other deafening noises of one of the largest steel shipbuilding companies in the world. Having a river frontage of a mile and a half, all of which was Bloomsdale Farm, and an operating space area of nearly four hundred and fifty (450) acres, the depth of water in the river to Philadelphia increased by dredging to over thirty feet, a ship company backed by the United States Government having laid twelve shipways along the beautiful river bank of the Bloomsdale Seed Farms and built a modern city of dwellings to accommodate 8,000 workmen—carpenters, foundrymen, iron plate men, riveters, painters, enginemen and a host of other men engaged in the building of steel ships—certainly a vast host, for they propose to put one ship into the water every twenty days, these ships being of about 10,000 tons each.



Our new Seed Warehouse at Bristol, Pa., as purchased, subject to many alterations, among them the moving of the railroad siding nearer the building

This imperative demand by the United States Government that a specially well adapted site on a wide river for a gigantic shipbuilding yard be taken to meet the urgency of war conditions renders it fitting, we might say imperative, that Seed Growing operations be removed to make way for the grim activities of war. It is with many regrets and a feeling of deep sadness this "passing of dear old Bloomsdale," a place of so many happy memories and of good work done—it will now be simply a memory. The present management is of the third and fourth generation of Landreths, no one but Landreths being connected with the business. This is our one hundred and thirty-fifth year in the seed business. We trust to receive the continued patronage of our friends.

Boddington's Winter-Flowering Spencers

Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas

Now Ready for Delivery

TO BLOOM FOR THANKSGIVING AND UNTIL MARCH, sow the seed in August in sand using 2 seeds in a 2-inch pot. After growth is advanced a few inches transplant to permanent positions about three inches apart.

All strains of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas contain "rogues" both as to color and the Winter flowering characteristic. The Australian varieties are almost perfectly "fixed" in both respects and are better than the American sorts. Any late bloomers can be readily distinguished as they commence to branch an inch or two above the surface of the soil, whereas the Winter-flowering plants produce a straight vine and more pointed foliage, making no lateral growth until 15 to 18 inches above the surface of the soil. The late bloomers should be eliminated as soon as they can be distinguished.

Australian Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas

BLUE FLAKES. Deep blue, pencilled over a delicate gray white ground; the best blue to date.
CÆRULEA. Delicate sky blue, sometimes a little lighter.
CONCORD BLUSH SHADES. The colors range from white blush and creamy pink to deep pink.
CONCORD CHARM. Delicate shades of white and blue; white wings and very light heliotrope standard.
CONCORD CHRISTMAS PINK SHADES. A Spencer strain of Christmas Pink coloring; as there is some variation in these they are offered as shades.
CONCORD COUNTESS. Most attractive tint of pink, the ideal flower color.
CONCORD COUNTESS IMPROVED. A larger and finer strain of Concord Countess, blush pink on white, ground, deepening at the edge of the standard. Pkt. (25 seeds), 40c., 5 pkt. $1.75.
CONCORD CHIEF. Intense, rich deep maroon, massive Spencer form.
CONCORD DAYBREAK. Cream with standard heavily edge buff pink.
CONCORD EMPEROR. A rich glowing crimson, large blooms of excellent substance and very free flowering.
CONCORD EXQUISITE. Pale pink on rich cream ground, three on a stem. Pkt. (25 seeds) 40c., 5 pkts. $1.75.
CONCORD PURPLE. Mauve purple, changing as the flower ages to purple blue.
CONCORD RADIANCE. A very striking shade of rosy magenta.
RUBY. A glowing light crimson-scarlet color.
SALMONEA. A rich, rosy salmon variety of great merit.
YARRAWA. Bright rose pink, with light wings, ¼ oz., (about 100 seeds) 35c., 1 oz., $1.00, lb., $12.00.

Packets of each of the above contain 50 seeds, except Concord Countess Improved and Concord Exquisite, which contain 25 seeds. Pkt. 40c., each, 5 pkt., $1.75.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists

Information Supplied by John Young, Secretary, 1170 Broadway, New York City

The S. A. F. Convention Program

he official program for the forthcoming convention e held in St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 20, 21 and 22 has n sent out to members of the society. The program, n a business point of view, is more than usually active, as will be seen by the following:

FIRST DAY—TUESDAY, AUG. 20

OPENING SESSION

p.m.—Opening exercises in Convention Hall.
Convention called to order by August H. Hummert, vice-president St. Louis Florists' Club.
Address of welcome by L. Jules Bourdet, vice-president S. A. F. and O. H.
Address of welcome by Hon. Henry Kiel, mayor of St. Louis.
Response by J. Fred Ammann.
President C. H. Totty's address.
Reading minutes of executive board.
Report of the secretary.
Report of the treasurer.
Report of the Washington representative.
Reports of State vice-presidents.
Reports of standing committees.
Reports of special committees.
Discussion of amendments to be voted on at evening session.
Miscellaneous business.
Judging of trade exhibits.
Consideration of place and meeting for 1920.

EVENING SESSION

p.m.—President's reception. The reception will be held in the Jefferson Hotel. President Totty wishes it to be distinctly understood that the reception will be informal and that the most comfortable clothing will be the most appropriate for wear.

Amendments to Constitution and By-Laws to be voted upon:

To amend the portion of Article XI, Section 2 (b), Elections and Appointments, reading:

Clubs, societies or kindred organizations of professional florists, gardeners and horticulturists, having paid-up membership of 100 or more members in the S. A. F. and O. H. shall be entitled to one representative on the board of directors. Such representative shall be the president of such organization and must be a member of this society. Any elective officer or appointed director shall not be eligible as a representative of such organization. When the president of any such organization is already a director, the vice-president shall be eligible for the office.

by inserting after the sentence "Such representative shall be the president of such organization and must be a member of this Society," the following sentence:

Should the president of any such organization be or become unable to serve as its representative, through sickness, or for any other reason which is acceptable to the president of the society, then the vice-president shall act in his place and stead during the period of such inability.

and at the end of paragraph (b) of the same section, adding:

The chairmen of the publicity committee, the publicity finance committee, and the national flower show committee, respectively, shall act and serve as directors for and during their terms of office as the same appear upon the records of the society; but if any such chairman shall be already a director, then the committee of which he is chairman shall have no further or separate representation upon the board.

To amend Article VI—Plant Registration:

A registration book shall be kept by the secretary, in which shall be inscribed names and descriptions of new plants, as furnished by the owners thereof, under the rules of the society. Names so inscribed shall be recognized, officially, as the proper and permanent titles respectively of the varieties as registered, and this society shall do all in its power to prevent the subsequent application of any name thus registered to any other plant in the same special class, or the distribution of plants so recorded, under any title other than the one thus given it.

On receipt of application for registration, it shall be the duty of the secretary to give public notice thereof, and if, after the lapse of three weeks from date of said application, no protest shall have been filed with the secretary, due announcement of registration shall then be made; but when there exists a permanent committee or affiliating society especially devoted to the interests of any distinct class of plants or flowers, the secretary shall, on receipt of application for registration of a plant belonging in such class, refer such application to the duly constituted authorities of such committee or society, in lieu of public notice, and, upon the return of said application regularly approved by such authorities, shall make public announcement accordingly. Failure to return such application in a period of three weeks shall be construed as approval and announcement made accordingly.

Any protest under the above provisions shall be referred to a committee of three specially appointed by the president of the S. A. F. for this purpose. The committee shall act promptly, and their decision shall be accepted as final.

by striking out the first two paragraphs and substituting:

Any member originating or acquiring a plant which is believed to be new to commerce, or which embodies a varietal difference sufficient to make it distinctive and separate from any existing variety may register the same with the society both as to description and name, provided such plant is not covered by any society or organization devoted to the interests of its species, in which case any application for registration will be referred to such society or organization. The secretary shall, on receipt of an application for registration, and a description of the plant, with the name proposed for it, give public notice of such application in the trade papers; and if, after the lapse of three weeks from the date of such application no protest shall have been filed with the secretary, he shall issue a preliminary certificate of registration, confirmation of which, by final certificate, can only follow after such plant, or flowers from the same, has been exhibited at a meeting or exhibition held by any organized florist club or horticultural body, when the exhibit shall be judged by a special committee appointed by the president of the society, ten days' notice of such exhibition having previously been given to the secretary. Any plant for which registration is sought must show an improvement over existing varieties; a mere varietal difference is not to be considered sufficient to entitle the exhibitor to a final certificate.

The following recommendation of the board of directors is to be voted upon:

That an appropriation of $250 be made for the use of the committee on school gardens.

SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY, AUG. 21

MORNING SESSION

10:00 a.m.—Annual Meeting of the Ladies' Society of American Florists.

The Trade Exhibition

With prospects of a splendid attendance at the convention, the trade exhibition is now an object of much interest to those who are able to take advantage of it for the display of productions of a trade character. While it is yet early to report as to the extent of the exhibition, there is every indication that it will be quite large, and a credit to the Society. Many requests for plans have been received in the past week at the secretary's office, showing that growers and manufacturers are alive to the possibilities which the expected large gathering will present to exhibitors. The program covering the proceedings, which has just been mailed, in its makeup is such as to induce every florist within traveling distance to spare no effort to be present.

Space reservations have already been made for the following:

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., and S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Chicago Carton Co., Chicago, Ill.; Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa.; Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia.; A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Ill.; Wertheimer Bros., New York, N. Y.; W. A. Manda, Inc., South Orange, N. J.,; Kroeschell Bros. Co., and Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, Ill.

National Publicity Campaign

The secretary is able to report a very satisfactory continuation of his trip in behalf of the national publicity campaign fund. In Milwaukee he, with Chairman George Asmus of the publicity finance committee, were guests of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, which held a special meeting in order that the objects of the campaign and its benefit to the trade might be properly explained, and the work of the promotion bureau demonstrated. Many subscriptions were forthcoming at this meeting, and a number of new members for the society obtained. Next day the secretary made a round of calls upon the florists of Milwaukee and vicinity and was most cordially received everywhere; the results of his visit are quite noticeable in the subscription report, and in addition to the subscriptions he has to report an influx to the membership roll of 21 annual and three life members. He feels under deep obligation to Messrs. Hunkel, Rutsch, Kennedy and Pollworth for courtesies extended and help given during his stay in Milwaukee.

In Minneapolis and St. Paul the secretary had a most hearty reception, and the support given him was generous and in volume somewhat unexpected. The florists of the twin cities held a special meeting, and gave a banquet at the Elk's Club. The meeting was largely attended and much enthusiasm over the work of the society was apparent; Hans Rosacker presided, and the proceedings were interesting indeed. The secretary explained the work of the S. A. F. and told of what was being accomplished in behalf of the trade. He, of course, dealt at length with the work of the publicity committees, and explained fully the details of the campaign in progress. The result of this visit was a subscription list amounting to about $500, 22 new annual members and two life members. The thanks of the secretary are due to all who rendered him assistance, and particularly to Hugh Will, Cal. Rice, Theodore Wirth, Hans Rosacker, R. A. Latham, Max Kaiser and Olaf Olson.

In Fargo, N. D., every florist subscribed to the fund or took out a membership in the society. In this city, as in others, the secretary's reception was most gratifying; he desires particularly to express thanks for the very great assistance given by John Shotwell and F. D. Swedley.

With the florists falling into line as they appear to do on the secretary's route, should those whose locations preclude the possibility of personal contact hesitate to send in their contributions—especially so, if they will only stop to think, they are florists who have much to gain from the publicity secured? One of the objects of the campaign is to promote inter-city business. It would be a surprise to some of those who are hesitating were they to know of the very large number of letters received by our promotion bureau from people in remote communities asking for information as to how orders for flowers could be filled at distant points. These letters have come from all parts of the country and from France, England, Cuba, the South American Republics and other countries. All were indicative of immediate business, and no doubt much business of a continuous nature. The writers of these letters received courteous replies and the fullest information possible.

The fund now is nearing the end of its fourth stage. The fifth stage is "the last ten thousand." How soon can we accomplish its completion? Those who have the spirit of the campaign thoroughly within them feel that completion should come speedily—and it will, if the no doubt well-intentioned non-subscriber will only exert himself to overcome his hesitancy, and turn in a subscription. It is not a "gamble"—it is money well expended, and the assurance goes with it that it will come back through increased business and consequent prosperity. Remember the parable of the talents. Don't let the little subscription which you assuredly are able to provide go unused; use it in this great cause, and be sure of a manifold return.

The following additional subscriptions are recorded:

English Wallflower

Grow at Least a Few

Don't overlook the sowing out of some allflower seed. Wallflowers can be erwintered. With just a little protecn and by bringing the plants into a deg. house about the middle of Febary flowers can be had by the end of arch and a steady supply of them kept until Memorial Day. A well-grown allflower makes an ideal pot plant; as we don't appreciate them as such in s country, but in order to make money t of them all that is necessary is for retail grower to show them. There 't any good reason why by March and m then on almost every florist, no tter how small his establishment and w little coal he has to get along with, 't have a good supply of Wallflowers, nsies, Sweet Peas and Mignonette to t from. Grow these four and grow m well and you are bound to get good urns from your investment. Sow seed Wallflower outdoors now, transplant seedlings about 6in. apart; later on, the milddle of October, lift the plants d pot up into 5in. and place in a cold me where they should be watered gularly until severe weather sets in and ps their growth. Protect with sashes d bring the first batch indoors in Jary. I've found the dark red singles the st sellers and prefer this color over the llows or the double sort.

Decorative Stock

Palms, Dracænas and Rubbers

With an advanced price for palms and ner decorative plants we slowly begin appreciate them more and find it worth while to take better care of such ck. You can encourage the growth of st of these plants from now on until time is here again for firing. Small ms, Aspidistras and Dracænas are just well off if not better off out in a me; they all love heat, moisture and re or less shade in order to do well. nge the pots up to the rim in soil, de the frame and arrange it so as to vide openings along the sides of the mes so you can spray the plants with hose several times during the hot s. Ficus elastica or Rubber plant is of the plants coming right to the nt again. It will take the place of aller palms and the florist will do well pay more attention to their culture. rge specimens can be cut and mossed w and if the moss is kept moist at all es the tops will be rooted enough in- of four to five weeks to be potted This method beats leaf cuttings, t is if you have old plants on hand. bbers also will do nicely in a frame the next two months and for the ung stock a mild hotbed is still better. ve you any old Aspidistras on the e? The present is a good time to ide them and place the freshly potted ck with the Rubbers outdoors. Aspistras are among the most valuable of corative plants; they live and thrive en other plants such as palms and racænas will die. Now is a good time purchase small Dracæna terminalis, red leaf sort; also fragrans Sanderia, Massangeana and Imperialis. Any these will grow into money between w and next October. Why not get a supply and let them come along?

Extra Early Indoor Peas

There is certainly no lack of kinds hen it comes to Sweet Peas, whether r indoor or outdoor culture and it ould be almost impossible to name any he, two or three sorts as the best. The ost desirable are found among the early rchid forcing ones. When it comes to a od crop, that not only depends on ndling the plant properly but far more weather conditions. Most growers, their November and December flowers, depend on raised benches, while solid beds are best later on. All Peas, whether garden sorts or the Sweet Peas, delight and do best in a deep, cool soil and cool weather and that, to a large extent, holds good with the ones we force under glass. On a hot, dry bench you can no more grow Sweet Peas successfully than you could Violets, but you can get them to flower with fair-sized stems during Midwinter when the roots are confined and other growing conditions are right. With the retail grower, the one who handles a great number of different crops of which there are always some not doing as they should, a batch of Sweet Peas in 2½in. pots, ready for benching, is always a good thing to have on hand during the Fall months. While the good seed comes high, making use of two or three plants to a pot doesn't mean a great expenditure. Don't carry along a lot of pot-bound stunted stock; rather keep on sowing small batches and throw those not wanted away. You can plant these early flowering Peas around the purline support, along the end of houses or a part of a bench to replace as above stated some crop which failed to do well. All this is meant for the retail grower—it wouldn't pay the specialist. He doesn't need suggestions but will no doubt agree that success doesn't always depend on knowing how to grow extra early Peas regardless of weather conditions.

Primula obconica

The present is a good time to sow your main lot of Primula obconica; there should be a good demand for flowering stock of those Primulas around Easter, 1919, and seed sown now will give you plants at their best next March and April. Always bear in mind that this class of Primulas need quite some shade to protect them from the sun during the early Spring months, especially those with delicate colors. Primula obconica grandiflora hasn't as large flowers as the gigantea but is a more free bloomer. Don't get too many of the dark shades—the white, light lavender and rose colored ones are most useful. While the obconicas require more heat than the Chinese sorts a house of 50 deg. will do nicely for stock not intended to flower during Midwinter.

Primula malacoides

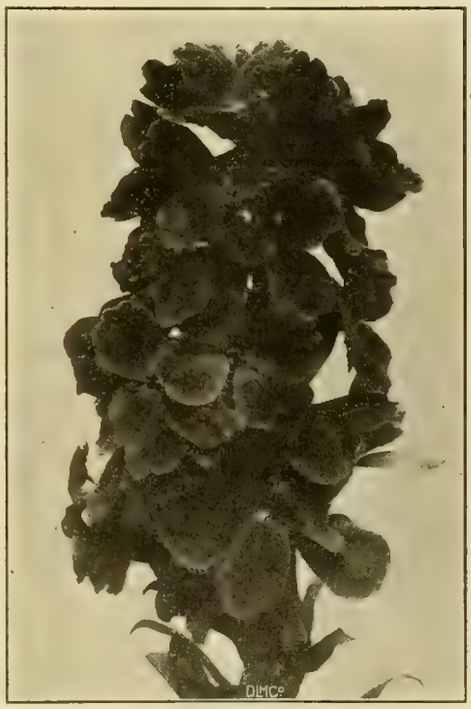
This greatly improved Baby Primrose is one of the most useful florist variety of all the many beautiful Primulas we have. It comes in lilac and white and every retail florist has good use for the cut flowers all through the Winter months. Sow now and another lot in a month from now. If you want the plants or a part of your supply just for cut flower purposes you will find it a good way to bench some of them in a cool house. It is time enough to do this after the first lot of Chrysanthemums have left the house. Planted out on a sunny bench the plant will flower more freely, have larger flowers and produce longer stems than those in pots. For all that, grow on a fair number to be sold as pot plants, for when well done they make most desirable subjects and will help to overcome the shortage of other stock which we are bound to notice.

Winter Flowering Stocks

With the uncertainty of bulb stock it is well for all of us to prepare a little more than usual in the way of other stock to take their place, and plants requiring a cool house are more in favor over those requiring warm quarters in which to do well. Why not sow out a liberal package of stocks, one each of white and flesh pink? Pot up the seedlings as soon as large enough to handle and carry along in a cool place either indoors or outdoors. If you haven't room for them by the end of September or October there isn't much harm done if you do throw them away. On the other hand if bench space can be had they will pay you to handle as well as anything else.

Pansies

Another cold house crop for next Winter are the Pansies. With the early Sweet Peas under glass weather conditions have a lot to do with the success you have with Pansies. During a comparatively cool Summer and Fall the plant will be by far superior to those grown on during a hot spell. Sow now the best seed money can buy and don't waste it; transplant later on about 4in. apart into a frame and protect so that you may be able at any time during the Winter months to take up a lot of plants without having to chop through a foot of ice. Pansies make an ideal "fill-in crop" in this way, and wherever you have large well marked flowers on long stems to offer you have no trouble in disposing of them.



Wallflower—Single dark red

Rose and Carnation Benches; Snapdragon; Freesia Bulbs

(1) What is the best material to use for drainage in Rose and Carnation benches? Are coal cinders all right to use? (2) What temperature is best for Snapdragons? (3) Will Freesia bulbs that I used last Winter be all right for forcing under glass this year?—J. W. B., N. C.

—(1) Rose and Carnation benches are usually about 5in. deep, and drainage is provided by leaving spaces between the bottom boards. When these interstices are so wide that the soil when placed in the benches may drop through, they may be covered by coarse coal cinders in sufficient quantity to retain the soil. The soil sometimes, when it is dry and is first put in the benches, needs these coal cinders over the interstices, but after it is wet down, and especially after it is filled with plant roots, there is no danger of its dropping through.

(2) Snapdragons require a temperature of 45 deg. to 50 deg. at night, and 55 deg. to 65 deg. in the daytime.

(3) The largest of the sound Freesia bulbs, if the plants were allowed last year to dry off gradually in the bench, after they ceased to bloom, will do to force again this season. Unless the bulbs are of blooming size and in good condition, it will be better to buy new ones.—J. H. S.

Is this You, Brother?

The ideal trade association member has not yet been described, but the course of action to follow in order to take the life out of your association has been. It is as follows:

1. Don't come to the meetings.
2. But if you do come, come late.
3. If the weather doesn't suit you, don't think of coming.
4. If you do attend a meeting, find fault with the work of the officers and other members.
5. Never accept an office, as it is easier to criticize than to do things.
6. Nevertheless, get sore if you are not appointed on a committee, but if you are, do not attend the committee meetings.
7. If asked by the chairman to give your opinion regarding some important matter, tell him you have nothing to say. After the meeting tell everyone how things ought to be done.
8. Do nothing more than is absolutely necessary, but when other members roll up their sleeves and willingly, unselfishly use their ability to help matters along, howl that the association is run by a clique.
9. Hold back your dues as long as possible, or don't pay at all.
10. Don't bother about getting new members. "Let George do it!"

Bermuda Bulbs are Coming

See report on editorial page concerning r Trade Board's resolution permitting importation of Bermuda Lily bulbs s season.

From Inside the Seed Bin

Japanese Bulbs

Some growers at the present time are ll laboring under the impression that ey will be able to get their new crop y bulbs as usual this year. They either not read their weekly trade paper or ey badly need to subscribe for one at ce.

The Japanese Lily bulb situation has eady been clearly set forth in your lumns, and it is fairly correct to as- me that we shall not receive any this ar, the government embargo at present force making their importation an im- ssibility.

However, I know many florists and owers who have ordered, subject to rival, "new crop" bulbs, and many seed uses are daily receiving orders and nu- erous inquiries for these bulbs.

A few advance bulb lists are out, from rge importers, and no mention what- ever is made therein of new crop bulbs. his may be taken as evidence of the uth of the above assertion. Another rroborating point is the fact that no dvertisements have as yet appeared in ur Ad columns (usually at this time me advance announcements would have en seen), nor have any crop reports en published up to the present. I have t seen any.

It would therefore be a wise plan for ose who require Lily bulbs for Winter rcing to secure cold storage bulbs of ch varieties as are available, to be ipped at a pre-arranged time, so as to ve the crop ready to cut during the sired period.

alifornia Sweet Peas

A report has just reached me from the est stating that aphis have been play- g havoc with the Sweet Peas in one strict. One grower states that the mage to his crop of grandiflora types ill mean a loss of 40 per cent. of that timated, while his Spencer Varieties ve been, to use his own expression, leaned out." I don't know whether the ndition is general. NEMO.

New York Seed Trade

Business in the New York seed stores the present time is very dull indeed. me of the stores on this account have scharged a number of their employees, pecially those who were taken on during e busy season. There are in fact in ost of the stores re-organizations and anges, all tending to a more economical anagement of the business. The ques- on, now becoming stale, which is still ost frequently asked is: "Are we going receive Dutch and French bulbs?" view of the fact that these can be rought into flower at a low temperature, eir receipt this year, when florists are have only a 50 per cent. coal supply, more important to them than usual. lost of the handlers of California grown reesias are now in receipt of their bulbs nd report them as meeting with a good mand.

Chicago Seed Trade

The first Paperwhite Narcissus bulbs f the season have appeared on the mar- et. They are American grown and of pparently fine quality.

Vaughan's Seed Store has issued its nnual price list of seeds for Summer owing, which includes price of American grown Narcissi, California grown Free- sias, Callas and cold storage giganteum, speciosum and auratum Lilies.

Winterson's Seed Store has on display American grown Paperwhite Narcissi, and report their retail trade holding on well in insecticides and seeds for Summer planting.

The Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., has increased its capital stock from $200,000 to $700,000, accord- ing to amendments to its articles of as- sociation filed July 6 with the county clerk. Of the capital stock, $200,000 is preferred stock, which is subject to re- demption at par Oct. 1, 1943, and holders are entitled to a dividend of 7 per cent Increase of business has made increased capitalization necessary.

H. V. Knight, a Purdue expert, is writ- ing in the Indiana state papers instruc- tions to farmers and gardeners on how best to grow and select their own seeds for another season's supply. In early times the home saving of vegetable seed was the rule, and it seems desirable that the home gardeners should go back to their old methods of seed saving to meet the shortage in supply.

Encouragement from a Seedsman

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

If the war continues the item of paper, ink and labor, and everything else which enters into the building of a periodical, will be higher and harder to get. Some smaller publications have already sus- pended in the West. Others have com- bined, so that where there were two or three papers in small towns there is now only one. Others have cut down the size.

Let me suggest that you keep yours going by all means with the splendid, spicy material in it that has been promi nent in the past and, if necessary, cut down the size temporarily until after this war is over. This advice, I presume, is quite unnecessary because I take it from your splendid letter of July 10 that you already have the situation in grasp, and I do not hesitate to say again that your paper appeals to me and I will watch for it each week with interest.

The Henry Field Seed Co.

The importance of the personal element in business is again strikingly shown by the remarkable growth, during the past year, of the Henry Field Seed Co. of Shenandoah, Iowa. Some idea of the size of the establishment may be gained from the fact that the payroll for the year amounted to $156,959.06, averaging $3000 per week. The largest number of persons employed at one time was 419; 283 employees were eligible for the profit sharing dividend. The company did a total business of $1,115,962.14, these figures being in striking contrast with those for 1913, which were $170,973.09.

The labor dividend which, according to custom, is fixed at a certain percentage of the net earnings, was paid as usual and after all taxes had been accounted for, amounted to $4,699.03, which was divided pro rata among all employees whose wages were $150.

The net earnings for the year, after paying all taxes, were $46,990.34, or a trifle over 4c. on each dollar in sales. This, while not a large percentage, makes a considerable sum when the enormous volume of business is considered. The average sale of the firm is only $5, thus a profit of only about 20c. is made on each order.

The postage bill alone was $78,827.37. The business is entirely mail order and retail sales by catalog.

One of the secret's of the firm's wonderful success is the direct personal interest taken in the wants of customers. A feature is a little pamphlet or booklet called "Seed Sense" which goes to all customers once a month. This is made up largely of interesting letters and photographs sent in by customers. It also contains useful gardening hints and seasonable bargains, besides a personal page of Mr. Field's. Another point made is accurately to describe all items, without exaggeration. A feature is the order sheet which is headed: "Your Page," and includes an invitation to write a letter to the firm, whether an order is sent or not. Many accept the invitation. Thus all the firm's literature acquires an intensely personal character, the effect of which is shown in the extraordinary growth of the business.

New York Vegetable Market Sales

The Bureau of Markets, 204 Franklin st., N. Y., in its weekly market review of prices to jobbers and the U. S. Government, and of the situation as covers incoming and outgoing shipments the past week, adds:

Export dry Beans and Peas, Jan. 1 to June 10, 1918, were 1,108,085 lbs. Nearly one-half went to West Indies. About three-fifths of the Colorado Pinto Bean crop reported sold to the U. S. Grain Corporation.

Active movement early New Jersey Potatoes beginning. Army requirements of Potatoes at cantonments for August approximately 251,570 cwt.

Onions. Army requirements of Onions at cantonments for August approximately 17,310 cwt.

Tomatoes. Government requirements expected to take about one-third output canned Tomatoes.

Government requirements are expected to include about 25 per cent of total output canned Peas, Corn and String Beans.

Growers of vegetables should feel encouraged and keep up large plantings, for purchases by the government for army and navy will undoubtedly make for higher retail prices.

Disease-Resistant Asparagus

Several varieties of disease-resistant Asparagus have been placed on the market. These were introduced by the Dept. of Agri. as a result of study and experimentation to eradicate Asparagus rust. One of the best varieties is Martha Washington. Another equally as good, if not better, is Mary Washington.

Growing Early Vegetable Plants

This article is the second of a series of three or four dealing with the use of greenhouses for growing early vegetable plants for transplanting outdoors to produce Summer vegetables. "There is always room for a grower who can produce good plants." In this article Professor Stoddard treats on early Cabbage, early Lettuce, Cauliflower, Kohlrabi and Brussels Sprouts.

Since the order of the U. S. Fuel Administrator was published restricting the of coal by florists no doubt a great ny have decided that it will be necry to close up one-half of their houses order to get along with less coal. In same order, greenhouse men were ed the full amount of coal necessary running greenhouses that were to be oted exclusively to growing early vegle plants for transplanting outdoors roduce Summer vegetables. This subis discussed at this time in order t florists who plan to grow vegetable nts next Spring will endeavor to see their allotment of coal this Summer. t has been the practice of many flor- for years, to grow a small supply of main early vegetable plants. Next ing a larger number of home gardenin every town and city will need nts. Of course, in towns or cities re the plant business has been estabed by a number of growers who can ply the trade, there may not be as at an opportunity as in towns or cities re this line of work has been neged. There is always room for a grower can produce good plants. Such a wer can sell his plants even when the ket is well stocked.

The method of growing the plants will mine the kind and amount of equipt needed for this work. If the seed is n in the soil on the benches for the ting of the plants, flats or plant boxes not be needed. Flats are most conient to handle, however, as in these transplanted seedlings may be readily ed. If flats are used it is a great antage to have them all the same size they will hold the same number of nts, and it is easier to avoid loss of s. The size of the flat will be determed by the width of the benches and frames and should not be too heavy n filled with soil. The main thing is avoid loss of space in the greenhouses cold frames.

he seed could be sown in the soil on benches and seedlings transplanted to when they are of proper size. Poss soil is necessary for this work on unt of sufficient drainage being necry to prevent water standing on the face among the young seedlings, since is a cause of disease and loss of nts. Heavy soil on beds or benches be made lighter, or else a lighter should be mixed up for flat use to vide the best conditions.

is realized that it is difficult to give with each vegetable discussed just exact date when these plants should started, in every section of the country, the length of time required to grow h kind of vegetable plant will be m, then each grower can figure back the average earliest date when the d may be prepared in the Spring the hardy vegetables, like Cabbage, m the average date of the latest g frost in the case of Tomatoes, and determine the time to start each

Early Cabbage

Cabbage is a popular early crop practically every home garden where plants may be secured. Since there s demand for the plants, and each gardener uses quite a number of because of much closer distances of ting than Tomatoes, for example, it vident that there is a good opportu- in the growing of early Cabbage nts.

Last Spring the writer saw a great many Cabbage plants offered for sale that were just "plants," and that is the best that could be said about them. Many of them would not live after they were transplanted, and, if they did, many would not head up. Cabbage will stand considerable abuse and diverse conditions, but there is a limit. A good product is the foundation of the best advertisement. The announcement in the newspaper should be built upon that foundation. For this reason a few suggestions will be offered here to assist plant growers in the production of good plants.

A good early Cabbage plant is one that is properly grown, stocky, well hardened, and having a good root system. Plants that are grown too close together are usually tall, spindling and weak. It has become quite a common practice among market gardeners to transplant all of their early Cabbage at least once before it goes to the field. These are strong plants, having well branched root systems which hold considerable soil around the roots when they are planted in the field. They are seldom checked in growth when they are set out and will mature earlier than poor plants that are checked. Early maturity allows more time to grow a good crop after the Cabbage is removed. These are advantages of well grown plants.

Five to six weeks is allowed to grow the plants and, in addition, about two to three weeks to harden them properly, so they will stand cool conditions outside. Thus, if the ground may be prepared by April 10, the seed will be sown Feb. 8 to 12. The Pennsylvania Experiment Station secured a heavier yield, however, when the seed was sown Jan. 20 for field planting about April 10 to 15. These plants are grown slowly at cool temperatures and by withholding water as much as possible.

The seed may be sown on the benches or in flats placed on the benches. It is a good plan to make two sowings of the seed so as to distribute the transplanting period. At that season of the year, when there is likely to be considerable cloudy weather, it is best to sow the seed in rows and water carefully to avoid "damping off." When the first rough leaf appears the plants should be transplanted about 1½in. apart both ways. It is better to have them in flats now so they may be carried easily to cooler greenhouses or coldframes to harden them. The temperature for seed germination should be about 50 deg. to 60 deg. and, after they are transplanted, the temperature may be dropped a little, and they are given just enough water to keep the soil from drying out they will grow slowly and become strong and stocky. If the temperature in the houses, not heated with steam, goes up above 60 deg. with the heat of the sun, the plants may be removed to coldframes for a short time to harden them, then they may be placed anywhere outdoors until they are sold if they are hardened enough to withstand a frost. The greenhouses not heated with steam may be used to a good advantage in the first part of the hardening off process.

At 1½in. apart, there will be 64 plants per sq. ft. If the plants are transplanted 1in. apart they must not be started as early, and more care is necessary to prevent them from becoming too tall and weak. At 1in. apart there would be 144 plants per sq. ft.

As far as possible the plants should remain in the soil until they are sold

They are injured by standing around the store for several days. Some growers keep several flats of plants on hand in the sales store all the time. These plants in soil are always in a fresh condition and give much better results to the home gardener.

Early Lettuce Plants

Early Lettuce plants may be grown in about five weeks, allowing some two weeks more for their hardening. The seed may be sown a few days after the Cabbage seed is sown in order to avoid having too much transplanting to do at one time. The seed may be sown at intervals of 7 days for a few weeks in order to have plants of different ages for a continuous supply when planting season begins.

Since the plants will be transplanted, the seed may be sown as thick as 12 to 15 seeds to the inch. When the seedlings are about 1in. tall they should be shifted, 1½in. to 2in. apart, in flats. The plants may be hardened in the same manner and at the same temperatures as Cabbage. While Lettuce plants are grown on a large scale for commercial planting they seldom appear on the market in towns and cities where they may be purchased by home gardeners. There is no doubt that Lettuce plants would meet with a ready sale for the earliest Lettuce in the garden although the demand will not be as great as for Cabbage.

Cauliflower, Kohlrabi and Brussels Sprouts

Cauliflower may be started similar to Cabbage, although they should be transplanted farther apart so that the watering may be done between the rows at first until the plants get beyond the stage where they are attacked by the damping-off disease. They are more susceptible to this disease than is Cabbage. The plants must be kept moist at the roots all the time. Cauliflower is more difficult to grow and should not be recommended for sale to the average home gardener. There may be a limited sale and it may be a good plan to take orders in advance for this crop to know how many to grow.

Kohlrabi and Brussels Sprouts are not as well known as Cabbage although they they are being grown more and more every year. There may be a limited sale for these plants also. The plants may be grown the same as Cabbage.

Southern States

Houston, Texas

Sirius, the Dog Star, is traveling with the sun; thus we have what the ancients call the dog days, the time of hot weather and dull business. But despite the dull season the florists of Houston are managing to get trade and to keep their establishments going. The seedsmen, naturally, have almost nothing to do, taking a rest after the very strenuous times of last Winter and Spring, when they worked late at night.

The R. C. Kerr Co. has received material for fourteen greenhouses, and work of erecting these has already been started. The establishment will begin business in the Fall on a large scale. At the R. C. Kerr store there was a fair business during the week, brought about through one large funeral and lively purchasing of flowers for the sick in the hospitals, etc.

R. G. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouses expects a big crop of 'Mums this Fall. His plants have started out well. Two of his help, Martino Belleri and Angelo Russo, are on vacation.

Henry Kuhlmann, Jr., of the Kuhlmann Floral Co., has returned from his vacation, and reports having had a fine time.

Mr. Kofahl of the Q. & S. Florists had much success last year in growing his own flowers, and intends to carry on the idea to a greater extent this season.

J. M. Laughlin, the new secretary of the Houston Hort. Society, has received the contract for taking care of the Schass place and has placed a man there to look out for it.

Quite a hit was made at Sam Houston Park this year by the Chrysanthemum-flowered Sunflowers which were planted by Supt. Brock along a long line of fence.

ORCHIDS

Best commercial varieties collected, imported and grown by JOHN DE BUCK, 719 Chestnut Street, - SECAUCUS, N. J.

almost as much as the pink Cannas of last season.

Particulars were given in last issue concerning the incorporation of the Robt. C. Kerr Co. There will be constructed this Summer 14 greenhouses which will be located on the Kerr plant on the Westheimer road. The product of flowers and plants will be for the wholesale trade.

Wm. P. Reynaud of O. P. Jackson & Co. and E. Schwenke of Reichardt & Schulte are resting up after their heavy labors of last season. The seed business will not open until the middle of August. Owing to the extreme hot weather this Summer, most of the gardens are now dried up; even Tomatoes and Cabbages are scarce on the market. Mr. Reynaud is of the opinion that people in this section do not spray enough, many fine crops of Cabbages being lost because of the bugs.

C. L. B.

Louisville, Ky.

The local florists are doing a fairly good business at the present time, funeral work having been very good for the past few weeks. There have been no special functions for some time and special work has fallen off considerably. Growers have been kept busy planting. Almost all of the local growers are planning to make an effort to keep all of their houses going this year.

Anders Rasmussen, florist of New Albany, Ind., sustained a slight damage to a part of his Winter coal supply. Fire broke out in the coal pile stored in his coal bin and smoldered for some time. The fire department was called and for 36 hours kept a stream of water on the coal and finally succeeded in extinguishing the blaze. According to Mr. Rasmussen, little damage was done, but it will necessitate constant watching to keep it from breaking out again. Mr. Rasmussen reports that outside of having been kept busy with his coal pile, he has been busy planting Carnations and is looking forward to an excellent stock this Fall and Winter. Mrs. Rasmussen, who has been seriously ill for the past several weeks, is not out of danger but is improving slightly.

A profitable deal was recently completed by Fred Haupt, Louisville florist, in which he disposed of a piece of property on Green st. to the Green st. Baptist Church.

It has been rumored in Louisville that James G. Phelps, recently elected secretary of the Board of Park Commissioners, would lose his job at the next election. Mr. Phelps was elected to fill out an unexpired term of Harry Smith, and his term expires in about a week. Six members of the Board have stated, since the rumor has gotten out, that they knew of no foundation for the reports and the chances are that Mr. Phelps will be re-elected.

At a recent meeting of the Board of City Commissioners of Lexington, Ky., Richard H. Tacke, superintendent of the city parks for nearly twelve years, offered his resignation which was accepted by the board. A successor to Mr. Tacke has not been selected.

The Jacob Schulz Co. of Louisville has been featuring funeral designs in its recent newspaper advertising.

The fact that the Government has selected Stithton, Ky., as the site for the new artillery camp instead of West Point, Ky., will no doubt mean that a lot of business that would have come to Louisville will now go to Elizabethtown. The artillery range will still be at West Point but the camp will be at Stithton, which is about nine miles from West Point and only a few miles from Elizabethtown. While stationed at West Point a number of the soldiers came into Louisville on their afternoons off and usually spent quite a bit of money, the florists having received a fair share of their patronage.

Ivy Covered Church Front

Our illustration represents the Ivy covered front of the Summit Presbyterian Church, Germantown, Philadelphia. The Ivy is the Japanese Ampelopsis tricuspidata (Veitchii), and the photograph was taken in late Summer, when the foliage of the vine had lost some of its freshness and was taking on its Autumn hue. It will be observed that the vine has been allowed to grow at will, partly covering the chief window as well as the wall. This has caused some comment from those viewing it as they pass by, the opinion prevailing that the front would gain in beauty were the vine confined to the wall, leaving the window free.

Then there is expressed by some the opinion that where the English Ivy is hardy, as it is at Philadelphia, it is a better vine for a church wall than the Japanese one, the darker green of the leaves and their evergreen character being much in its favor. A few plants of the English Ivy may be seen creeping over the low stone wall along the front of the church.

The Japanese Ivy is a faster grower than the English, and is in much use in cities, thriving where many other vines would not. Both these vines have a competitor in the Euonymus radicans, a hardy, evergreen one, which clings closely to surfaces and has a very neat appearance. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

The Japanese Maples

Probably no group of plants has found more favor with the general public than the Japanese Maple.

Japan has given us of her flora liberally, but nothing that has emanated from that country can excel in beauty the foliage of these plants.

The largest are not too large for the smallest garden or the smallest too small for the largest grounds. Possessing as they do such diversity in size, in color and shape of leaf and general outlines of plant, make them available for use in many ways in plantings.

All lend themselves readily to grouping, and when the several forms and colors are commingled intelligently in a well placed and balanced group they form a most attractive feature.

There are hardly any of them which could not be also used as a solitaire, depending of course on the position and what it demands. The most suitable ones for lawn specimens are found among the stronger growing kinds of which the "Blood-leaved," Acer polymorphum atropurpureum, is the most sought and desired on account of its striking color in Spring.

The "Ivy-leaved," Acer polymorphum ampelopsifolium, is another most desirable green leaf kind and is perhaps the most brilliant in Fall coloration, while the plain type, Acer polymorphum, makes a graceful lawn specimen of moderate size.

One of the most distinct and informal varieties is the "Aconite-leaved," Acer japonicum aconitifolium, the silky foliage of which bears a striking likeness to the leaf of the common Aconite, hence its name. The plant has quite a pretty floral effect, too. The flowers, which are red, are produced in drooping clusters before the leaf expands. The Autumn color of the plant exceeds even its beauty in the Spring, the deeply cut and lobed leaves turning a crimson and gold. We shall never forget a dining table decoration made up solely of the leafage of this plant; it was truly a fine interpretation of Autumn.

The golden leaved variety, Japonicum aureum, while not a strong grower and not always a shapely plant, is rather indispensable for grouping with others as it maintains the golden color very much longer through the season than A. polymorphum reticulatum, a pretty gold and green leaved kind of a much freer habit of growth and a good seller on that account.

Those of the graceful pendent habit, like A. polymorphum dissectum, are shown off to better advantage when placed on sloping ground so that the growth of the plant flows with the contour of the immediate surroundings. Nothing is more fitting for the Japanese rock garden than is this form and its red counterpart, "dissectum atropurpureum." As there is not a superabundance of soil or root room for them under this phase of gardening, the plant grows very slowly, but usually maintains that perfection in miniature which is really the chief thing required in the small space allotted it. We know of nothing that so quickly changes and glorifies the Japanese garden than do these plants.

Within less than a week, what to the mere casual observer is an uninteresting twiggy bush, becomes a veritable mass of flowing shades of color which elicits much admiration from everyone. Practically all the growth of a season is made in three to four weeks with the Japanese Maples and, consequently, nurserymen find it no easy task to fill every order for them safely unless unusual methods are used. Three or four days of warm weather in April will so rush the foliage out that to dig them without exercising such precaution as securing all the earth possible with the roots, wrapping and sewing in burlap, and immersing the ball in water, would be an unsatisfactory transaction for all parties concerned. By reason of this and the fact that the plant is always a wonderful seller when in leaf (then really too late to plant it), wise nurserymen will have a good supply of the best varieties in pots and tubs for which there is always a ready sale and, what is more, a profitable one in every sense of the word.

The plants intended for late Spring and Summer sales are usually lifted and potted up in October which gives them a chance to make better root action the following Spring, and those unsold can well remain in the same receptacles until the next season; in fact the plants of the second season will have a better color to the foliage by reason of becoming well rooted.

We have often thought the florist would find ready sales for small and medium sized plants of the better kinds of Japanese Maples if he would have them among his forced plants for February and March. The lacey, fern leaved, palm leaved, quinate leaved and colored leaved kinds would strike a distinct chord among the regulars. No great heat is required to bring them into leaf for March and, if placed in special Japanese designed receptacles, good prices could be secured for them without a doubt. The plant under good care could serve a double purpose for, later in the season after it has done service inside, it could be planted out on the grounds as a permanent feature.

What a change has been effected in our cemeteries in later years by a more free use of these bright colored foliage plants in conjunction with those of sombre hues. In the old days, the resting place of the departed ones was invariably associated with the sombre and this thought was carried out even to the choice of plants. Thanks to the change and modification of sentiment in this respect, along with comprehensive and preconceived planting plans in all up-to-date cemeteries, we now see them vieing in beauty of color with many of our public parks. This assuredly is as it should be. Let the resting place of our loved ones be a garden and not a Valley of Tears.

We are agreed, certainly, that evergreen should always be in strong evidence to afford that living color in Winter and to accentuate perhaps the thought of keeping green the memory of those departed, but there should also be a fair balance of deciduous trees and shrubs which, with the advent of Spring, will burst forth in cheerful shades of color and illustrate strongly to the living the thought of a resurrection.

Recalling how rapidly the growth is formed in Spring, we should see to it that the position given them is one sheltered as much as possible from cold winds which, in a few hours, would blast the tender leaf to the extent of marring their beauty for a season.

Planted in connection with evergreens, the latter are both a source of protection and the right background for the bright colors of the Maples.

The prevailing modes of propagation are by layering and inarching, both being effected in June and July, while the plant's growth is young. All the stronger growers make good plants from layers. These are usually down for two years before being severed from the parent plant. The small and less sturdy ones are best inarched to raise them on a stout stem, the common species, Acer polymorphum or Acer Japonicum, being the stock used. These having been put into pots in the Fall are ready for the scion in the Spring and are plunged in the soil around the plant to be grafted. No grafting wax is needed in the operation, strong raffia bound tightly around the point of union being sufficient. The following Spring the young plants are ready for lining out. A watch should be kept over them during the first Summer to keep the young growth that appears on the stock from taking the life from the scion, and a stake should be given the young plants to strengthen and train the leading growth. Quarantines and Restricted Shipments

Federal Horticultural Board Announcements

The Service and Regulatory Announcements issued by the Federal Horticultural Board, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., is of interest to many nurserymen(according to their location) and again according to whether or not they are importers of plants, and this is just a reminder to those nurserymen not now receiving the Announcement regularly that same can be obtained by addressing C. L. Marlatt, chairman, at above address. To publish these Announcements in our columns would consume unnecessary space in proportion to their general value to readers and would not be in as handy form for quick reference as the originals, which should be carefully filed.

Let Flowers Dominate

When will the grower realize higher prices for his product? This seems to be the prevalent query to the future welfare of the producer in order to enable him to carry on in spite of the Government restriction of coal supply so necessary to help win the war and with which the trade want to co-operate by assisting in every way possible.

Now let us assume that we were not connected with the flower business at all and we had to send a gift to somebody for certain anniversaries, weddings, birthdays, motherhood and many other occasions where remembrances were in order. How often would you think of flowers? Well, perhaps, you might think of flowers. Why not make the gift of flowers dominate in the minds of everyone when there is a doubt as to what to send? If we succeed in partly doing this, don't you think the demand for flowers ought to automatically increase the price and, if it does, may not the grower expect his proportion also?

Now if it were possible to make every one in your city or town see your floral display that would be one way, but as this is almost impossible, the next method should be by publicity (newspapers preferably), thereby calling attention to flowers. By this manner and means you have the most effective and quickest method to bring to the public the use of flowers and the more you talk about them the more you make them think and use them.

Then will flowers dominate and then will we come to a bigger and better business so that the publicity committee, when funds are needed to do nationally, together with what you are expected to do locally, will have no difficulty in accomplishing their task. HENRY PENN,
Chairman National Publicity Committee.

Good News for Small Florists

Forty Ton Coal Maximum Allowed

Just as we go to press we are reliably informed that S. A. F. President Chas. H. Totty has received telegraphic advices from the Fuel Administration that the order has been issued permitting florists who during 1915-6-7 have burned an average of 40 tons of coal or less, to secure 100 per cent. allowance; for instance, if a florist during the past three years averaged for each year 35 tons of coal he can order that quantity for the coming season.

Further advice states that florists in Illinois and Indiana and states west of the Mississippi are to be allowed to burn screenings in any quantity.

Good News for Easter Lily Growers

Just as we were going to press we received a telegram from Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, to the effect that the War Trade Board had passed a resolution to the effect that licenses for importation of Lily bulbs from Bermuda shall be issued when shipped by S. S. Charybdis.

That's one item of comfort to the grower, to which we may add another to the effect that in a letter dated July 3, received from a Bermuda Lily grower he made the comment that the bulbs on the island never looked finer than on that date.

Fuel for Next Winter

Undoubtedly this is the uppermost question in the minds of those florists who are not as yet supplied, either wholly or in part, with their 50% allowance. In some sections of the country it is reported that florists have all their fuel for next Winter. Such men are in luck's way. The delay of the order in the legal department of the Fuel Administration to pass on the recommendation allowing full 100% up to 40 tons of coal for the small florist is making for a severe loss to this class, as it is absolutely impossible for them to put in over their 50% supply, even though the local fuel administrator should be willing, for, in so doing, they would run the risk of having to pay an extremely heavy fine. No action whatsoever can be taken by a florist in this matter until the allowance is legally granted. The powers of the local fuel administrators are construed by these gentlemen in various ways, simply following the methods practiced by officials all the world over since the earliest days. The more accustomed to their duties they become, the more likely are they to take sane views and make wise decisions. Thousands of florists will be on the anxious seat until the matter is definitely settled.

The law allows two or more florists to combine in the one plant, if they so desire, but we have not heard of any such combinations. We think there must be many cases where this could be done to advantage; that is, for two or more men to make use of one common plant, throwing all their coal allowance therein. It would be the part of wisdom to take advantage of the clause allowing the use of wood as a substitute, and we recommend that wherever possible to obtain it (without the use of the railroads) florists gather a supply of wood. This is always a staple, and can be sold should the grower finally not have to resort to it himself.

Why Subscribe, if You Won't Read?

"As a subscriber for THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, I have been informed that anyone with 8000 ft. of glass or less can have enough coal to run his plant. Kindly send me a ruling on the coal law or tell me where I can get the ruling, as I have that amount of glass and it seems hard to get enough coal."

A letter such as the above illustrates one disappointing and disagreeable feature of trade paper editing. The daily papers can insert articles abounding in untruth or exaggeration, to put it mildly, and then, without batting an eyelash, publish a contrary version the next day or entirely ignore making a correct statement. With the trade press the code is different. Here one is supposed to use every effort to assure one's self of the facts before making any publication whatsoever. Hence, trade paper editors go the limit in their endeavor to serve up actual facts, expecting in return, for what is often obtained at considerable expenditure of time and money, a careful reading by the subscribers.

In our issue of May 4 we published the restriction order from the Fuel Administration in full, and for the benefit of our inquirer, and probably hundreds of others who may still be in the dark, we repeat it herewith:

(Originally published in these Columns, May 4)

Regulation Restricting Fuel Consumption by Florists

1. That the term "florist" in this regulation shall be construed to include any person, firm, association or corporation engaged in the growing of flowers, plants or Winter vegetables, but is not intended to and shall not include the growing of plants for transplantation to produce Summer vegetables.

[Note Particularly.—On April 27 the Fuel Administration interpreted above paragraph 1 by ruling that the exception made in favor of greenhouses in which vegetable plants were raised for "transplantation to produce Summer vegetables," applied only to greenhouses devoted exclusively to that purpose.]

2. The term "greenhouse" shall be construed to mean any building, private or public, in which artificial heat is used to aid in the growing of flowers, plants or Winter vegetables.

3. That no florist, as defined above, shall at any of his greenhouses consume, burn, or use fuel of any description, including coal, coke, fuel oil and natural gas, or other petroleum products, or use power derived from any such fuel, for or in connection with the growing of flowers, plants, or Winter vegetables, as above defined, during the year beginning April 1, 1918, and ending March 31, 1919, to an amount in excess of 50 per cent. (50%) of the average annual amount of fuel consumed at such greenhouse for or in connection with the growing of plants, flowers and Winter vegetables, during the period from April 1, 1915, to April 1, 1918.

4. That whenever it appears that any particular greenhouse was not in existence on April 1, 1915, then and in such case the period during which it has been in existence prior to April 1, 1918, shall be considered and used as a basis in determining the quantity that would constitute one-half of the average annual consumption of fuel of such greenhouse.

5. That any florist, as above defined, owning and operating more than one greenhouse for the growing of plants, flowers or Winter vegetables, may combine such greenhouses and use in such combined greenhouse the fuel allotted to each of such greenhouses by this regulation, provided the amount of fuel so used at such combined greenhouse shall not be in excess of one half of the fuel consumed by all of such greenhouses when operated separately.

6. That whenever two or more florists find that a further fuel economy would result from using in one greenhouse the allotments of fuel as provided by this regulation, to two or more greenhouses, then upon application to the United States Fuel Administration and receiving a permit therefor, such florist may use the aggregate allotment of fuel to their respective greenhouses at one or more greenhouses operated jointly by them, provided the amount of fuel so used shall not exceed one-half of the amount consumed by all such greenhouses when operated separately.

7. That any such florist, violating or refusing to conform to the above regulation, shall be liable to the penalty prescribed in the aforesaid Act of Congress.

(Signed) H. A. GARFIELD,
United States Fuel Administrator.

The only ruling since the above of May 4 has been that allowing florists to burn wood in their greenhouses when same was procurable without having it conveyed over the railroads. Where it is the intention to burn wood, additional to the coal allowance, advance notification should be given to the local fuel administrator.

On May 27 there was held a hearing before the Fuel Administration at Washington, in which numerous representative florists participated, and from its ranks a committee of nine was appointed to meet Mr. Noyes of the Fuel Administration office. What took place at that time was published in full in THE EXCHANGE, the outcome being that Mr. Noyes promised the committee that he looked favorably upon their recommendation to allow small florists, who had used on an average of not over forty tons of coal during the past three Winters, to be allowed their full 100% supply.

Right up to this minute the only further satisfaction which Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F., has been able to obtain was that this concession was in the hands of the legal department of the Fuel Administration office, and that they would make their decision known in due time. Evidently, the "due time" has not yet elapsed.

Allowance is Granted

See head of Second Column

Until that concession is promulgated by the Fuel Administration it would be unwise for any florist to violate the present order, which is that he may obtain physical possession, at the earliest possible moment, of 50% of the amount of coal based on the average of his consumption for the past three years. There is nothing, however, to prohibit the small florist from negotiating with his coal supply man to hold in readiness for delivery to him, up to 40 tons, the full 100% of his requirements, should the 100% efficiency allowance eventually be passed.

Under the Federal ruling, we cannot see where an appeal to, or taking counsel with, the local Fuel Administrators is going to help. On the one side is the official ruling, which is law, and on the other side are the local administrators appointed to enforce the law, but we cannot see where even these men can interfere with or hibit the florist from obtaining his allowance, although are in receipt of letters pointing to the contrary, wherein local administrator seems to be of belief that he can nt or refuse coal at his pleasure. It should further be erstood that the local administrators have the right to that private families are supplied before the florists other restricted industries.

The Guada Bean Identified

have just had an opportunity to glance over the rent issue of THE EXCHANGE, and noted your illustra- n of the so-called Guada Bean. I note also that ask for its identification.

This is Trichosanthes anguinea, known as "Guada an" and "Snake Gourd." It belongs to the cucurbi- eae, and has nothing to do with the Bean family. The shell of this gourd does not dry as hard as the linary gourd, but is more like a Cucumber. The fruit en grows to a considerable length—sometimes as much from four to six feet. For use as a food the gourd taken while still tender and before it has begun to or, as later it becomes quite tough and stringy. e gourd is cut into thin strips and then cooked; it sembles, in this way, very much the String Bean.

PETER BISSET,
Plant Introducer in charge of Foreign Plant Distributions.

Washington, D. C., July 10, 1918.

Replying to yours of recent date regarding the possi- ities of the Guada Bean, Kaffir Gourd, etc., as a vege- ble, and also taking into consideration your Bermuda perience, I must admit that I feel a little doubtful the value of this plant for food purposes here. We ve so many good varieties of Squash, some early and ne that may be kept in good condition until quite late the year, that I cannot see a great opportunity for the ffir Gourd. Of course, it is possible that it might l in moderate quantities as a novelty. I am inclined consider the plant in question as a variety of the ake Gourd, Trichosanthes anguinea.

Obituary

Mrs. Magdalena Smith

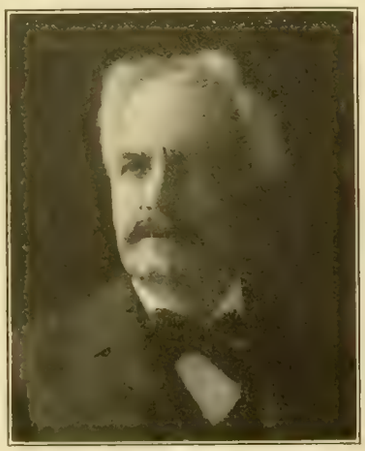
Mrs. Magdalena Smith, wife of the late John Smith and mother of George W. Smith of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, Cleveland, Ohio, died on July 10, at the age of 74 years and six months, at her residence, 1483 Crawford rd. Interment was held July 13 at Lakeview Cemetery. J. McL.

Mrs. Emma von Oven

Mrs. Emma von Oven, wife of the late Ernst von Oven and mother of Emma, Lena and Frederic von Oven, proprietors of the Naperville Nurseries, at Naperville, Ill., passed away, on July 12. Funeral services were held at the late residence on Monday, July 15, at 2 p.m.

William H. Evans

Wm. H. Evans, president of the Pike's Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs, Colo., died after a protracted illness at Pasadena, Cal., where he had resided much of the time during the past four or five years, due to ill health. Sixteen years ago he established the Pike's Peak Floral Co., now one of the largest greenhouse concerns in the Rocky Mountain region. The deceased had many friends who will hear of his death with sincere sorrow.



The late James Dean

E. B. McFarland, of Portland, Ore., though not a florist, was a great lover of Roses, and the news of his sudden death from heart disease, at Seaview, Wash., July 5, will come as a shock to his many strong friends. Mr. McFarland occupied the same position in the West as did Rear-Admiral Aaron Ward (whose death was chronicled in last issue) in the East as regards their mutual love of the Rose. In Portland Mr. McFarland was looked upon as an authority upon the subject, and it was largely through his efforts that the fame of Portland as a Rose center was spread far and wide; he was not an originator of Roses, but he imported and grew more varieties perhaps than any other man in the Northwest. He was the president of the Portland Rose Society.

James Dean

It is with sincere regret that we are called upon to record the death of another of our veteran florists, James Dean, of Freeport (L. I.) N. Y., who passed away at 10 a.m. Tuesday, July 16.

James Dean was born on the estate of the Marquis of Queensberry, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, Aug. 7, 1843, where his father was gardener. In 1850, with the family, he came to the United States, his father securing a position as gardener to the Rev. Dr. Howland, Astoria (L. I.), N. Y., where the deceased attended school, beginning to work at the age of 15. When the Civil War broke out in 1861 he ran away from home and enlisted in the 72d New York Volunteers, returning home at the close of the war in charge of his company. He was with General Joe Hooker's corps in the Peninsula campaign, and was present at the battles of the Wilderness, Gettysburg, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor and others, ending up at Appomattox in 1865, during his four years' service being twice wounded. Mr. Dean was one of the survivors of the fierce fight at the Bloody Angle, Gettysburg, a fight to the death, which will stand out for ages to come in the annals of the Civil War.

After the close of the war, Mr. Dean worked for two years at Astoria for the then celebrated Wm. C. Wilson, one of the most prominent florists of the time; he was superintendent for nine years for W. C. Langley, Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, N. Y., at which point he started in business in 1877 with J. M. Keller. At the close of this partnership Mr. Dean started in business in 1881 for himself, purchasing at a nominal figure four acres of ground at 65th st. and Third ave., Brooklyn, which property some 20 years later was purchased by the city of Brooklyn at an enhanced price for the purpose of connecting up the boulevard which runs from Prospect Park along the shore to Fort Hamilton. His specialty was that of foliage and Easter plants for the New York market; his reputation as a grower of Azaleas, Genistas and Easter Lilies was unrivaled. After some 20 years of successful business life and the sale of his property to the city, he disposed of the contents of his greenhouses and retired from business, purchasing the residence at Freeport, where he resided to the time of his death. Indicative of the high esteem in which Mr. Dean was held by his neighbors was his election three times as president of the village; he also served for several years as commodore of the South Shore Yacht Club.

During his business career in Bay Ridge he was greatly interested in educational affairs, and served there as president of the board of trustees for 20 consecutive years. As with many other men so with Mr. Dean; not having had the advantage of an extensive education in his youth he was determined that the rising generation should not suffer, and the schools he planned in that section were in those days models in every respect.

An appointment of which Mr. Dean was justly proud was when he was placed in charge of the floricultural exhibit of the State of New York at the World's Columbian Exhibition in Chicago in 1893, covering six and three-quarters acres, and which was awarded 82 medals and diplomas, or as many or more awards than were given to all the United States in the same classes.

The deceased had a hobby in the collection of firearms of which he never boasted but was always glad to show visitors; this collection comprised antique arms from centuries back and was probably the most complete private one in the United States; unfortunately it was recently disposed of at public auction thus scattering the various pieces again.

Mr. Dean received the highest honor at the hands of his fellow workers when he was elected president of the Society of American Florists, at the convention held at Toronto in 1891. He presided at the convention held in Washington in 1892. Well we remember that meeting, and other conventions of long ago; trade journals then did not occupy their present importance and so many of the practices of the day were thoroughly threshed out at the convention gatherings. Mr. Dean was a strict disciplinarian; three meetings were held each day, morning, noon and night, and 400 men crowded the room at each session; once in the meeting Mr. Dean would not permit a delegate to escape. The writer recalls one session when a discussion started on lapped vs. butted glass that waxed hot; which side won the writer cannot remember; this is mentioned as indicative of the intense interest displayed frequently at these long gone by meetings.

Jame Dean's recollection of the first Rose house he saw was one owned by James Weir, a leanto, some 35ft. x 20ft., with heavy rafters and sashes glazed with 6in. x 8in. glass, the Roses being planted in a solid bed, composed of varieties Lamarque, Gloire de Dijon, Malmaison, Safrano and Devoniensis.

Mr. Dean was one of the original directors when the A. T. De La Mare Ptg. & Pub. Co., Ltd., proprietors of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, was formed in 1891, continuing as such for over 20 years and until ill health overtook him. The writer had the pleasure of a long acquaintance with the deceased and came to know him well. He was one of the most unassuming of men; in his personal dealings he was most honorable; nothing on earth could swerve him to any action outside the beaten path of rectitude. He had a great heart filled with charity and friendliness for all; he did his good work in secret, and few know the extent of his devotion to those less fortunate than himself, especially toward former comrades in arms who had met with reverses in the battle of life.

Mr. Dean was one of the founders of the U. S. Grant Post Grand Army of the Republic, and eventually served as its commander. It was this post which went to Mt. McGregor, N. Y., and brought General Grant's body to the mausoleum on Riverside Drive; this Post still holds services there every Memorial Day. His last wishes were complied with when last Friday the U. S. Grant Post held its funeral service in his memory at its headquarters, 489 Washington ave., Brooklyn, N .Y.

He was married in 1867 to Louise L. Labrouse, and had two sons and five daughters.

Funeral services were held at his home on Bayview ave., Freeport, N. Y., on Thursday evening, July 18, interment taking place next day in Greenwood Cemetery following the G. A. R. service. A. T. D.

Suggestions for the Home Production of Easter Lily Bulbs

Florists can grow their own Easter Lilies—Easter Lily bulbs can be produced in the latitude of Washington—Flowering bulbs obtained in one year's time—Space required for bulblets in greenhouse negligible—Seed production comparatively simple—Specialists may develop—Forced bulbs can be used over—The North more suitable than the South. The writer of this article is Dr. David Griffiths, in charge of the Bulb Production Investigations, Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

FLORISTS will be interested in some preliminary work being done in the greenhouses of the Department of Agriculture at Arlington Farm, Va. The investigation is not far enough advanced yet to warrant definite recommendations and directions to be drawn, but there are indications that the Easter Lily bulb can be produced in the latitude of Washington, D. C., on a combination greenhouse and outdoor basis very satisfactorily. Since the exigencies of the shipping situation of the world have necessitated an embargo on importations of bulbs we shall have to produe the stocks ourselves or go without these almost indispensables. A few suggestions, therefore, based on the D. of A.'s investigations, may enable some of our florists to work out a plan for the production of their own stocks. As the time necessary for building up a stock is considerable it seems desirable to offer these few suggestions now—all with reservations—for the benefit of saving time for those who may be in a position to take advantage of them.

Years ago it was proven, through the work done by Geo. W. Oliver, that it was perfectly feasible to produce flowering bulbs in one year's time from seed under greenhouse conditions. With this as a starting point a large batch of seedlings was produced two years ago. These have just passed through their first full flowering and have been segregated for further seedling generations. But that is aside. The points which it is desirable to emphasize here may be summarized as follows:

I. The Easter Lily can be carried out-of-doors and blossomed in the vicinity of Washington (and probably very much farther north).

II. The seed sown in August to October in flats in the greenhouse will germinate quickly and may be pricked off into 3in. pots in Winter or early Spring.

III. A few of these may produce blossoms during the Summer.

IV. In the following Autumn the bulbs can be dried off and matured for a few weeks and then potted up for forcing. Eighty per cent. at least should be large enough for this purpose.

V. The bulbs too small to force may be planted late in the Fall out-of-doors in a friable and preferably fertile soil at a depth of 8in. and mulched after cold weather sets in. These will be ready to force the following year.

From the above it will be seen that the greenhouse room necessary for the production of flowering bulbs is a small space (two or three flats) during Winter, and a comparatively small space for 3in. pots during the Summer when plenty of room is usually available. As a matter of fact it is thought it may be possible to cut out the Summer in 3in. pots in the greenhouse. This is being tried this season. The seedlings were set in beds out-of-doors in April. They are doing very well at present, but it can not be told yet how the bulbs will grow. At all events, if greenhouse space is short for the 3in. pot period, frames will suffice as well as greenhouse space for growing the bulbs on. It is quite certain that a smaller percentage of the bulbs will reach flowering size under the uncontrolled out-of-door conditions, but this will simply necessitate that a larger proportion of small bulbs be grown out-of-doors another year.

Seed production in the Easter Lily is a simple matter, as practically every blossom will set. It is needless to say that only the best plants should be used to produce seed. A cross between the varieties giganteum and Harrisii has been recommended as producing great vigor. On the other hand satisfactory results have been secured by selfing good plants of formosum. Experience is too limited to enable one to say which cross is the best that can be made. It is safe, however, to recommend that the florist select the best and most uniform plants, pollinating with other individuals in the same variety.

It is to be expected that special growers will come along after a time who will make it their business to produce the bulbs for the florist trade in this country. But until that comes about the florists can produce them themselves with little if any more space and effort than that now required to keep up the propagation of Carnations or any other similar stocks.

It should be borne in mind that all forced bulbs can be used again by growing out-of-doors a year, providing they are allowed to mature naturally in the pots. This necessitates only that the pots be set out-of-doors with proper moisture control after cold weather is by. This requires that the florist, when he has gotten up his stocks, needs carry only double the number of bulbs which he forces each year, plus a margin for losses and plants sold. Those not actually in forcing are carried out-of-doors where their handling should be paid for by flowers which will be produced in abundance in June. Of course, cutting at all times must be carefully done to preserve the leafage for bulb production.

Stocks produced from seed will be irregular in size, but so is the stock imported from Japan, for that matter. Uniformity of stock can be brought about only through selection and further breeding. The Department is now endeavoring to produce uniformity through successive seedling generations. This may be a difficult thing to do. It is not felt, however, that it is at all imperative that it be done. If it shall be found that it is difficult or impracticable of accomplishment vegetative propagation can be resorted to and that without practicing the scale method in vogue in Bermuda years ago. Bulbs planted deeply will always produce a number of axillary bulblets, the number of which will be mutiplied still further by "hilling" or banking the earth about the plants as they grow. We have had 12 bulblets ⅜in. in diameter produced naturally on bulbs planted 9in. deep. This natural bulblet propagation will serve to keep up the stocks. They need but one year's growth to be brought to forcing size and where but few are produced on a stem they may be large enough to produce one or two flowers the first year.

Many will no doubt be skeptical about the repeated use of the bulbs year after year for forcing on account of their experience with diseases in imported stocks. But with care in handling there should be no more difficulty with diseases in the Lily than in the Hippeastrum or a score of other plants that might be mentioned. It should be noted that a seed generation leaves the diseases behind—for how long will depend to a very large extent upon the conditions under which the plants are handled. No disease has yet appeared in our stocks.

It may seem rather revolutionary to advocate the production of Easter Lily bulbs this far north when the venture has been so disastrous even in Florida, and especially when the advice in all the trade journals is to throw the bulbs away after they have flowered. But it is not at all impossible that the northern situation has decided advantages. Diseases and pests will certainly be less troublesome. In the South the bulbs appear above ground in the Fall and go through the Winter in vegetative condition. In the North they are planted late to preclude this Autumnal development. We have also mulched in the vicinity of Washington. This is an added expense, but the space covered by bulbs used by any one florist is small and the cost of mulching inconsiderable. We must remember that the whole bulb industry of Holland is built up very largely upon a mulching system.

It is rather felt that it may be necessary to dig all bulbs and ripen them off in storage each fall, late planting being advocated for such as are not needed or are too small for forcing, so that no top growth will be produced before Winter sets in. However, it may be shown later that it might not be necessary to dig each Autumn. We have had two lots undisturbed out-of-doors now for the second Winter with good success, the plants producing from three to eleven flowers each. We have even had small bulbs go through the Winter with no protection when planted but 6in. deep.

Labor Saving Devices

There are Hundreds in Use—Let us hear from them

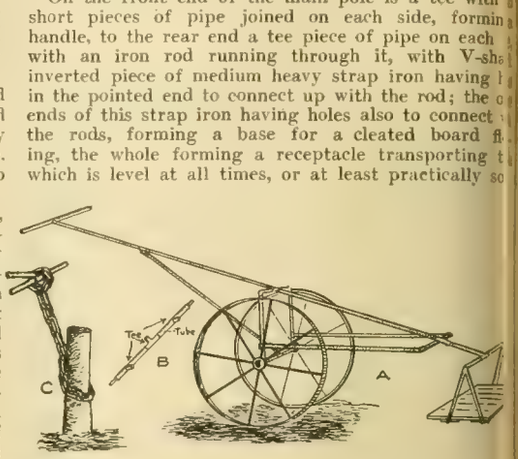
Leverage Conveyor

The accompanying illustration shows what might be called a leverage or revolving conveyor. It is used for loading and unloading material from wagons, as a box of phosphate, etc. Of course it can be used in many different ways; for instance, if you wanted to move for a short distance a pile of brick, stone or soil, or anything that would fit on the swivel board.

This apparatus is composed of two light wagon wheels on an axle about 2½ft. long. This is run through on pipe with three tees connected up, one on each end and one in the center. Connected to each end tee is a section of pipe placed perpendicularly; the latter are joined horizontally with ells on each end and a crossed tee in the center. The height of this depends on the size of the wheels, but 5ft. is about right.

Connected to the cross tee is a long piece of pipe as long as desired, the longest part being in front. This is nected to the center tee at the axle is a brace rod ing the main pole about half-way, or a little more. two ell brace rods, extend to within about 2ft. of the of the main pole.

On the front end of the main pole is a tee with short pieces of pipe joined on each side, formin handle, to the rear end a tee piece of pipe on each with an iron rod running through it, with V-sha inverted piece of medium heavy strap iron having in the pointed end to connect up with the rod; the o ends of this strap iron having holes also to connect the rods, forming a base for a cleated board fl ing, the whole forming a receptacle transporting which is level at all times, or at least practically so



A, Revolving Conveyor, complete; B, detail of axle; C, met of using the device for pulling up posts, etc.

To use the device you simply put on the load swing it around, the wheels forming the swivel. I not meant for carting, as there are better means for purpose.

By taking off the conveyor board and leaving the on the end, the device can be used for pulling old f posts, or similar posts, by means of a chain. Sin raise the leverage handle high enough to get near bottom of the post, fasten the chain by means of a hook and the other end of the chain to the tee on leverage pole and pry down.

In loading or unloading a wagon a man in the wa and two others to help him carry the stuff are usu required, thus involving unnecessary labor. Much of work, however, is avoided by the conveyor just descril Of course this device could be made of wood on same principle, but iron pipe—second-hand materia quite satisfactory—is easier to handle and less clu looking.

A Combination Straight and Folding Step Ladder

To make a ladder that can be used either as a straight ladder or as a step ladder, the following material is required.

2 pieces of 1 by 3in. straight-grained wood, without knots, 6ft. long.

6 pieces of the same 18in. long.

2 pieces of the same 5ft. long.

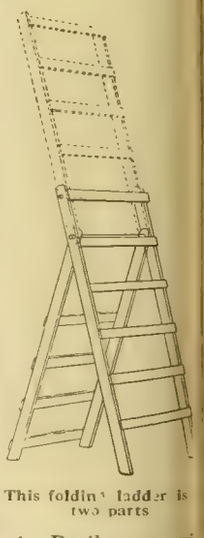
3 pieces of the same 16in. long.

2 pieces of stout broom handle 18in. long.

A quantity of 8 or 10d nails.

About one-half inch from one end of each of the four long pieces bore a hole, through which a broomhandle will pass fairly easily, and 1ft. back from this hole bore another one, as shown in the illustration.

Lay the two longest pieces with edges up, and nail on the six 18in. rungs, beginning at the end nearest the holes and placing them about 1ft. apart. Do the same wi the two shorter pieces, but in this case begin the run about 2ft. from the ends with the holes in them.



This foldin ladder is two parts

Next place the short ladder within the long ladd so that the holes are in line. Slide one of the pie of broomhandle through these holes to form a piv Fasten the pivot to the large ladder with a small n to prevent it from slipping out, then allow the sm ladder to swing free.

With the addition of a short length of rope chain placed between the two sections to prevent the spreading, the step ladder is ready for use.

To convert it into a straight ladder all that is neede is to detach the stop-chain, swing the short section u until it is in line with the long section, and slide t other piece of broomhandle through the holes.—Popul Science Monthly.

The Pacific Coast

San Francisco, Cal.

Wild Morning Glory, probably the most obstinate weed that we have in California, frequently sends its roots down to a depth of 14ft., according to the report of Dr. George P. Gray of the Department of Agriculture, University of California, who lectured before the Pacific Coast Hort. Society on July 6 last. And when it is remembered that these roots can be cut back to half that depth without any assurance that they will not grow again, one can get a faint idea of the difficulties that lie in the way of eradication. Ordinary plowing which cuts the roots back say 10in., seems to have about the same effect on wild Morning Glory as pruning has on a tree. Arsenic is the arch enemy of wild Morning Glory, and where it can be applied when the foliage is moist enough to hold the chemicals for a few hours, it will generally deal a blow sufficient to keep the pest out of mischief for a few months, long enough at least to give a garden crop a chance to come through undisturbed. Dr. Gray holds out hope that future experiments will show that by repeating this treatment several times the roots can be exhausted and in this way put out of business. When well shaded by any other kind of plant growth it remains almost dormant, and for this reason Barley and Alfalfa, for example, can be grown successfully in an infected field.

Victor Ferrari of Ferrari Bros., who has been a member of the Coast Defense branch of the navy for several months past, was a visitor in town on furlough this week, a picture of good health and spirits.

H. Plath of the Ferneries lectured before the California State Floral Society on July 12 on the subject of ferns. The attendance and welcome accorded the speaker reflected the esteem in which he is held.

In order that members of the Pacific Coast Hort. Society who are now serving Uncle Sam in the Army and Navy may continue in good standing, without inconvenience, it was resolved that their dues should be suspended for the duration of the war.

At the July meeting of the Pacific Coast Hort. Society, which was held on the 6th inst., four exhibits were made, and the awards follow:

Gloxinia hybridum, A. Clemo, exhibitor; 95 per cent. Dendrobium fimbriatum and Dendrobium Dalhousieanum, J. A. Carbone, exhibitor; 95 per cent. Lælia Livingstonia rotundifolia, H. Plath, exhibitor; 95 per cent. Thalictrum dipterocarpum, M. A. Poss, exhibitor; 85 per cent.

The judges were A. Rose, Eric James and Chas. Abraham.

Club Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Monday night, July 8, with a good attendance. A committee consisting of J. F. Austin and Jack Burt was appointed to look into the new horticultural state law and take up with the members the matter of securing licenses for dealing in nursery plants which include many of the things the florists deal in generally.

It was decided to hold the club picnic in Manito Park on Thursday, July 18, and to make the same as much of a family gathering as possible.

John Young Visits Spokane

On Wednesday, July 10, we had John Young, secretary of the S. A. F. and O. H., as visitor in our city. Mr. Young spent a very profitable day here, as far as the members of the trade were concerned, for every one got an opportunity to meet Mr. Young and obtain explanations on many questions of interest pertaining to the fuel question, advertising, importations, etc.

State Vice-President Duncan busied himself as soon as Mr. Young arrived and called a special meeting of the Florists' Club for the evening. This gave many of those in the trade a chance to meet Mr. Young and hear him talk. Mr. Young is doing good work on his trip through the country, especially in the West, and the officials of the S. A. F. who thought of sending him on this tour are to be commended for their enterprise. Mr. Young reports good success everywhere in securing new members for the S. A. F. and also in getting new subscriptions for the National Publicity Fund.

E. S. Eugene, who met with a serious accident several weeks ago, is able to be around again part of the time attending to business.

Bernson & Halle, the Spokane Greenhouses, H. L. Olsson Co. and Peters & Sons, four of our leading growers, have gone in largely for Tomatoes this season and have had marked success with them.

Market Notes

Regular Summer weather, and with it, Summer business conditions prevail. The grade of stock the retailers have to offer is generally of poor quality, owing to the continued drouth, so things about balance themselves. Funerals have been quite numerous and this has been a good barometer of the florist business, as outside of this demand, there is little call for flowers. A little rain, and it will soon be necessary for flower buyers to visit the shops again, as the outdoor stock, of which they have been using much, is entirely burned up and past the blooming. With the advent of the Aster, Gladiolus and Zinnia, these tempting flowers will encourage buying for the home again. Carnations are still of good quality, although small, and are selling quite well. Roses are poor and not too plentiful. The Sweet Pea crop is a complete failure so far as good stock is concerned. Thrip, aphis and red spider did their best this year. Delphinium is nearly all gone; it has been in heavy demand the last few days. Shasta Daisies, Gaillardias, Phlox, Scabiosas, and Coreopsis are still to be had, such as they are.

News

Some two or three weeks ago Geo. Teufel and Alex Lelane took a two weeks' fishing trip to Deer Lake, some 25 miles on the other side of Mt. Hood. Mr. Lelane states that it has spoiled his appetite for fishing in the local streams as the fish in that lake keep the angler busy taking them off the hook; they caught as many as 117 in about an hour's time. He says the fish averaged about 10 in. in length.

Clay Embrey, formerly of Stillings & Embry of Lewiston, Idaho, is now working at one of the local shipyards. Another tradesman going to build ships.

Clarke Bros. are cutting some excellent Gladioli; Panama, Niagara and Halley are the varieties. This firm grows quite a large number of Gladioli bulbs at the Hillsboro place—some 50,000 of them.

Theo. Wedell has left the employ of Jean Robinson Co. This caused Mr. Robinson to leave his position with the shipbuilding concern where he has worked as steamfitter. It is good to have two trades, as at present the steamfitting was no doubt the best.

Martin & Forbes Co. are cutting the first Lilium auratum of the season. These came in quite handy the last few days, as the firm has been kept busy with funeral work.

Let us all hope that we will have the pleasure of having John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., who will visit us in a few days, with us at our next club meeting on the 16th of this month.

This section has passed through a period of very dry weather which has affected outdoor flowers considerably. There would have been plenty of Asters and Gladioli if there had been rain, but there is no sign of any at this writing. The indoor stock is about over for this year, except for a few Roses and Carnations which show the effects of the heat. There are some Asters and Gladioli, but very few, not nearly enough to meet the demand. Business has been keeping up well, considering this is the middle of July when florists are at their lowest tide. Funeral work is about the only thing that demands any flowers at all. Stock is scarce and good prices predominate.

Lilies are of good quality and sell at $10 per 100. Am. Beauty Roses are off the market entirely. Sunburst and Ophelia are the best Roses offered.

Retail trade is not what it used to be; the past week business was rather slow, but the stores are making a brave showing all the same and keeping up to expenses.

H. A. Schroyer has some exceptionally fine Lilies of his own growing and finds a ready sale for them.

At the Rosary they are still doing a good business in seeds and have installed a modern cash register.

Harry Haverstick is getting his list of prospects ready for next Fall and Spring planting of nursery stock, and reports good prospects for another big year's business, starting with September. He has full charge of the nursery end of the Barr establishment. At the Barr farm the harvesting is about over and at the greenhouses planting is going along at a lively rate.

A very welcome and much needed rain is putting all vegetation back into normal shape again after a long, dry siege of weather, and Gladioli and other Summer stock will be an item in the market from now on until Chrysanthemum time. Dahlias have made their appearance and some of the early Asters are coming in.

F. B. Dettra of Phoenixville motored to Lancaster with his family and made room in his car for a few needed plants of Asparagus plumosus and Geraniums. Quite a few growers who grow stock for their own retail trade are planting up odd corners, to Smilax and Asparagus plumosus in anticipation of a shortage of this sort of stock next Winter.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Trade was quite satisfactory the past week and there was sufficient stock to supply the demand. Business was not too brisk, although no complaint could be made, floral work helping out at the end of the week. Carnations are coming in smaller, as the intense heat is having a tendency to shorten the lives of the Enchantress, which are faded out on their arrival. The best varieties are the Ward and White. Roses are in good supply and have moved fairly well, considering the amount coming in.

Lilies, Sweet Peas, Marigolds and Cornflowers have sold fairly well.

James Vick's Sons' warehouses and general office building have been commandeered by the Navy Department for use in manufacturing binoculars. The company had to move on very short notice, and are now located at 91-97 St. Paul st. Although the inconvenience was great and regular business was upset temporarily, the company state they are willing to make any sacrifice that the navy may have plenty of "eyes."

Paterson, N. J.

There was a lively hailstorm on Saturevening, July 6. Some of the hailstones were of the size of walnuts and when the storm was over enough hail had fallen to make good sleighing. Nearly all the greenhouses about town were outside the storm belt. Later in the evening it hailed at Glen Rock, a town about five miles north of Paterson.

Business has been about normal for this season. The demand for flowering pot plants and cut flowers has decreased gradually, but orders for funerals have been plentiful, with wholesale prices about the same as last week. Lilium auratum and L. magnificum are now to be had at $8 and $5, respectively.

Practically all the growers intend to operate their establishments next Winter.

Thos H. Meade of Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. was in town last week and he says that the small retail growers in New England are buying about the same as in former years, many of them simply duplicating last year's orders. J. C. L.

Newport, R. I.

The regular bi-monthly meeting of the Newport Hort. Society was held on July 9. Arrangements were made to have the Committee on Awards visit home gardens entered for competition on July 23 and pass upon same. And the sum of $100 was appropriated to be awarded to collections of either flowers or vegetables considered worthy.

Notice has been issued by the Bureau of Conservation of the United States Fuel Administration that greenhouses using not more than 40 tons of coal annually may operate to full capacity. The local fuel commission quotes the price of Pennsylvania bituminous coal at $10 per ton, delivered and binned.

The condition of John W. Gibson, who has been ill for several weeks, is now critical in the extreme.

Alexander MacLellan.

Hartford, Conn.

The Hartford Florists' Club has postponed its outing until later in the season as there are so many of the boys away. Perhaps about the 1st of September a trip will be taken to one of the shore resorts, with the ladies.

Gaius William McClunie of Church st. has been compelled to store his stock for the Summer, as the city is widening Church st. from Main st. to Union pl. When the street is finished it will be one of the widest in the city. Mr. McClunie can be found in temporary quarters at 86 Pratt st., where he will be able to take care of his trade. About the 1st of September he will again be located on Church st., a few doors west of the old stand. The new store will be one of the finest in New England.

H. Munson, formerly Rose grower with Coombs of Benton st., will now be found at the New Britain Machine Co., of New Britain, Conn., where he is working on government orders.

Fred B. McClunie of the 36th Company, 154th Depot Brigade, Camp Meade, Md., is in officers' training school. He is a former military man of the old state militia, and should make a good officer.

Saturday, the 13th, was the first Saturday afternoon that the retailers closed their stores at 1 o'clock.

MAKE the Summer time profitable. Practice commonsense and sound economy, by keeping the shop in apple-pie order. There is no time like the present for repairing, cleaning and changing. No sensible person, however, would advise extensive alterations, entailing much new work; but the value of keeping up appearances is even greater now than before the war. The tendency to let down, to wait until next year, lurks around in the form of mental suggestion between the lines of war news, and is passed along in the harmful chatter of ignorant propagandists to discourage improvements and curtail activities.

Would you allow yourself to be a talking-machine record for "Kultur"? If not, then nail the lie of business apprehension wherever you can, both by word and deed. We can best do our part in the furtherance of truth, optimism and victory, by practicing these qualities in our own business. I am not suggesting that retailers involve expense or even spend money. I am simply showing the wisdom of using a little money and your own time in keeping the shop up to concert pitch, thereby giving ample proof that you not only believe in the principles of democracy, but are able to do your part in perpetuating them.

It does not benefit a sick man to give him much sympathy, because sickness is an unnatural condition, as every one will agree. A certain college professor, of frail physique, was not popular with his pupils. They conceived a plan to torment him and one Monday morning put it in operation, with nearly the whole class taking part. Accordingly, the first one of the class who greeted the professor was to tell him that he looked a little pale that morning. The next of the class, when he saw him, was to ask him if he felt entirely well and to comment on his pallor. The next was to advise him to lay off and go home; the next to recommend a certain specialist; and the next advised bed as the best place, etc., etc. These destructive suggestions were kept up seriously and secretly, each student administering his dose "on the quiet" until, as the facts are given, the professor collapsed, took to his bed and, four days later passed away, a victim of fear, brought about by this mental barrage of suggestion, mesmerism or, to use the popular term, hypnotism.

Just so is it true in an objective sense. The shop that is not kept up, that is off color and run down at the heel, is the object of comment by all those who come to know it, until the condition becomes chronic. Faults are easily discerned by others, but the proprietor after a time does not see the scaly paint and glaring untidiness any more and, unless aroused from his apathy, he falls an easy prey and is finally annihilated, a victim of laziness, narrow-mindedness and the mental suggestion of those who declared to each other that "Mr. Buds' shop is not what it used to be."

There are many who are actually dying by inches without being conscious of it until it is too late.

Clearing Out the Corners

It is much harder to regain ground once lost by leaving things run down than it is to keep them up to the notch. If paint were a dollar an ounce it would still be an investment to use it liberally. As for cleaning there can be no excuse for not doing so at this season. In some places, and among them are many smaller establishments, one must literally kick his way around, high-stepping and side-stepping over piles of rubbish and things that in themselves are not rubbish, but receive the same treatment.

After every order or piece of work is turned out, nothing further should be attempted until the house is put in order. Stock should be put away first, and carefully too, not jammed in the case by a careless hand. The case must always be kept in order and never be allowed to show depreciation and neglect—in this the responsibility devolves upon every one in the store. Porter service does not excuse one from knowing where the broom is kept or how to use it. I have seen girls who had experience in the art of floral arrangement, use a floor brush, in an emergency, about as gracefully as a drug clerk would shoe an army mule. The habit of leaving things laying around, instead of putting them in the place where they belong, is the unpardonable sin in storekeeping and must be penalized as such.

Do the Necessary Things First

It is well to take a careful survey of both the exterior and interior of the store to see what is needed and necessary. Be critical, but not too extravagant. Perhaps a thorough washing will be all that the front needs, but if the painting is worn, now is the time to refresh it with a new coat.

Inside the store, let it be the most important things first and, once the work is well started, you will be surprised to find out how badly it was needed. One thing will suggest another and the plan can be made as elaborate as practicable. The first in importance is the refrigerator or show case. If it is out of repair, if a handle is broken or missing, now is the time to replace it, for these little omissions are those which give a fixture that second-hand look. The painting of the box on the outside and inside can be done by any careful employee with results that will be satisfactory. I know that solder and zinc are expensive, but that really doesn't matter if there is anything needed in repairing the refrigerator.

Next comes the cleaning of the high places that are never reached. Papering, too, may be necessary and, if so, it is worth all it costs. Don't be afraid of upsetting things a little. The customers at this season will gladly overlook it. For the last number on the program, don't forget the basement, the work rooms, tables and storage. My admonition must be: Action at once! Don't delay! Begin right now and do a little at a time, and see how soon the tendency to leave good enough alone will change into a desire to go the limit. In this it is for you to know that the returns for the outlay are sure. To you they will come first in satisfaction, and in the uplifted faith in the future of your business, by securing the winning mental attitude. The big retail stores in all lines are pushing ahead and the way they are overcoming obstacles is an inspiration.

The hours of work should be shortened at this season as much as possible. A 5 o'clock closing, with noon on Saturdays, is possible nearly everywhere. Nothing stifles initiative and numbs the ambition like too long business hours in Summer time. Try to make things just as easy for each other, and of the work, let's get it done quickly. Most of the city stores are both anxious and willing to educate flower buyers to regular shopping hours. Putting a limitation to free deliveries will be practiced this season. Some florists have not yet got around the problem of Sunday closing but they will all come to it.

The shops that make no attempt to improve and progress are usually those that are in bad order physically and financially. There are many ways besides appearance that are saving measures in keeping the shops up to date during war times. We can all help preserve the individuality of the florists' business by first thinking right and then by doing the very best we can.

Biggest Cash Register Ever

A mammoth cash register was an unusual and striking outdoor feature of the great drive for $5,000,000 of War Saving pledges, which began in Indianapolis, Ind., June 12, and ended June 28.

The cash register was built on a prominent street, corner Meredian and Washington sts., in the downtown section of the city. It was 36ft. high and 24ft. square. The pedestal, which was 10ft. high, contained booths in which women workers obtained pledges. The amounts collected were rung up on the big register and also on a Class 900 inside the booth. At the top of the big register an illuminated indicator showed the amount pledged. At the right hand side was a visible detail strip which showed the various amounts collected at the different booths as they were rung up.

The entire cash register idea was closely carried out, except that no receipts were issued by the big register. A bell also rang out as each additional amount was recorded. This is the largest cash register ever built. It was designed to handle over $5,000,000 in two weeks. The idea originated with the Indianapolis War Savings Committee. The National Cash Register Co. did not contribute to its cost, but confined its aid to the Dayton War Savings campaign.

Increasing the Summer Sales of Plants

In this article the writer, Jos. H. Sperry, advocates what is almost a new line of Summer business endeavor, one which should recommend itself to every observant and progressive retail florist. This article is a good one in many respects; it annunciates a method of advertising the goods, the principles of salesmanship; relates a connecting story illustrating the salesmanship point; and goes most articles one better by naming those varieties of Summer plants which can be successfully handled for the purpose under mention.

After the sales of plants for window and piazza boxes and vases and beds is over in late June or early July, retail florists, as a rule, make little further effort to sell plants until Autumn, when the season comes for filling conservatories and inside window boxes with tender plants, and the outside window boxes with evergreens.

It seems to the writer that retail florists, especially those who have stores with conservatories attached, might build up a considerable Summer business in plants. These should be of such kinds as can be grown on in the pots, pans or tubs in which they are sold and placed either on the piazza or in the windows or on the roofs of city houses, and on the broad piazzas of Summer cottages at the seashore or in the mountains or, in short, at Summer country residences.

The first move in such a campaign would be to make known through store front and window and salesroom signs that you have plants suitable for such uses, and perhaps to actually name one or two of the leaders.

The second act should be to display a few really good plants, two or three of each kind at the most—one good specimen of each kind will do very well—and to keep your display plants in first class condition.

The third act is one in which the personal equation and the tact of good salesmanship comes in, namely, to call the attention of your customers, when they come into your store, to the Summer plants which you have to sell and get them interested in these. Ask them a few questions about their Summer houses, as regards locality and surroundings, and if they show any inclination to buy, help them to make a suitable selection. Even if they do not buy during that call, do not consider your efforts as a salesman lost, for they may think it over and come back again and give you an order, or they may mention to their friends that you have a fine line of Summer plants, and the actual order in response to your efforts may come to you from these friends. If so, you not only make a sale, but add a new customer to your list.

If you are really a good salesman, you will not, of course, begin to urge a sale of plants as soon as a customer enters your store, but you will sell him first what he called to buy, and then as you are booking his order or wrapping it (if he is going to take it with him) you will begin to talk Summer plants and tell him how interesting it is to care for them and watch them grow, and how much they add a real country touch and tone to a city residence or a Summer cottage.

Speaking of first selling a customer what he really wants reminds me that some young salesmen pride themselves in selling in other lines of trade what they know the proprietor would like to sell, rather than exactly what the customer comes in to buy.

We were standing one day in one of the largest clothing houses in New England talking to the proprietor who was a lifelong friend of ours. A young salesman was passing us on the floor who had just been waiting on a customer and the proprietor said to him: "Mr. Smith, that man whom you were serving was a new customer, did you make a sale to him?" "Yes," said Mr. Smith, "and I sold him something entirely different than what he came to buy, one of those suits on which we are long." The proprietor replied very gravely, but kindly, "Mr. Smith, as long as you are connected with this house, never do that again if you expect to retain your position with us. When that man reaches his home and considers his purchase, he will realize that you overpersuaded him and that he bought what he did not really want, and he will be dissatisfied and he will not buy here again. Always, Mr. Smith, try to find in our stock just what your customer is looking for, and if you cannot find it it is better not to make a sale than to sell him what he does not really want, for your customer will have confidence in you because of your fair and frank treatment of him and will come here again."

On the same principle a florist should not carry his idea of selling Summer plants so far as to persuade a customer to buy these when he really prefers cut flowers. Furthermore, he should try to sell him the kind of plant he prefers, provided that plant is suitable for the location which the customer describes; if not, it is better to tell him so even if you fail to make a sale. Do not, for instance, sell him a Rose bush in a pot to set on a piazza rail; discourage such buying.

It is hardly necessary to name the kinds of plants which are suitable for Summer use in the ways we have suggested; nevertheless, just to refresh your memory, we will name a few. There are, first of all, the several varieties of Nephrolepis ferns, the Hortensis varieties of Hydrangeas, Dracæna Massangeana and D. fragrans, Kentia and Phoenix palms, Gloxinias, Tuberous and fibrous-rooted Begonias, Geraniums, Heliotropes, dwarf Cannas, Lemon Verbenas, Sweet-scented Geraniums and Fuchsias. Of the use of Nephrolepis ferns, and also of Hydrangeas, we may write later more fully.

Dards' W. S. S. Window Display

The Pioneer Bulletin of July 6 reproduced in its columns the ingenious wartime window presentation of Dards, the florist, 44th st. and Madison ave., New York, shown in our last issue, but unfortunately it made no reference to the forcefulness of the exhibit which, without words, impressed the onlooker that one of the things to stop the bursting bombs is to buy W. S. S., nor was any credit given Mr. Dards for what must have taken him many days of labor to create.

The Middle West

Minneapolis, Minn.

John Young, secretary of the S. A. F. and O. H., who is touring the country in behalf of the $50,000 publicity fund, which amount the society has set as its goal to collect among the florists of the country, reached the Twin Cities July 4.

Park Superintendent Theodore Wirth made a tour of the parks with Mr. Young on the Fourth. Hugh Will and Cal. Rice took him in hand Friday, and visited all the Minneapolis florists with him.

A hasty telephone call brought out 25 members of the State Society from St. Paul and Minneapolis for a luncheon and reception in his honor at the Elks' Club, Friday evening, which took on the aspect of a reunion of old friends, harking back to the time of the convention held here five years ago. In an eloquent manner Mr. Young explained the advantages of publicity and the successful efforts of the society on behalf of the florists of the country, especially during the critical period of last Winter. Nobody could resist his powerful arguments, and the results were a very satisfactory contribution to the fund and many new memberships. Mr. Young's stories brought forth many hearty laughs; stories so well and realistically told that one wonders if they are not personal experiences.

Saturday was St. Paul's day. Mr. Young was accompanied by Hans Rosacker, Max Kaiser, Olaf J. Olson and Theodore Wirth, and his visit there was very successful. Mr. Young left Saturday night for Fargo, Butte and the Pacific coast.

Cleveland, O.

The Market

Receipts of stock are now considerably augmented by the arrival of the Asters, which are indeed welcome. Gladioli are being offered in larger quantities, but remain as yet far below the demand. Sweet Peas are declining, due to the continued dry weather, and good Roses are scarce. Home-grown Valley is again available after an interval of a month's absence.

City business is normally good, likewise out-of-town trade, both being chiefly sustained by funeral orders. Vacations are the order of the day, and practically every florist and his regular assistants are sufficiently prosperous to enjoy their annual outings. The 50 per cent. allowance of coal is, almost without exception, laid in, and growers are devising means of keeping production at the maximum during the coming Winter. A scarcity of flowers, however, is predicted, with the inevitable concomitant, a material advance in price.

Sunday Closing

A meeting of the wholesale florists was called by F. C. W. Brown of the J. M. Gasser Co. on July 11 for the purpose of considering the question of Sunday closing. It was unanimously decided to close, keeping the market open on Saturdays until 8 p.m. for the benefit of the trade, and for the first time in history the wholesale stores were closed on July 14. Of course this rule will be suspended in consequence of the Sunday holidays. The wholesale market now opens uniformly at 6:30 a.m. and closes at 5 p.m., the only exception being Saturday evenings. The consensus of feeling is that this is a step in the right direction and one directly in keeping with the tendency of the times.

The Annual Outing

The annual outing and picnic of the Florists' Club will be held July 24 at Willoughbeach. Chairman Russell of the entertainment committee is busy preparing a lengthy sports program, a leading feature of which is the annual game of baseball between the wholesalers and retailers. In a number of the past contests the latter have been easy victors, but the wholesalers are determined to turn the tables this year. Willoughbeach is justly celebrated for its fine boating, bathing, dancing, bowling and field facilities, and in view of the fact that the trade is more in need of hearty co-operation than ever before, the entertainment committee earnestly hopes that the occasion will be favored by a large attendance.

No Need for Undue Pessimism

Business is normally good; everything produced is meeting with a ready sale; collections are better than ever before; the future outlook is extremely favorable; the fuel curtailment will not put anybody out of business—will be only a temporary inconvenience for which the florist in after years will feel a just pride—so let's do our utmost to help dispel the incipient semi-panic which appears to have permeated every avenue of the trade! Optimistic expression, increased publicity and unshaken confidence in the near future are the things for which the profession stands in greater need today than at any previous time in its history.

Notes

Peter Stilber has completed the erection of a small greenhouse.

H. T. Miller and family of Alliance, O., were pleasant callers at the wholesale market July 11.

J. C. Pettee of the J. M. Gasser Co., is off on a fishing trip to the Thirty Thousand Islands.

George Bate of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., after one of the most successful seasons in the history of his concern, is enjoying his well-earned annual vacation.

Letters from Private Carl G. Wilson are to the effect that he has arrived safely in France.

Carl Ziechmann left July 14 for Put-in-Bay where he will spend a week fishing.

Notice of the death of the mother of George W. Smith of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange will be found in the obituary column.

Trade visitors last week were George Hampden of the J. G. Niedinger Co. and J. P. McCarthy of Rice & Co.

W. Potter and family are spending a couple of weeks visiting in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Carl Lee of the staff of the J. M. Gasser Co. retail store, began his annual vacation on July 15. J. Mc. L.

Cincinnati, O.

The Market

Roses are still rather short and many more good ones could be used if they were available. Easter Lilies are more plentiful than they were for a time; they are coming in in fair quantities and find a good market. Rubrum Lilies are available. Gladioli are again fairly plentiful; they have been cleaning up quickly. Carnations have been selling well; Snapdragon meets with a good demand. Asters are now on the market and have been finding a ready sale. The first Cosmos of the year came in last week. Some Shasta Daisies may be had.

Florists' Society Meeting

At the annual meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society last week the following were elected: Wm. Schumann, president; Jas. Allen, vice-president; Frank Volz, treasurer; Alex. Ostendarp, secretary; Gus Adrian, director. The meeting was held at A. E. Forber's place and all extended to the host a cordial and sincere vote of thanks for his hospitality.

H. F. Winter & Son of Charleston, W. Va., motored through this city last week on their way home from Indiana.

Gus Kohlbrandt of the E. C. Amling Co., was in this city last week on a visit to his folks.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some early Asters that have sold well.

Geo. Klotter brought the first Cosmos of the season into the market last week. They sold well.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Popp are the proud and happy parents of a baby girl born last week.

Mrs. Floyd Anderson of Xenia, O., was in this city last week. Teddy.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Ben Felder of Zanesville, O., reports business good in his locality.

Most of the flower shops are stocking up heavily, as there has been a curtailment of buying for some time and depleted stocks are more general than in former years.

Harry Jones, of Bertermann's force, is back from a vacation in northern Indiana.

A recent report of the national banks in Indianapolis is certainly encouraging, as their assets are the greatest on record, and predictions of prominent bankers make it quite evident that good business is at hand for at least several months

John Heidenreich has been very busy with funeral work of late.

Summer flowers are being used extensively this season and there is hardly a day wherein they are not cleaned up at good prices.

Any one having surplus Chrysanthemum plants can dispose of them at top figures by a little advertising. Carnations are going rapidly, too, and a shortage is sure to be at hand.

Messrs. Smith and Young are getting ready to take a fishing trip in northern Indiana.

Coal cards from the Fuel Administration at Washington have been received and will have to be filled out weekly, according to the request contained therein.

A general shutting down of flower stores Sunday afternoons has become one of the new Indianapolis store features, but one store remaining open the past Sunday.

A feature of the local market last week was a quantity of fine Lilium auratum, retailing as high as $6 per doz, L. rubrum at $1.50 per doz. wholesale and giganteum at $10 to $10 per 100.

A. Weigand & Sons Co. is specializing in Boston ferns and showing some fine specimens.

If more advertising were at this time to reach the medium class people instead of the select, the same would be more far reaching, as it is this class which is spending the money for our funeral work. There are many war munitions plants and general factories in this vicinity which should become large purchasers of flowers with a little encouragement.

Columbia, the Hill Co.'s new Rose, is proving very worthy up to date in this locality and will eventually displace the Killarney. I. B.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Active Market

The market was unusually active here last week, due to an unprecedentedly large amount of funeral work being sent out all through the week, and culminating in a big demand in this line on Saturday and Sunday. One firm sent out three casket covers on Sunday for local funerals. A large number of retailers report several weddings throughout the week, which, although not large, called for a good quantity of quality flowers. Bouquets and baskets of outdoor flowers had a good call for the sick room. The supply of flowers was not great, and there were barely enough flowers obtainable to fill orders, some of the florists having to do much skirmishing in order to procure them.

Easter Lilies have been a great standby for the florists, especially for funeral work, and have filled in many a gap. The quantity of Gladioli is increasing, and some excellent varieties are appearing on the market. Mrs. Chas. Russell is the leader among Roses, and several of the local growers are cutting the new Rose Columbia which sells on sight, although the supply is small. Asters have appeared on this market during the past week, but they are so few in number that they can hardly be reckoned with. Good Shawyer, Ophelia and Sunburst Roses are obtainable, and a few White Killarney. Carnations are getting few and far between, as the warmer weather of the past few days has almost finished them; many of the growers are throwing out their old plants and renovating their houses preparatory to receiving the new stock. Early varieties of hardy Phlox made their season's debut last week, and are a welcome variety to the florist; the quality of these is good. White flowers for funeral designs are at a premium, and retailers are in a quandary in regard to flowers, especially for ground work. A small white flower called Achillea has been helping out for this purpose. The orchid supply is short. There is a wide variety of garden stock for basket work, etc., and this includes Shasta Daisies, Gypsophila, Gaillardias, Cornflowers, Delphiniums, Candytuft, Coreopsis, Centaureas, Phlox, Tiger Lilies. Sweet Peas, although somewhat shorter in stem, are making a fine showing.

Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Clement Lanternier have returned to this city from a week's motor trip to Chicago and suburbs where they went on a combined business and pleasure trip. Funeral work has been rushing at the Lanternier store, and a number of weddings and corsages called for a large quantity of outdoor flowers. Baskets of Gladioli, Lilies and Shasta Daisies made an attractive window decoration here.

W. J. and M. S. Vesey are cutting some fine outdoor Asters. This firm is wholesaling thousands of pounds of Tomatoes daily to the local grocers.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Knecht will leave the latter part of this week on a motor trip to Detroit, Mich., for a week's visit to the growers and wholesalers there.

Another Florist Called to Colors

Walter J. Knecht, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Knecht, has been called to the Colors, and will leave this city on July 26 to join the National Army at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky.

Extensive repairs and renovating are under way at the greenhouses of the Flick Floral Co. The old Carnation stock has been thrown out and new benches are being built preparatory to receiving the young stock. Business has been booming at the downtown store, with a heavy call for funeral work. This firm worked late Saturday night and all day Sunday getting out funeral orders, three casket blankets being among the pieces sent out Sunday. D. B.

English Horticultural Editor Dies

An English contemporary announces the recent death of Robert Hooper Pearson, managing editor of the Gardener's Chronicle of England. In early life he was a gardener but gave up that occupation in 1892 to take up literary work. Death was due to anæmia, from which he had been suffering for several years.

Business Difficulties

Alfred F. Ells, florist, 59 West st., Reading, Mass., has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with debts of $4300 and nominal assets.

A petition has been filed by leading creditors asking that the Susquehanna Valley Greenhouses, Binghamton, N. Y., be declared bankrupt on the ground that the concern's directors passed resolutions admitting insolvency. Wm. H. Stewart has been appointed temporary receiver with authorization to continue the business. — Binghamton Republican-Herald, issue of July 1.

General Trade Notes

ASHTABULA, O. — Silvius & Silvius Floral Co. has been incorporated. Capital stock $15,000. Ray L. Silvius, Virginia C. Silvius.

MOULTRIE, GA. The Moultrie Floral & Greenhouse Co. has been incorporated. Capital stock $25,000. H. H. Roth and A. G. Bohr.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Park Board was host on July 2 to 25 members of the National Gardeners' and Minnesota State Florists' Association. The Rose gardens in Lyndale Park were visited in the morning, after which there was a drive through the boulevards and later a fish fry at Harriet Pavilion.

MINOT, N. D.—Geo. Valker has opened a handsome store at 121 S. Main st. that is said by the local papers to be a "beauty spot" on the street. While the greenhouses will still be open in the western part of the city, the flower, plant and seed display will be made at the new quarters.

NASHVILLE, TENN. — A charter was issued here July 10 to Baum's House of Flowers, Knoxville, Tenn. Capital stock $50,000. Incorporators: Chas. C. Baum, Karl F. Baum, R. L. S. Baum, G. W. Chesney, Malcolm M. McDermot. To engage in horticulture, floriculture and agriculture.

WATERLOO, IA. — Greenhouses of the Kemble Floral Co., located on Third st., are being dismantled. This action, according to M. E. Terry, manager for the company, is the result of an edict from the fuel administration allowing florists to use next Winter but 50 per cent. of the coal used in 1917. The Kemble Co. own large greenhouses at Marshalltown and it will supply the local trade.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. — We regret to learn of the recent death of Frederick W. Schlatter, 17, son of William Schlatter, florist of 449 Bay st. The young man's death was the result of injuries caused by the explosion of a toy cannon.

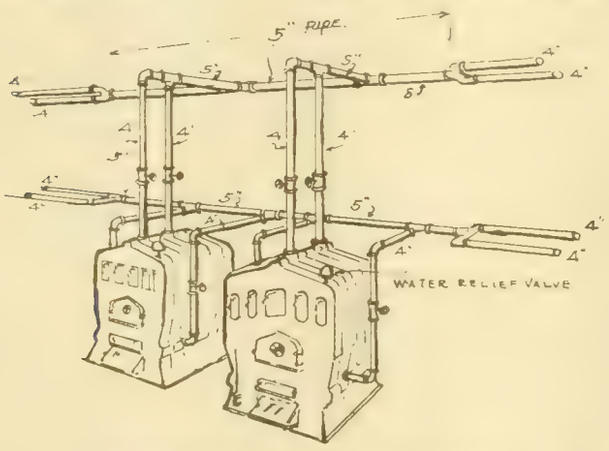
Heating Queries

Conducted by John McArthur
Mgr. Heating Dept., Hitchings & Co.

Size of Brick Chimney Required

Please tell me the best size brick chimney or iron stack for two boilers; no hills or buildings near to affect draft. Boiler A has a 15in. smoke pipe, boiler H a 16in. At present each one has a separate stack; these must be replaced this season and I wish to put the new chimney outside of the boiler room. Kindly tell me how to arrange the piping on these two boilers to run two 4in. flows and two 4in. returns to each house.



See "Size of Brick Chimney Required

Boiler A has three 5in. outlets on top and three 5in. outlets for steam at each side. Boiler H has two 6in. outlets on top and two 6in. outlets for return in the rear section of the boiler. I have a number of [illegible] more than enough. A correspondence course on [illegible] solution to the heating problem. I subscribed in reference to these [illegible]. J. F. Y.

—The area of a 15in. smoke pipe is 177 sq. in. and the area of a 16in. smoke pipe is 210 sq. in. Adding [illegible] equals 387 sq. in.

The [illegible] 22in. in diameter is 380 sq. in. and would be equal to the present 15in. and 16in. smoke pipes. [illegible] is used it should be 20 x 22in. and the height should be 50 ft.

I am [illegible] the boilers can be [illegible] and two 4in. flows and two 4in. returns can be carried to each house [illegible] valves, so that either boiler can be used or repaired without interfering with the working of the other one.

Please note the sketch showing a water relief valve on each boiler. New York State [illegible] that when two or more boilers are connected together and valved, a safety relief valve must be used, so that in case of closedness the boiler valves are closed when the fire is started the water-relief valve will open and relieve the pressure and thus avoid accident.

Can Any Grower Beat this Record?

Fruits and flowers growing to the with [illegible] arrest the attention of florists these days, so we esteem it a privilege to [illegible] having obtained the following data [illegible] Peters Sanitarium, Canton, Ohio. [illegible] Rose greenhouses containing the heating [illegible] Peters boilers, each 40ft. x 225ft., covering a ground area of 36,000 sq. ft., during a period of twelve months ending March, 1918, at a total cost for coal of $0.0482 per sq. ft. of ground covered, [illegible] also a small building 35ft. x 100ft., a store room and Mr. Schramm's private residence. Considering the almost unprecedented Winter just past, this low cost heating record is all the more remarkable and striking. Roses are grown exclusively in these houses, Russell and Mrs. [illegible] whose high quality the wholesale handlers Kyle & Foerster of Chicago give testimony. These houses required some heat all the year through.

The Schramm range is heated by a vacuum steam system, steam being produced at about 50lbs. at the boilers and supplied to the low pressure mains at from 2lbs. to 5lbs., through a pressure reducing valve. The low pressure main is run overhead along the center crosswalk. The return main also runs overhead alongside of the supply main to the vacuum pumps. These vacuum pumps keep the system free of water of condensation and air, delivering the water to the boiler feed pumps and discharging the air to the atmosphere. All of the exhaust steam from the pumps is used again in the heating system after the oil has been extracted. The boilers and pumps are arranged in duplicate against the possibilities of a breakdown, and the pressure reducing valve as well as the various pumps governors are by-passed so that Mr. Schramm is provided against any emergency. The accompanying illustrations will show the general arrangement of the apparatus in the boiler room.

That this low unit cost is apt to stand as a record for some time to come will be realized when the high prices florists in general had to pay for coal of an inferior quality is considered. Mr. Schramm 's experience in this respect was certainly no more favorable than that of hundreds of other florists, for he paid an average price of $6 per ton for various kinds of Illinois coal, which was far inferior in quality to the coal he is accustomed to using.

The heating equipment, which was designed and installed by the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, is on the same lines as that used in large office buildings, hotels and other plants designed for efficiency, and is well worth inspection by any of the trade who might find themselves in that locality or be passing through that part of the country on their way to the St. Louis S. A. F. and O. H. convention.

Wants to Know About that 40 Tons

Can you tell me positively if there is a [illegible] of the fuel order allowing small florists to use coal enough to keep all houses running? I have two houses, one 25ft. x 60ft., the other 27ft. x 70ft. I burned last year (coldest on record) 28 tons, mostly egg. Have part of it in, and can get the rest if I am allowed to burn it. Cannot make out from reports in the papers just whether the order is positive or only a suggestion by the Fuel Administration. Our coal dealers have orders to allow us only half. G. A. H., Vt.

We have answered this subscriber to the effect that the permission to use the full 100 per cent. up to 40 tons was held up in the Legal Department of the Fuel Administration at Washington, and that until the order comes forth approved by that department, only the 50 per cent. allowance is available.

The Washington representative, Wm. F. Gude, and officials of the S. A. F. and O. H. are using their every endeavor to obtain from the Legal Department of the Fuel Administration this desired privilege.

There must be several thousand florists throughout the country in similar position to our inquirer who are unable to formulate plans for this Winter until they receive assurances as to whether they are going to be allowed their full 100 per cent. up to 40 tons or not.

The delay is causing loss of money and great anxiety to a class of men who can ill afford it. Let us hope the desired order will be issued soon and favorably.

The Market

July 16.—Conditions in the wholesale cut flower market differ little from those of last week, except that there has been no occasion for any large use of flowers as was the case at the funeral services of the late ex-Mayor Mitchell last week. The most notable fact is the arrival of Summer flowers of good quality in a large number of kinds and varieties.

Am. Beauty Roses are in considerable supply and meeting with a moderate demand at from 10c. to 30c. each for special grade blooms; other grades at corresponding prices. Hybrid teas of all kinds and grades are moving slowly. A certain number of the daily arrivals sell at figures quoted in our price list and the balance is disposed of in job lots at buyers' prices. Top grade blooms are selling at from 3c. to 6c. each in general and bottom grade blooms at 50c. to $1 per 100. A few choice blooms of preferred varieties bring somewhat higher figures.

There is a small supply of Carnations. The quality is good for the season; the demand is small. Fancy grade blooms are selling at from $1.50 to $2.50 per 100.

Cattleyas are more plentiful with demand small. The less preferred varieties, such as Harrisoni, fetch from 15c. to 25c. each; choicer varieties, such as Gigas, 75c. to $1 each. There is a moderate supply of white and pink Lilies, which are moving slowly at from $4 to $6 per 100 for the former and $3 to $4 per 100 for the latter. The supply of Lily of the Valley is small; top grade blooms realize $6 to $8.

The arrivals of distinctively Summer flowers grown in the open are large. Some of these are cultivated and some are wild flowers. Among the former are Stokesia, Rudbeckia purpurea, Shasta Daisies, Zinnias, Lupines and Tansy; among the latter Rudbeckia hirta, Epilobium, Liliums of several kinds, and Hardhack. There is really no fixed price for these and it is therefore impossible to give quotations.

There is an increasing supply of Asters which are selling at from $1.50 to $3 per 100. Indoor grown and hardy greens are meeting with moderate demand.

International Garden Club

The International Garden Club has been granted a temporary injunction preventing it from being ousted from the Bartow Mansion and thirty acres of land adjoining Pelham Bay Park. In his decision Judge Ottinger said the International Garden Club is entitled to a full preliminary injunction preventing any action by the defendants until the trial of these issues, pointing out that the original agreement of three years was renewed for five years by the city in Dec., 1917, that the plaintiff has spent more than $70,000 for improvements, and has given lectures and admitted the public free five days a week to the mansion and gardens. He further cited the fact that the club was incorporated not for profit, but for the purpose of establishing horticultural gardens and for the instruction and recreation of the people.

Outing Plant Growers' Ass'n.

The New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association went on its annual outing last week. The party left its rendezvous in eight automobiles on Wednesday morning and reached its destination that night at Bishbash Inn., Berkshire Mountains, N. Y., which it made its headquarters. The return was made on Saturday night. This outing, which is one of the leading festive events of the year among the plant growers, was, as usual, well carried out, and greatly enjoyed by all.

Charles C. Palestine, 181 William st., manufacturer of mourning and fancy colored stationery for florists and also for general use, has been called into the U. S. Army service. For this reason he has settled up his business affairs and discontinued his business, which he hopes to resume should he return from the war. Mr. Palestine had two brothers in the French army. One of these has been killed in action, the other is still in active service.

There was a meeting of the Transportation Committee of the New York Florists' Club on Monday afternoon at the office of Traendly & Schenck, 436 W. 28th st., to arrange for attending the coming convention of the S. A. F. and O. H. at St. Louis, Mo. There were present A. L. Miller, J. G. Esler, Roman J Irwin and Charles Schenck, president of the club.

Frank Golsner, salesman for Hentz & Nash, 55 West 26th st., has entered the mechanical department of the United States Army, and is taking a course of instruction to prepare him for his work.

Isaac Hicks & Sons of Westbury, L. I., have obtained permission for the landscape work at the 34th st. entrance to the Penn. Central Station in this city. There is a considerable space on either side of the walk from 34th st. to the station itself, which is available for this purpose. The narrow leaved evergreens, both tall and dwarf, and the broad leaved evergreens also are being used in this work. The taller Pines, Spruces and Cedars are massed in the four corners, and the dwarf species of these are planted between, and the broad leaved evergreens in front of the corners, making an agreeable "entrance" planting. The position is conspicuous and the work is well done. The idea of filling in the hitherto bare, repellent space with evergreens is a credit to Hicks & Sons; likewise a splendid ad. for their nursery business.

De La Mare Co. Outing

The staffs of the A. T. De La Mare Co., Inc., and the Union Bindery (publishers and binders of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE) held their annual outing last Saturday at New Dorp, N. Y. There were sixty-three present, accompanied by a service flag of seven stars, representing "boys" who were with their fellow workers on the 1917 outing but who are now "doing their bit" for the civilized part of the world.

A program of sports was carried through with the various winners receiving suitable prizes. The annual baseball match between the composing and press rooms, after a hard fought game, resulted in a win for the latter.

The evening meal having been disposed of, the prizes were distributed and speeches of appreciation for the manner in which the committee had carried out its duties were delivered by S. W. McDonnal and C. Heninger. Dancing and singing during the evening brought a most enjoyable outing to a close, the staffs returning to their duties on Monday morning much benefited by the relaxation from the daily routine.

The Market

July 16.—At the wholesale flower market there is a fair supply of most kinds of flowers and so far July business has been fair. The flowers reaching the market are of good quality considering that it is July, and as yet there has been no surplus as we have seen in former years. There has been a good demand for Summer Am. Beauty Roses and prices range from 2c. to 30c. each. There is an ample supply of Hybrid Tea Roses and they are in most cases of superb quality; prices are from 50c. to $8 per 100. Carnations, though it is now Midsummer, are still of good quality; the cool, moist weather has helped to keep the quality up. Prices are from 50c. to $1.50 per 100, with a very few fancy blooms at $2 per 100.

Cattleyas are scarce and fancy prices are obtained; first grade blooms bring $10 to $12 per doz. and second grade $7 to $10 per doz. Lilies are scarce and good flowers are 10c. to 12c. each. Lily of the Valley is scarce and is selling for $8 and $12 per 100. Sweet Peas are of fine quality and selling well. There is a good supply of all Summer flowers, which are cleaning up well. An adequate supply of good Asparagus is moving well.

Penn's Window Displays

Penn the Florist has one of his large windows facing on Tremont st. and Hamilton pl. given up to a duck farm. This annual exhibit is a wonderful ad. He has had striking exhibits during the year of flowers and plants which drew a good deal of attention from the public, but yet it is true that there never were so many people crowding the windows as there are at this time to see the ducklings eating and swimming in the cool pool of water. Human nature seems to like to see things moving. It does not matter whether it is mice, rats, cats, fish or ducklings, they always draw attention. In another window there is a fine display of the new Lily, Lilium regale or myriophyllum.

William J. Stewart, editor of Horticulture, whose illness was reported three weeks ago, I am sorry to say is still confined to his home. However he is able to come to the office occasionally, which would indicate that his health is slowly improving. His numerous friends hope that with more sunshine and warmer weather his health will improve rapidly.

Fred J. Elder, manager in New England for the Lord & Burnham Co., has been transferred to the company's works, and the office is closed for the time being.

Annual Picnic

The Gardeners and Florists' annual picnic will be held at Cunningham Park on July 24. It is hoped that as many as possible will attend this outing and make things pleasant for the children.

William Glidden, head salesman for the Budlong Rose Co., is receiving extra nice blooms of the new Rose, Columbia, which sells very quickly.

New Heating Order

The coal question is just as unsettled as ever. It is true that some of the growers are receiving some coal, but the 50 per cent. promised is not materializing. From the chairman of the Fuel Commission a new order was sent out saying that no coal for heating dwelling houses would be used until Dec. 1 and that wood must be substituted until that time.

Another star has been added to Henry M. Robinson & Co.'s service flag. Max Strumph has gone to the Navy. This makes eight men who have joined the Colors.

At Welch Bros. Co. they were exceedingly busy on Monday. They had very large orders from a retail florist in Manchester, N. H., which required quantities of flowers for the funeral of Roger Sullivan, the manufacturer of the famous cigar, 7-20-4. By the way, this brand of cigar has been Patrick Welch's favorite.

Last week the stork left a bouncing boy at the home of Frank Connolly. Frank is head shipper at Welch Bros. and is one of the most unassuming men in the business, but is one of the best liked, and his many friends wish him much joy from his first child.

I am glad to announce that Wilfred Wheeler of Concord, Mass., who was formerly a florist, has been elected State Commissioner of Agriculture by the new Board of Agriculture. Mr. Wheeler has been secretary for the Board of Agriculture for the past five years. R. C.

The Market

The usual Summer demand is now on, with its spasmodic calls for flowers, chiefly wanted for sad occasions. The past week has been an exceedingly quiet one. The increase in flowers is noticeable, with more Asters, Gladioli and short-stemmed Roses. More good Roses could be used; that is, long and medium grade stock. Carnations are slowly passing off the list; the best of them are still holding up to list figures. Asters are coming in stronger, both indoor and outdoor grown, with the former showing best quality. Gladioli are also now to be had more freely, with prices showing a slight decline. Easter Lilies continue strong, both in the receipts and sales. Sweet Peas are not very active, with a medium supply. There is a fair supply of Valley; Cattleyas are hard to secure. There is a new crop of Delphinium

Notes

We regret to chronicle the death of Miss Millie K. Cook, 1208 S. Broad st., which occurred on July 13. Miss Cook had a fine retail store at the above address which she conducted very successfully since the death of her father, Harry C. Cook, about two years ago. The store had been established a good many years ago and was one of the best known flower shops in the southern section of the city.

William La Croix, the well known Lilac grower of Buenna, N. J., gave his annual picnic on Sunday, July 14. A party of about 35 were in attendance from Philadelphia.. The party presented Mr. La Croix with a very handsome American flag that was raised on the lawn with appropriate ceremonies. Games

THE cool weather we have had has undoubtedly reduced the cut of flowers to some extent, but without the active demand there would have been more than enough flowers on the market.

ROSES. We have quite an ample supply of them, and with the cool weather we have had our Roses are of a good quality. Our supply consists of Russell, Prima Donna, Ophelia, Sunburst, Hadley, Shawyer, Maryland and Wards.

GLADIOLI. Plenty of them now and no orders will remain unfilled. Light and dark pink, white and red in all the best and newer commercial varieties. $6.00 per 100.

ASTERS. The cut is not very large, but your order will be filled if it is placed early. Most of our growers will make daily shipments now. The flowers are as good as can be expected of the early crop. $2.50 to $4.00 per 100.

and sports of all kinds were indulged in with great pleasure to the entire party.

It is a pleasure to state that Wm. F. Dreer, who has been critically ill at his home at Rosemont, Pa., for the past three months, is almost himself again. Mr. Dreer leaves for Vermont for the balance of the Summer.

William F. Gude of Washington, D. C., was in town; he was the guest of John Westcott at Waretown, N. J., for the week-end.

Frederick J. Michell, Jr., is back again in harness at the store after a happy wedding trip. Mr. Michell says some of the happiness almost came to grief when they encountered a storm on Lake Michigan that almost stood the ship on her beam ends.

C. & G. L. Pennock are sending in some superb Jonkheer J. L. Mock Roses to the S. S. Pennock Co.

Leo Niessen states his house is now receiving a steady cut of Valley in daily shipments.

Stuart H. Miller is well pleased with the cut of Roses the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange is receiving from John Stephenson's.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had the decoration at the Cathedral for the installation of Archbishop Dougherty. The decorations for the reception at the Bellevue for the newly appointed prelate was also by this firm.

Charles E. Meehan divides his time between his cottage at Ocean City and his greenhouses at Churchville, Pa. Mr. Meehan is installing a new heating plant and making his houses tight for what is to come.

H. Bayersdorfer has become an ardent fisherman, only lately having been initiated into the joys of the sport.

July Market Favorable

July 16.—Business for July compares well so far with former years. There is not as much stock available as there has been in past seasons at this time, so that there is little difficulty in moving all good stock at satisfactory Summer prices. The shipping business keeps well up to the usual volume for this time of year. The retailers are fairly active. It is the general opinion that there will be a good run of business all through the Summer months, which is quite encouraging to all concerned.

Am. Beauty Roses are in fair supply, especially in the shorter grades, and as the shorter and medium grades suit the requirements of many buyers better than the long, all stock moves daily. In all the other varieties there is a scarcity of good stock. Mrs. Russell, which is in so large a demand on account of its good keeping qualities, is short of the demand. White varieties continue scarce, as they have been for several weeks. Columbia continues to be the favorite amog the new comers; the supply is on the increase each week.

The supply of Carnations is not equal to the demand, especially in good stock. There is a fair supply of poorer grade stock that is selling fairly well but at low prices. Peonies are all gone; their exit from the market has been much earlier this year than in past years. The passing of the Peonies has thrown the demand to other stock that has made conditions better than they would otherwise have been if the stock in storage held out longer.

There are enough Lilies, but no more than are required for daily use. Valley is in supply about equal to the demand, while orchids remain scarce and prices high. Sweet Peas are becoming more plentiful and there is an improvement in the quality. The first of the Aster crops is coming in. Delphiniums, Hydrangeas, Feverfew, and many other varieties of hardy outdoor stock are quite plentiful. Pond Lilies have been good sellers this season. Gladioli are getting more plentiful each week, and so far are selling well, the prices ranging from $3 to $8 per 100. The supply of old ferns from storage is all gone and the new crops are to be had everywhere on the market, but the price is still firm at $3 per 1000.

Sunday Closing

The market has experienced two days of Sunday closing, and as the time goes on, it is getting in more favor from week to week. It is thought that when the buyers get themselves fully reconciled to the fact, they will buy earlier on Saturdays so that the keeping open of the wholesale houses on Saturday nights until 9 o'clock will not be necessary.

Trouble Routing Express Packages

The consolidation of the express companies under the caption of the American Railway Express Co. that went into effect July 1 caused much trouble to the shippers by their new system of routing the packages. The shipments were all sent by one road to certain points, when the same point could be reached by other roads in less time if routed that way from Chicago. Complaints from the wholesalers to the officials of the new company caused them to go back to the old system of routing; that is, by sending on the first train going to the destination of shipment. All shipments have been received in due time since the change was made (July 9), and there is no longer any cause for complaint.

Summer Flower Show

The North Shore Hort. Society will hold a Summer show of flowers, plants, vegetables and fruits in the rooms of the Young Men's Club, Lake Forest, on July 24. At the close of the show all fruits, flowers and vegetables will be auctioned off, the proceeds going to the War Emergency League.

Robt. Newcomb of the American Bulb Co. has returned from a six months' trip to the Pacific coast. Mr. Newcomb will have an announcement to make to his friends and the trade in general in a few days.

Tom McAllister of the A. Lange force spent a couple of days in South Bend, Ind., the past week, superintending an elaborate decoration in that city for a military wedding.

Annual Meeting Chicago Flower Growers' Ass'n.

The annual meeting of officers and directors of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association was held in the office of the association, 182 N. Wabash ave., Monday afternoon, July 15. The election of officers resulted in no change, all the old officers being re-elected unanimously. Paul R. Klingsporn, who has for several years managed the affairs of the association so successfully, was highly complimented, the business of the association having nearly doubled under his administration. As an appreciation of his services he was added to the board of directors. It is now Director-Manager Klingsporn and he wears his honors gracefully.

them through the Winter and Easter trade. One large house of Godfrey Callas will be grown this season, the plants for which already have a good start.

Albert Lies, North Center, has his full 50 per cent. of coal in, but will shut down a part of his greenhouses this Winter. As soon as the Summer crop of Roses are off, the plants will be dried out so as to better enable them to go through the Winter without heat.

Ananassa sativus variegatus, or variegated Pineapple, is a well known plant in most private collections. A handsome specimen of this in fruit from the greenhouses of the Poehlmann Bros. Co. is on exhibition in the window of Kunze's store on East Randolph st. as a centerpiece for a display of tropical fruit.

Nick Dahm, Morton Grove, has about eight acres in Gladioli that present a promising appearance. The bulbs are planted in rows with from three to four bulbs, according to size planted, about 2in. to 3in. apart in the rows. The rows are sufficiently far apart to admit of cultivation by horse power. This is a convenient as well as economical way of cultivation. Mr. Dahm has two stars in his service flag. Peter is with the national army at Camp Grant and Philip is with the troops in France.

Great Saving in Preparing Land for Carnation Stock

FOLLOWING is what Kretschmar Brothers, of West Nyack, N. Y., say of the system:

"It has always been a great expense to prepare our land for the carnation stock before planting, as each day we would only plough enough for the day's planting so that we could work in moist soil. This also would be all hand raked to get it in the best condition. We can now plough the whole strip and harrow with a spiked tooth harrow and use the Skinner System after each day's planting to water them down."

In Answer To— Is There Money in Growing Greenhouse Vegetables?

IN that new Greenhouse Vegetable Growing Book, we have just published, there are two pages given up mainly to a discussion of greenhouse vegetables as money makers.

Then follow some 20 pages of cultural directions, combined with suggestions from leading men in the business.

Such things as packing are given special attention.

Main Crops, Inter-Crops and Mid-Crops Every One a Money Maker

VALUABLE information about them all is given in this new Greenhouse Vegetable Book. Written by leaders in the business.

Printed by us with the idea of helping more growers to make more money.

Send for a copy. It won't cost you a cent. It may make you many a dollar.

Burpee's Sweet Peas

Fordhook Pink and White
Natural Size

NEW WINTER-FLOWERING SPENCERS

THE coal problem is one of great concern to the commercial florist, and there appears to be no alternative except to produce such crops as can be grown with the smallest amount of heat. Sweet Peas can be successfully grown under conditions that would not allow production of other popular flowers. We recommend to our florist friends that they sow Sweet Peas under glass for a commercial Winter crop. Sweet Peas are the logical paying crop for the coming Winter. They may be grown with very little heat.

The Burpee Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas are the result of crosses made at Fordhook Farms during the past ten years, and are great advances in the various colors. The seed is all grown on our Floradale Farm, "The California Home of Sweet Peas." The greatest care is given to their production, and all stocks may be relied upon as being true to type and color.

BURPEE'S SWEET PEAS during the past few years have been awarded seven silver cups, six gold medals, and innumerable certificates for new varieties; thus clearly demonstrating the great superiority of the stocks that we offer.

LIGHT PINK

3385 Burpee's Early Loveliness The color is white, the entire flower being suffused soft pink until it reaches the edges, which are distinctly picoteed with rose-pink. ½ oz. 75c., oz. $1.25, ¼ lb. $3.75, lb. $12.50.

3397 Burpee's Early Sweet Briar Color a lovely shade of pink throughout, but with a soft salmon or amber suffusion, this being more accentuated in the younger flowers and buds. Somewhat similar in color to the summer-flowering Elfrida Pearson. Awarded Certificate of Merit by The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, March 23, 1917. ¼ oz. 75c., ½ oz. $1.25, oz. $2.00.

DEEP PINK

3384 Burpee's Early Enchantress A bright rose-pink, becoming deeper toward the edges of standard and wings, gradually softening in tone toward the center of the flower. ½ oz. 75c., oz. $1.25, ¼ lb. $3.75, lb. $12.50.

3390 Burpee's Early Pink Beauty The color is soft rose-pink on white ground, richer toward the edges, gradually softening in color as it reaches the center of standard and wings. Awarded Certificate of Merit at The International Show, New York, March 20, 1915; the Spring Show of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, March 23, 1915, and The American Sweet Pea Society, San Francisco, June 9, 1916, when exhibited as Fordhook Countess. ½ oz. 75c., oz. $1.25, ¼ lb. $3.75, lb. $12.50.

ROSE PINK

3383 Burpee's Early Empress This is a magnificent flower of largest size. A most distinct and glorious shade of bright deep rose-pink. A solid color throughout. ½ oz. $1.00, oz. $1.75, ¼ lb $6.00, lb. $20.00.

CREAM PINK

3382 Burpee's Early Daybreak The color is a pleasing shade of rich rose-pink on cream ground, the color becoming deeper toward the edge of standard and wings. Very similar in color to Margaret Atlee. ¼ oz. 75c., ½ oz. $1.25, oz. $2.00.

3396a Burpee's Early Sunburst The color is a pleasing shade of rich pink, becoming lighter toward the base of standard and wings. The entire flower is suffused with soft amber and salmon. Awarded Certificate of Merit at The International Show, New York, March 20, 1915, and The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, March 23, 1915, when exhibited under the name of Early-flowering Mrs. Routzahn. ½ oz. 75c., oz. $1.25, ¼ lb. $3.75, lb. $12.50.

ROSE

CRIMSON AND SCARLET

3386 Burpee's Early King In color similar to King Edward Spencer having all the characteristics of that fine variety. A glowing, rich, bright crimson. Awarded Certificate of Merit at The International Show, New York, March 20, 1916. The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March 23, 1915, also at the Annual Exhibition of The American Sweet Pea Society, San Francisco, June 9, 1916. ½ oz. 75c., oz. $1.25, ¼ lb. $3.75, lb. $12.50.

3394 Burpee's Rosy Morn The color is a pleasing shade of rose with crimson-scarlet standard, while the immense flowers are usually borne in fours on stiff, long stems. ½ oz. 50c., oz. 85c., ¼ lb. $2.50, lb. $8.00.

LAVENDER

3389 Fordhook Pink A distinct shade of pink suffused with lavender throughout. Under artificial light it is particularly pleasing. ½ oz. 50c., oz. 85c., ¼ lb. $2.50, lb. $8.00.

3391a Burpee's Early Princess Color, a lovely shade of soft lavender suffused mauve. A color in great demand. The flowers are most attractively fluted or waved. Similar in color to Asta Ohn. ½ oz. $1.00, oz. $1.75, ¼ lb $6.00, lb. $20.00.

3399 Burpee's Early Zephyr Similar in color to the old grandiflora Mrs. Higginson. It might be briefly described as a silvery blue self. ¼ oz. 75c., ½ oz. $1.25, oz. $2.00, ¼ lb. $6.00.

BLUE

3380 Burpee's Early Blue-Bird This is a charming shade of blue. Somewhat similar to Wedgwood but more of a true self, especially as the flower ages. ¼ oz. 75c., ½ oz. $1.25, oz. $2.00.

MAUVE

3388 Burpee's Early Mauve Beauty Color is a pleasing shade of rosy mauve. Charming under artificial light. ¼ oz. 75c., ½ oz. $1.25, oz. $2.00.

BICOLOR

3398 Yarrawa The color is a bright rose-pink with a clear, creamy base. Floradale-Grown Seed exclusively. Oz. 75c., ¼ lb. $2.40, lb. $8.00.

PICOTEE EDGED

3384a Burpee's Early Exquisite The ground color is a soft shade of primrose, the edge of the standard and wings being beautifully "picoteed" with deep rose-pink. A strong, robust grower, the large flowers are freely borne on long stiff stems usually in threes and fours. ¼ oz. 75c., ½ oz. $1.25, oz. $2.00.

WHITE

3395 Burpee's Early Sankey This truly magnificent white was awarded a special Silver Medal when exhibited at the great International Show in New York, March 20, 1915, also Certificate of Merit at the Spring Show of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March 23, 1915. Black seeded. ½ oz. 75c., oz. $1.25, ¼ lb. $3.75, lb. $12.50.

3396 Burpee's Early Snowstorm We consider this truly magnificent pure white variety to be the best of the white-seeded, early-flowering Spencers yet introduced. The flowers are of great size and substance, beautifully waved, and are borne in great profusion. The stems are long, usually carrying three or four flowers which are well placed. ½ oz. $1.00, oz. $1.75, ¼ lb. $6.00, lb. $20.00.

CREAM

3381 Burpee's Early Canary Bird This is a splendid, rich, deep cream or primrose colored self. Awarded certificate of merit by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, March 23, 1915. ¼ oz. 75c., ½ oz. $1.25, oz. $2.00.

3391 Burpee's Primrose Beauty An attractive and pleasing shade of deep primrose, flushed with rose. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the Spring Exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March, 1915. ½ oz. 75c., oz. $1.25, ¼ lb. $4.50, lb. $15.00.

Boddington's Winter-Flowering Spencers

Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas

Now Ready for Delivery

TO BLOOM FOR THANKSGIVING AND UNTIL MARCH, sow the seed in August in sand using 2 seeds in a 2-inch pot. After growth is advanced a few inches transplant to permanent positions about three inches apart.

All strains of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas contain "rogues" both as to color and the Winter flowering characteristic. The Australian varieties are almost perfectly "fixed" in both respects and are better than the American sorts. Any late bloomers can be readily distinguished as they commence to branch an inch or two above the surface of the soil, whereas the Winter-flowering plants produce a straight vine and more pointed foliage, making no lateral growth until 15 to 18 inches above the surface of the soil. The late bloomers should be eliminated as soon as they can be distinguished.

Australian Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas

BLUE FLAKES. Deep blue, pencilled over a delicate gray white ground; the best blue to date.

CÆRULEA. Delicate sky blue, sometimes a little lighter.

CONCORD BLUSH SHADES. The colors range from white blush and creamy pink to deep pink.

CONCORD CHARM. Delicate shades of white and blue; white wings and very light heliotrope standard.

CONCORD CHRISTMAS PINK SHADES. A Spencer strain of Christmas Pink coloring; as there is some variation in these they are offered as shades.

CONCORD COUNTESS. Most attractive tint of pink, the ideal flower color.

CONCORD COUNTESS IMPROVED. A larger and finer strain of Concord Countess, blush pink on white, ground, deepening at the edge of the standard. Pkt. (25 seeds.)

CONCORD CHIEF. Intense, rich deep maroon, massive Spencer form.

CONCORD DAYBREAK. Cream with standard heavily edge buff pink.

CONCORD EMPEROR. A rich glowing crimson, large blooms of excellent substance and very free flowering.

CONCORD EXQUISITE. Pale pink on rich cream ground, three on a stem. Pkt. (25 seeds.)

CONCORD PURPLE. Mauve purple, changing as the flower ages to purple blue.

CONCORD RADIANCE. A very striking shade of rosy magenta.

RUBY. A glowing light crimson-scarlet color.

SALMONEA. A rich, rosy salmon variety of great merit.

YARRAWA. Bright rose pink, with light wings, ¼ oz., (about 100 seeds) 35c., 1 oz., $1.00, lb., $12.00.

Packets of each of the above contain 50 seeds, except Concord Countess Improved and Concord Exquisite, which contain 25 seeds. Pkt. 40c. each, 5 pkt. $1.75. Except Yarrawa, as noted above.

English Soldiers Raise Flowers and Vegetables

It is a long time since we received a letter from our good friend, T. A. Weston, formerly chronicler of the big London shows, and observer and reporter on novelties emanating or shown in Great Britain. Mr. Weston has been for quite some time past in the service of the English Army, being entrusted with some important clerical work in a cantonment in England. Since he last wrote us he was taken down with the "flue," (influenza), and at the time he wrote (early in July) had only shortly before returned to duty.

As previously stated in these columns Mr. Weston, who has practically no time at his disposal except after working hours, had been unable to resist the impulse to do some gardening work, and followed that inclination in order to make the environment of his tent remind him of old times. Our readers will be interested in that part of Mr. Weston's letter wherein he speaks of the sale of flowers for the cause of the French Ambulance, and his final paragraph, wherein he says "it is wonderful how people were mad to buy flowers." However, we are anticipating Mr. Weston's letter, part of which runs:

Of course the garden work is only done after duty hours. It will be some camp and I doubt if its like can be found in the country. We have more vegetables in and many more flower beds, so nearly all the chaps have planted around their tents. I've put the bar up against any real rival to my own show, for I have over 100 each of Carnations and Begonias, plus many Violets, while in what I call the company show, I have numerous special things. Altogether I'm running over two dozen flower beds of various sizes. The idle plot in front of my tent, I converted into a semi vegetable-flower stunt, with greens, Bush Beans, Tomatoes, Lettuce, etc., fronted by flowers.

Some of the vegetable stock is American, including Spuds. I hope to be able to send you a decent photo or two of the show later.

I hope you are keeping clear of this "flue" epidemic which seems to be sweeping all Europe. Personally, I feel O.K. now. It took about two months to get over my sick turn entirely. I'm all behind reading "F. E.'s," but I saw your splendid supplement and also have noted the wide awake moves. Over here the trade is waking up, as you may have noted, although we haven't the same publicity as you can give.

I hope you are not suffering on your side from drought as here. We were short of water even in the Winter, and since Spring started only very little rain has fallen. Since May 1, we've only had one storm and that of one hour's duration. But for watering, my camp stock would have been dead. My vegetable allotment looks sick: Onions dying back and Spuds don't swell at all. I see everywhere the same conditions prevail and reports of Spring Wheat and Oats are very bad.

I was in London on June 20 when the big floral fair for the French Ambulance was held in Trafalgar sq. Actually it was a big flower show, run by the trade; yet every one who could sent flowers for the lady flower sellers to handle. The British Carnation Society, you may bet, stood in, and I was on the spot with our chairman the first two days. He has just written to say our stall receipts for the seven days were over $1000. All the flowers were donated by our members, and we sold them all on the stand, having a clean up each day. Prices from 12c. to 24c. per bloom. Some grand stock we had, as W. E. Wallace sent us up about 40 dozen a day. Of course it was the trade growers who kept us going, though some of our amateur members sent some really superb flowers.

The National Sweet Pea Society also ran a stall next us, but I haven't heard what they made. They were getting 6c. a spike or spray or stem, as you may call it, for all the big exhibition stock, so I guess they did well. The National Rose Society ran their stuff differently. They simply let the trade have a show for one day, the stock being sold at night. We and the N. S. P. S. did better, I think, by being able to sell all day long.

It was wonderful how the people were mad to buy flowers, and I got some pretty tall rates, such as $5 for six blooms. I was the only soldier acting in the show. With my committee red, white and blue ribbon up, I looked like a 1914 star hero.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists

Information supplied by John Young, Secretary 1170 Broadway, New York

August 20, 21 and 22

The official program covering the convention proceedings was mailed last week to every member of the society. If any should fail to receive his copy a request to the secretary will bring him another. At few conventions of the society have matters of greater importance to the trade been announced for discussion, consequently the attendance at every session in Moolah Temple should be large.

The Trade Exhibition

This prominent feature of the convention promises to be quite as interesting as usual. A few choice locations are yet available, and intending exhibitors should lose no time in communicating with the secretary. The facilities afforded by Moolah Temple for a well-staged exhibition are splendid, allowing of plenty of light, liberal aisle room, and wall space for those who need it. Floor plans may be had on application to the secretary's office.

National Publicity Campaign

The secretary reports a good reception by the trade in Butte, Mont. Practically all of the florists there are now within the membership fold of the society and generous subscriptions to the publicity fund have been made.

In Spokane, Wash., he was also cordially received and a banquet given in honor of his visit. The florists there have organized for mutual benefit and the spirit of co-operation is very apparent. As a result of this visit interest in our society has been greatly stimulated and new members secured. The secretary expresses a great indebtedness to State Vice-president J. W. Duncan, who is superintendent of parks, for many courtesies extended, and also to John F. Austen and C. T. Kipp for help and assistance cheerfully rendered.

Our promotion bureau in the past few days has been dealing with two problems which are of interest to all florists. One is an attempt made through the public press to germanize our useful Cornflower and have it eliminated from the list of florists' flowers; the other is a movement to ban the presentation of flowers to hospital patients, because "nurses are scarce, and the time required for caring for flowers daily cannot be spared." This last problem might become serious were it not for the fact that our bureau is sufficiently well organized to check the movement at the outset.

And yet there are hundreds of florists throughout the country who do not see the value of our publicity campaign and therefore fail to support it. Let one of these florists who may be located in communities where there are hospitals just figure how many sales he makes in a year where the flowers are known to be for hospital presentation, and he will be sure to admit that something should be done to prevent the prohibition of flowers in hospitals. He will realize the little he could do individually to stem the tide of adverse opinion and, consequently, the need of organized effort such as is presented by our publicity campaign. This is only an instance of the work taken up, but should alone be sufficient to break down that barrier of doubt which seems to exist in regard to the far reaching benefit accruing to the entire trade through our campaign work.

Can the trade afford to have the campaign minimized or, perhaps, abandoned, for the want of just a little more support than has so far been given. The publicity committees are only asking for $50,000 per year. Nearly four-fifths of this has been subscribed for the current year. The remainder is coming slowly, very slowly.

Now, to be plain, Mr. Nonsubscriber, the Fall season is approaching, and the committees want to close now for the magazine publicity covering the season ending at Christmas. If you are going to help at all, your assistance is worth more at this time than, perhaps, it ever will be. Won't you send along that little subscription which your conscience prompts you to contribute, so that the publicity committee may report at our August convention that our goal has been reached, and we can continue to spread the propaganda of the flowers, which means so much for you and for everyone in the business.

New York to St. Louis

The transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club has made the following arrangements for transportation to St. Louis to the convention of the Society of American Florists, Aug. 20 to 22, 1918:

The party will proceed over the Pennsylvania Railroad on Sunday, Aug. 18. Arrangements have been made for accommodation on the Keystone Express No. 21, leaving the Pennsylvania Terminal Station, 33d st. and Seventh ave., at 2:04 p.m., and arriving in St. Louis at 5:25 p.m. next day (Monday).

Under existing traffic conditions it has not been possible to secure any rebate in the regular rates, which for the train selected are:

Fare, New York to St. Louis, one way, $31.68; war tax, $2.53. Additional for Pullman train, $5.28; war tax 42c. Pullman berth, lower, $6; war tax 60c. Pullman berth, upper, $4.80; war tax, 48c., or inclusive fare one way: Upper Pullman berth $45.19; lower Pullman berth, $46.51.

In view of the limited passenger service in these times available, all who wish to join the Club party should make early reservations. Address A. L. Miller, chairman transportation committee, Sutphin rd. and Rockaway blvd., Jamaica, N. Y.

Chicago to St. Louis

The Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad has been chosen for the trip of the Chicago Florists' Club members and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at St. Louis ,Mo., August 20-22, leave Dearborn Station, Monday, August 19, at 11:30 p.m., due St. Louis the following morning at 7:37 o'clock. The rates of fare one way, including tax, are: In coach, $9.41; in sleeping car or parlor car, $10.97. There is no party rate and no reduction for round trip. Pullman fares, tax included, are as follows: Lower berth, $2.20; upper berth, $1.76; drawing room, $7.70; parlor car seat, $1.10.

Regarding sleeping car accommodations, and all further particulars, address Sam M. Childs, General Agent Passenger Department, 108 West Adams st., Chicago. Telephone Harrison 5100.

Parties from other points passing through the city are invited to join the Chicago delegation on this train.

MICHAEL BARKER,
Chairman Transportation Committee.

American Gladiolus Society

The ninth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society will be held in Elmwood Music Hall, Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 14, 15, 16 and 17, 1918. The business meeting will be held at 3 p.m. on the first day. A good array of prizes is offered in both the commercial and non-commercial classes. Every effort has been made to so distribute the prizes that every amateur or small commercial grower can successfully compete. It is hoped that the attractive prizes, as well as the central location of Buffalo, may bring out a large number of exhibitors. Growers East and West can easily reach Buffalo, and a large attendance of Gladiolus lovers is desired.

Flowers convey messages of cheer to hearts heavily laden with the anxieties of the war, but strange as it may seem, there are persons who would snatch even this boon of comfort from us. Let us cultivate and exhibit beautiful flowers for their peaceful influence. Every owner of a garden should do his part, and we hope there will be no flower slackers within reach of Buffalo.

The society's silver and bronze medals will be awarded as first and second prizes for the best seedling Gladiolus never before exhibited. W. Atlee Burpee & Co. offer as first prize a silver cup, known as the Burpee trophy, together with $5 in cash, for the best and most distinct new seedling never exhibited before the American Gladiolus Society. In the non-commercial classes the silver and bronze medals of the society are to be awarded for an exhibit of at least 15 varieties, and also for the best and largest exhibit of new varieties introduced in 1917 and 1918. Likewise silver and bronze medals, offered by Henry B. Michell Co., Philadelphia, constitute first and second prizes in the class calling for six spikes, all different, comprising the best display and most harmonious color combinations. Substantial prizes are also offered by A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind., and Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y. In all there are 99 classes.

The final premium list has been mailed, and those who have not received a copy are requested to write without delay to the secretary, A. C. Beal, 212 Kelvin Place, Ithaca, N. Y.

Tractors for Florists

There are several small tractors upon the market, all of which are well worthy of investigation by florists having considerable field areas to cultivate. Horses are expensive, and it has been demonstrated that the work of preparing land thoroughly and cultivating crops effectively can be done without them. Various attachments are furnished for the performance of different work, and the operating cost in gasoline and oil is negligible. They can also be used in drawing heavy loads, and being equipped with a belt attachment and developing from two to four horsepower, are splendid for running circular saws and soil refiners, etc. On the larger places, where extensive outdoor operations are conducted, or in connection with the work of construction and repair about the plant, the small tractor is capable of filling an important place, and the florist will make no mistake in adding one to his rolling stock.—J. McL. [From what we gather these improved small tractors promise to be indispensable even on a small place.—ED.]

Lilium candidum

For Easter 1919

In the sandy soil of the State of Michigan some extra fine Lilium candidum are grown. I have seen them around Benton Harbor, out in the open field, in full bloom—a wonderful sight. There is no doubt but what some will go more extensively into raising the bulbs if a shortage of Japan bulbs becomes apparent. Lilium candidum will never be able to take the place of any of the different kinds of Lilies coming from Japan or Formosa, nor will it adapt itself for early forcing, but with no competitor and the date of Easter as late as April 20 there is no trouble in getting the candidums into flower for that date, which would mean a good price for the flowers. Lilium candidum differs from L. longiflorum or giganteum in regard to the bulbs; the former is really never in a perfect dormant state. If left in the ground over summer it will show green leaves all Summer and the stock planted during August or September will in a short time push above the soil, leaves which remain there all winter. I mention this because it means that for forcing the sooner the bulbs are potted up after they are received the sooner they will get busy and the less vitality you will use up. Bulbs shipped from France, even if of a superior strain are apt to be a long time on the way and not a minute should be lost in getting them planted. We have successfully brought both the imported and home-grown stock into bloom in 5in. and 6in. pots by the early part of April, but the latter part makes it more easy. Place the freshly potted bulbs in a frame and if you don't handle too many I suggest plunging the pots into the soil up to their rims and about an inch layer of soil on top of them. That will give you a chance to keep them moist and cool in any kind of weather. The surface soon will be green with growth and the plants can remain there with sash protection up to November, when they can be brought into a cool house. At another time we will take up what is best to do with them.

Physostegia Virginiana

There is nothing new about Physostegia (False Dragon Head) yet it isn't seen much around the florist's shop in spite of being an excellent cut flower during the months of July and August. True, we have quite a variety of outdoor flowers on hand just now, but lucky is the man who can keep on showing something just a little different or out of the ordinary and it surely means more sales. The Physostegias are easily grown from seed sown now; they are as hardy as anything you overwinter in the field and will grow and do well in any soil. When cut and only partly open on long stems they will last for days; so why not grow them? Keep adding to your list of desirable hardy plants—don't be satisfied with just three or four varieties.

Rudbeckia Newmannii

You are acquainted with the Golden Glow Rudbeckia and if you don't think it a desirable cut flower it is most likely due to the fact that the plants have been neglected, allowed to run out, the latter condition due to not being lifted, divided and transplanted. The fact that they grow like a weed and in any old place makes us neglect them; but they are desirable florists' cut flowers nevertheless, and so are practically all of the Rudbeckias. Among them Rudbeckia Newmannii, which with its golden yellow single and semi-double flowers is in bloom now. It is a fine cut flower and perfectly hardy; seed sown now will give you flowering plants next Summer and if you haven't already a good stock of it on hand by all means work up one for it will pay you to do so. You need flowers to keep up your display in the store, and at this time of the year you don't want Roses and Carnations but outdoor stock. Its time enough for the others next Winter.

Lupinus Under Glass

An Excellent Cut Flower

Lupinus hybridus roseus is an annual and makes a fine cut flower for outdoors and is seen at its best when on three to four foot stems during early Spring under glass. Like the Schizanthus, Calendulas, Stocks and Canterbury Bells it likes a cool house during Winter. While it requires in the neighborhood of 6 months from the time the seed is sown until you cut these long stemmed flowers, there is hardly anything you can get into shape in much less time for extra early Spring flowering. During August is a good time to sow Lupinus outdoors in a frame. Transplant the seedlings about 5in. apart and when the 'Mums leave the houses the plants can be brought in and planted out—a solid bed is the best.

Calceolaria

With Easter coming on April 20 in 1919, and quite a number of plants on the short list, it is for you to think about the plants to take the place of those you could not get. A well grown Calceolaria makes a most desirable flowering pot plant for Easter, not 2½in. or 4in. stock with a few yellow leaves and a little cluster of flowers, but bushy specimens in 5, 6 or 7in. pots with perfect foliage and loaded down with hundreds of blossoms. With a cool house during Winter and keeping the plants clean you can grow Calceolarias successfully in almost any soil provided you have good drainage and don't neglect the plants. As with so many other good things not requiring as much attention we didn't think it worth our while to bother much with Calceolarias, but we should become better acquainted with these beautiful plants. And there is not a retail grower who couldn't easily dispose of a good number of them during Easter week if he has them on display, even when shown to compete with Azaleas, Rhododendrons, Roses or Hydrangeas. Sow now and keep the plants clean and cool.

Next Christmas

Things To Think of Now

If you are going to be in business next Christmas just how well you will do will depend to a great extent on yourself. With enough suitable stock, proper way of displaying the same and advertising you are bound to do well. The question will be more a matter of obtaining stock than to dispose of it. At present we are still in the dark as to what will reach us from the other side in the way of Roman Hyacinths, white and yellow Polyanthus, Narcissi or Tulips for extra early forcing. For inexpensive stock such as you can use instead of Roman Hyacinths and Tulips for made-up pans or basket arrangements Freesias, Primroses, small Cyclamens, Begonias, Peppers, 3½in. and 4in. plants of Asparagus and table ferns will all come in handy and more attention than ever should be paid to them. See to it in time to stock up with some of these things; get a good supply of inexpensive baskets, have them on hand (don't depend on shipments in the last month), work up a stock of nice Asparagus plumosus and the different Pteris ferns. Seedling Asparagus potted up now into 2in. pots will make excellent plants by December. Empty benches don't pay; fill them up. A well flowered red Chinese Primula in an inexpensive basket with a few Asparagus plumosus around it and a little bow of ribbon on the handle makes an ideal Christmas arrangement and of this or something of similar effect the average retail grower throughout the country can dispose of a large number. Don't wait for the war to stop or for conditions to change or get better or worse, but get busy with your preparations. There is a whole lot that you can do now and we have every reason to believe that flowers and plants will be in as great, if not greater, demand next Christmas than ever before. Substantial and expensive gifts will be out of the question, while flowers or a growing plant will be considered ideal to "cheer things up," and that is what we need just now.

Lilium candidum

Coreopsis lanceolata grandiflora

Did you know that the Coreopsis is an excellent plant to be brought indoors during February and when planted in a 48 deg. house will flower freely during April and early May? By sowing seed now you will obtain heavy plants by the end of October when those you want for forcing should be lifted and planted into well-protected frames. By well-protected I mean a frame which will make it possible to get at the plants any time during Winter without having to make use of a pick to get them out. While these Coreopsis are splendid cut flowers for outdoors during early Summer, they will pay better by far if a part of them is made use of to flower under glass, but like the Canterbury Bell, they won't stand any hard forcing.

Ranunculus repens flore pleno

Here we have another excellent perennial for indoor flowering during early Spring. When left to themselves outdoors the plants will in a short time send out runners in every direction and soon the whole bed will be one solid mass. The plants will prove shy bloomers, but when separated about this time and the runners kept away the plants will be loaded during early June with their little golden yellow flowers on 15-18in. long stems. Plants divided now will be just right to be lifted this Fall, heeled into a frame and treated the same as the Coreopsis. These Ranunculus will be in full flower during April; don't allow too much space between them and remove the runners, even some of the outer leaves, as they grow and spread out, for it isn't leaves you want but flowers. I am sure you will find a part of a bench devoted to them a paying crop and one that will be out of the way for the Geraniums and other bedding stock requiring room for the final shift.

Cold Storage Giganteum Lilies

No doubt but what there will be quite a number of growers who intend making use of Lilium giganteum from cold storage and trying to get them to come in during the winter months and Spring as far as possible, even as late as Easter. I don't say that it isn't possible to get them as late as that date and while I consider it very fortunate to have so many cold storage bulbs on hand to draw from, I do not believe it a paying proposition for the smaller grower to depend on these Lilies for too late a date next Spring. By all means plant some right along up to late Fall; the flowers—no matter whether you get them in December, January or later—always pay and we always find good use for them, but these bulbs are not like whiskey which improves with age. They gradually lose some of their vitality even with the best care insofar as this is possible to give. Another important matter regarding their culture is the heat question. The cold storage kind do not differ in this respect from the freshly imported ones so when the plants are once under way and growing don't make the mistake of trying to grow them successfully in a Carnation house temperature. It can't be done during the Winter months; the plants will stand still when about 6in. in height and remain there, while in a house of 60 deg. they will give you the desired stem and perfect flowers if kept clean. We had a batch last year which had come along fine up to Christmas but was kept in a Carnation house after that. There wasn't another move out of them and not a single perfect flower was cut from the plants, while another lot from the same shipment, kept in a 62 deg. house, grew splendidly and had to help pay for the bad ones.

New York Seed Trade

Nothing could be deader than business n the New York seed stores at the pres- nt time. They lack the usual work of aking up the Autumn bulb catalogs, nd other necessary preparations for the eception of bulbs from the several parts f the world. The announcement that he restriction has been removed from he importation of Bermuda Lily bulbs as aroused some interest, though they re no longer a leading feature in the ulb trade. Some importers are raising he question of whether the restrictions ill not be lifted on Japan bulbs also, nd whether we will not have Holland nd French bulbs, too, and the trade be n the end provided with more bulbs than will be able to dispose of this Autumn.

Chicago Seed Trade

Robt. Newcomb, who for several years as been connected with the seed trade f this city, and was until a few days go a salesman and director in the Ameri- n Bulb Co., has resigned his position ith this company and will enter into ew business relations in Salt Lake City, tah. "Bob," as he is familiarly called, as a host of friends in Chicago who ish him well in his new field of enter- rise.

News has reached Chicago that is very ratifying to the trade, namely, that the War Trade Board will issue licenses for he importation of L. Harrisii bulbs from ermuda, confining shipment by the one eat, S.S. Charybdis.

D. D. Roy, Lake Forest, was in the ty the past week. His friends are glad see him entirely recovered from his cent illness. War conditions have not een good for business in Lake Forest is season, as so many of the proprietors the estates in that section are at resent sojourning in the large cities of e East.

Carl Cropp, Jr., son of Carl Cropp of aughan's Seed Store, an ensign in the ransport and Convoy Service, has been the city the past week on a 10 days' rlough.

C. M. Jackmann, well known to the hicago seed trade, has been in the city r several days. He relates many in- dents of suffering and privation while terned in a German camp.

Winterson's Seed Store reports the de- and for late vegetable seed keeping up ell. The late demand last season was od, but this season it is much better. hey are having a good trade in Freesias d Lilium candidum.

Vaughan's Seed Store has commenced s usual exhibit of Gladioli blooms at s Randolph st. store, which will be kept during the blooming season. Geo. ohn returned Saturday from a trip rough Wisconsin and Minnesota and ports good business.

Oshkosh, Wis.

The Oshkosh Seed Co. has purchased e Revere House, which will be entirely modeled to suit the purposes of the com- ny, and when alterations are completed ey will move into it from their present ation at 910 South Main st. The mpany will also erect an addition of rator construction which will be uipped with the latest improved ma- inery for cleaning, weighing and hand- g its product with the greatest econ- y. The new quarters, by reason of eir size and location, promise to give e Oshkosh Seed Co. one of the most odern and thoroughly equipped seed uses of the Northwest. It is but re- ntly the company acquired a large farm the shore of Lake Butte des Morts r the purpose of experimentation and rain development. Carl Roewekamp is esident of the company; Geo. L. Born vice-president, and Henry Roewekamp secretary and treasurer.

Lily Bulb Prospects in Bermuda

It is reported that the Bermudian Director of Agriculture estimates that this season's production of Lily bulbs will total 1200 crates, as against a little over 1000 crates produced last year.—Commerce Reports.

Bermuda Onion Seed Crop Short

Another very short crop of Onion seed of the Yellow Bermuda and Crystal Wax varieties has been grown in the Coachella Valley, Cal. While the acreage is more than three times as large as last year the yield per acre may not greatly exceed the yields in 1917. Reporters on the ground agree that the crop will be only 15 per cent. of normal, which is considered 500 lbs. per acre. After deducting abandoned acreage the area to be harvested is 176, as compared with 50 last year. Thrips did serious damage to the crop and a rain on July 15 is reported to have inflicted further injury.

Expediting Seed Imports

To inform seedsmen of the best methods of importing seeds, the Seeds Stock Committee of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture has taken up with the War Trade Board and the U. S. Shipping Board the steps necessary to obtain Government assistance promptly. An import license is required for the importation of seeds. Application blanks for import licenses may be obtained from the Bureau of Imports, War Trade Board, Washington, D. C., or at branch offices of the War Trade Board in various cities. The Seed Stocks Committee is to advise with the War Trade Board as to the importance of seeds proposed to be imported in cases of embargoes by foreign countries.

Making Nitrogen from Air

The largest experimental plant in the United States for the manufacture of fixed nitrogen from the air, with the exception of the ones now being constructed for the War Department, is in operation at the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture Experiment Farm, Arlington, Va. At this plant the nitrogen from the air is combined with hydrogen to form ammonia which can be used in the manufacture of explosives and fertilizer. Experiments are now being conducted at this plant by the Bureau of Soils with a view to increasing the efficiency of the process. The War Department is co-operating in this work. What is known as the Haber process of nitrogen fixation is being used. This process involves the production of ammonia from hydrogen and nitrogen. The two gases are mixed in the proper proportions, put under high pressure, subjected to intense heat, and passed over spongy iron, whereupon a portion of the mixture combines to form ammonia.

Using Greenhouses to Grow Early Frost Tender Vegetable Plants

The third of a series of articles dealing with the use of greenhouses for growing early vegetable plants for transplanting outdoors to produce Summer vegetables. This article covers particularly Tomatoes, Eggplants and Peppers which are in the class of tender vegetable Plants easily injured by frost

This class of plants includes those that are easily injured by a frost if it occurs after the plants are set outdoors. Tomatoes, Eggplants, Peppers, Celery and Sweet Potatoes belong to this class, although Celery is hardier than the others mentioned. Other warm season vegetable plants which are often started indoors before the danger of frost is past are Melons, Cucumbers, Beans, Squash and Sweet Corn, but these are grown only on a small scale for private use and not for the commercial trade. Since the first five mentioned are the most important for commercial purposes, they will be discussed here and the less important ones will not be taken up unless there is a request for this information.

The work of growing the frost tender plants fits in very well with the work of growing the hardy plants like Cabbage. The work of transplanting the Cabbage and Lettuce will be going on when Tomato seed is sown and will be finished before the Tomatoes need transplanting. The seed of Tomatoes, Peppers, etc., will be sown at different times and will not be ready for transplanting until the Tomatoes have been attended to. This refers to the earliest Tomatoes which are transplanted twice before they are planted outside. In the hardening of the plants, the Tomatoes will follow the Cabbage from the warmer to the cooler greenhouse and then to frames, perhaps, so it can be seen that it is a good plan to grow a general line of plants in order to utilize the greenhouse space to the best advantage.

Growing Tomato Plants

The time for starting Tomatoes will depend upon whether they are transplanted twice, or only once before they are planted outdoors. The plants that are transplanted twice will have the first cluster of flowers developed when they are planted outdoors, but those that are transplanted once will be considerably smaller and ripe Tomatoes will not be produced until about two weeks after the Tomatoes begin to ripen on the twice-transplanted plants.

About eight weeks are required to grow plants that are shifted twice, while about six weeks' time is sufficient to grow those that are shifted once. To this time should be added about two weeks to harden the plants well before they go outdoors. If the average date of the latest Spring frost is about May 5, then the plants that are to be shifted twice should be started about Feb. 25, and those that are to be shifted once should be started about March 15. In warmer sections the time will be earlier, and in the cooler Northern States it will be a little later than these dates. If the early Spring months are cloudy in some sections, perhaps a little more time may be needed.

For plants shifted twice, the seed will be sown about Feb. 25 for the above conditions. Flats or greenhouse benches may be used for the seed bed. Since the damping off disease may be troublesome at this season of the year it is advisable to sow in rows not too thickly. If the seeds are good they may be sown about 12 to the inch in rows 2 to 2½in. apart. The surface soil should be porous to prevent water from standing on the surface. When the first rough leaf appears the plants should be shifted to flats or another bench, about 2in. apart each way. The soil should be kept just moist enough for steady growth, but not overwatered. Rapid growth should be avoided. The soil must not be very rich, especially in nitrogen, because the plants may grow too fast and become too large to handle well. soil in which some other crop has be grown may be used here if it contains little well rotted organic matter.

When these plants are 4in. to 5in. t they are ready for the second shiftin This time they may be placed in 3in. 4in. paper pots which are best when t plants are to be sold in the pot. The plants are not checked in growth at when they are planted outdoors, sin their large root system will not be d turbed. Such plants set outdoors abo May 5 will produce ripe Tomatoes abo June 25 to July 1. Of course, it is und stood that only the early varieties s started so early in the Spring. There no advantage in starting the Stone, wh is a late Tomato, so early in the Spri

The temperature for germination a for the young plants must be 60 deg. 70 deg. After the second shift, when t plants have started well, the temperatu may be lowered gradually a few degr to maintain a slow growth and keep t plants stocky. This may be done taking them to a cooler greenhouse, wh the temperatures may be lowered s more later on to harden the plants. warm sections even, greenhouses with artificial heat will warm up with t heat of the sun in the Spring to temp atures too high for the hardening proce In this case the plants may be put in c frames.

At the time of the second shift t plants may be set in cold frames in m erate climates, but the advantage paper pots is that the plants may be mov a little farther apart to keep them stoc if they begin to grow too fast.

The plants which are started abo March 15 and shifted only once bef they are planted outside will be ready the first transplating in about two wee when the first rough leaf appears. T inch pots may be used for this shift si they are so easily handled for the tra Another plan is to shift them 2in. ap each way in flats where they may rem until sold about May 5 to 10. Wh these plants have made a good start th may be placed in the cool greenhouses in frames.

In order to have a constant supply plants for sale, the seed should be so at intervals of ten days until three four sowings have been made. In ma home gardens, the early Tomatoes are only ones planted, and for this reason greatest demand for plants will be dur May, or perhaps early June, in the Nor Since the late Tomatoes are planted ab June 20 to 25 in the vicinity of Washi ton, D. C., and a little earlier fart north, the last sowing of seed in Spring could be made with a late variety Tomatoes. Some of the early varieties, l Chalk's Early Jewel, Bonny Best a others, have a long producing sea after they begin to ripen. This is kind of a variety that should be used n year, since they are heavier produc than Earliana for example, and are l ter for home canning. The late varie are more extensively used for canni ill be treated together. Both require gher temperatures than Tomatoes for ed germination and early growth of the ants, namely, 70 deg. to 80 deg. The ed will rot if the soil is cold.

It is usually the case that leaf s and other diseases of Tomatoes get th start while the plants are close toget in the beds. For this reason they sho be sprayed well at least once in the b with Bordeaux mixture before they offered for sale.

The seed may be sown as suggested for omatoes, in rows about 2in. apart, and out 12 seeds the inch in the row. The il may be kept warm enough on raised nches. When the plants are 1in. to ½in. tall they may be shifted to green-ouse benches, 2in. to 2½in. apart each ay, or they may be transplanted to ats. The Eggplants have a little more preading habit than Peppers and need ore space. Since the plants are never lanted outside until the ground has armed up well, they may remain in the reenhouses until they are sold, especially the North.

The time of starting the plants is about larch 1, when the average date of the test Spring frost is May 10 to 15. The il should contain plenty of well rotted rganic matter. Plant lice may attack e Eggplants, but they may be controlled ith tobacco smoke or Black Leaf 40. insect troubles the Peppers.

Aspirations of the South

Instead of receiving large shipments of oses from the North, Southern growers m to supply the North with flower ship-nts, instead. They claim that their out-or Roses are equal to those grown in reenhouses in the North, their climate ing such that the coal problem will not aterially affect their business, it being ecessary in the vicinity of Houston, Tex., to uild a fire in the greenhouses only two or ree times a week from Nov. 15 to Mar. 10, oal being available for the purpose if de-red. Ranges of greenhouses are being uilt in several sections of the South with ds end in view, and in time it may come to ass that the Southland will supply Northern arkets at certain seasons to a greater or ss extent.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

Seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

All sorts and mixtures except where noted are: $5.00 per oz., $1.25 per ¼ oz., 5000 seeds $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c.; any 5 packets, $1.00. Please order by number.

22. GIANT KENILWORTH STRAIN. The flowers are of perfect form and substance, many of the immense flowers are from 3½- to 4-in. It is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.
24. GIANT KENILWORTH SHOW. An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance. A beautiful collection of colors and markings.
26. GIANT KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 in. long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.
28. GIANT MASTERPIECE. A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance; large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stem.
30. GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES. A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich, velvety colors; reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large, dark blotches.
32. GIANT PARISIAN. The flowers are of enormous size and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground; an unusually showy mixture.
34. GIANT BRONZE. A fine mixture of all shades of velvety brown, bronze, Havana brown, mahogany and copper shades.
36. TRIUMPH OF GIANT. Remarkably beautiful. The imposing five-spotted flowers on long, vigorous stalks surmount the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size, perfectly round and of unusual substance. The individual petals are very broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double, the border of every petal being conspicuously curled. The plants are of a robust growth and form compact bushes of a round shape.
20. PRINCESS. (The New Upright Pansy.) This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture on heavy stem carried well above the foliage. Attractive by brilliancy of its colors.

10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION

Is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of all varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivalled mixture. 500 seeds 30c., 1000 seeds 50c.; ⅛ oz. $1.35, ¼ oz. $2.50, oz $10.00.

New Early-Flowering, or Winter-Blooming

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, with dark eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with dark eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. Each color separate or mixed.

500 seeds 25c., 1000 seeds 40c., ⅛ oz. $1.10, ¼ oz. $2.00, oz. $7.50.

70. ORCHID-FLOWERED, MIXED. A dwarf, free bloomer, with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other Pansies; a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, blush mauve, fawn, light brown orange and chamois

GIANT PANSY SEED

In Separate Colors

46. Giant Apollo (Masterpiece type). New bronze, veined and blotched.
48. Lord Beaconsfield. Purple, shaded white.
50. Goliath. Large, curled yellow, blotched.
56. Light Blue Shades.
80. Purple. Large rich deep color.
84. Mercury. New. A deep blackish purple, really self-colored.
86. Pres. McKinley. Yellow, dark blotched.
98. Psyche. Curled white, with five blotches.
100. Yellow. With dark blotch
102. Yellow. Large golden. yellow.
104. White. With violet blotch.
106. White. Large satiny white.
110. 38 to 108 mixed.

What Shall We Plant?

Truly a vital question to every florist. Judging from inquiries and orders received, Snapdragons will be the main stay of many florists. There is no plant that will fill the gap so well as Snapdragon. Easy to grow, great producer, ready sale for every occasion. Will stand low temperature and respond to treatment when required. Be wise and plant heavily of SNAPDRAGON.

It is now time to sow seed. We have all of the good ones. Seed of our famous Silver Pink: $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50, 7 for $5.00. Seed of our new Hybrid Pink, same price. Seed of Nelrose, Garnet, White, Yellow, Light Pink, Buxton and Fancy Mixed, 35c. per pkt.; 3 for $1.00. Free cultural directions. All orders cash.

Do the wise thing today and sow some Snapdragon seed. Grow your own plants and save transportation worry.

Wistaria—Where Best to Use Them

With the name "Wistaria" there comes over us that me inexplicable feeling that somehow is connected with ilacs, Violets, Roses and other old garden favorites. 'e know them to love them.

The year before last was a "great" year for Wistaria. ıey seemed to be supercharged with flowers and fra- rance. The writer has in mind an immense old speci- en of Wistaria sinensis that now covers an area of 56 sq. ft.; not including some snake-like stems that have ffectionately" coiled themselves through the branches an adjacent Oak tree. The fragrance from its thou- nds of flowers could be strongly detected quite some stance from the plant and the bees found a veritable radise in the nectaries of the flowers. This plant we eak of is situated off the angle or bend of a driveway good sunlight and has now rmed a huge arching, rambling le, its main axis having quite tree- ce proportions. Its presence there w depicts no slender, weak vine, it has a note of authority indicat- g plainly that we should keep to e road and not "cut across" the gle or corner of the lawn.

Quite a unique use is made of the istaria on one place we know. It planted on the summit of a rather ep slope that faces the south, in mpany with the common Sweet neysuckle, Lonicera Halliana. oth have held their own in compe- tion with each other and have ntly held the soil of the bank m washing down. The Honey- kle forms the carpeting for the re rigid growth of the Wistaria, l there they grow and compliment h other and serve out beauty h utility.

We all know of the Wistaria's ue for garden pergolas, and it ms to us no series of climbing nts is complete without its pres- e. In its relation to the pergola, re than any other position, its ving racemes of purple and white wers are displayed in unfettered s ndor.

Ve recall the first time we saw l more rare variety—Wistaria ltijuga, on a rustic wood-post pergola, with a wide laice top. As one stood in the shade of the pergola and glanced down its length the long racemes of this Wistaria me measuring two and a half feet) gave quite a floral pière effect.

or clothing high spacious verandas and porches it is ought into frequent use; indeed it seems inseparable m the old colonial mansion. How this vine loves to c itself around the liberal columns, along the eaves of th porch, and up to the topmost gables of the house and thow out its festoons of bloom.

he pretty picture shown herewith is one of many such nes associated with quaint old residences throughout the ntry. This is a remarkably old plant (as is seen by th height and caliper of the stems) and graces the front nt a fine old residence in historic Germantown, Phila- lphia. For many years it has given this wealth of om as portrayed. Who can estimate its worth?

fore frequent use should be made of the Wistaria in th standard or tree form. Specimens of good size can n be obtained from the nurseryman; trained up to a ngle stem with well-balanced heads they form a huge bouquet of bloom each year.

hat position on each side of the path leading to the ase, or at that sharp turn in the path where you had thought of putting a Catalpa Bungei or a Weeping Mul- berry, put instead a tree Wistaria. It could fill some sition in the formal flower garden, perhaps, there to gi needed height at some point, together with a charm- in Spring effect. Its purple blossoms would blend beau- tifully with the yellow of some May flowering Tulips plted beneath it.

o keep the plant gainly and compact, as it should be fo these formal positions, the long growths formed dr ng the Summer are shortened back to the main por- tio of the head.

Because of the greater charm found in the Chinese and Japanese species, our native one, Wistaria frutescens, and its improved variety magnifica have had to take a back seat. These (our native ones) have a much shorter and denser inflorescence and usually flower later in the season. For the clean attractive foliage as well as for the flower, they are deserving of attention for exposed porches and for covering old tree trunks.

Not often do we see the pretty double-flowered form of W. sinensis, whose flowers appear a much darker and richer purple, probably because of the fact that they are double. Its propagation, depending only on grafting or layering, no doubt accounts for its rarity.

The pure white forms, of which there are two (Wistaria multijuga alba and Wistaria sinensis alba), are not quite as much in demand as the purples, but where the plant is so placed that there is a background of green to act as a foil for the nude racemes of flowers the effect is most beautiful. EDWIN MATTHEWS.

Thuja gigantea

That the Thuja gigantea is rare in cultivation with us is entirely our own fault. The chief reason why it is scarce is because of the plants tested being from the warmer portions of the Pacific States instead of from the hardier ones. In its wild condition it extends from British Columbia to Washington, Oregon, California to Idaho; and that plants from the coldest of these States are quite hardy in Pennsylvania has been verified several times.

That many plants set out in nearby States to Pennsylvania have succumbed to our Winters is true, but these plants have been raised in, and imported from, European nurseries, and results appear to prove the seeds were obtained from the warmer States or British Columbia, instead of from colder ones, such as Idaho, for instance. Let some of our nurserymen procure seeds of hardy origin, and there should be no trouble in getting the plants from them to thrive.

The verdure of the Thuja gigantea is of a far greener hue than that of the Thuja occidentalis, in both Summer and Winter. It does not become of the lighter color the occidentalis takes on in Winter. Its habit of growth is less slender than occidentalis, but for all it is never less than pyramidal. Its full growth is represented in a very large tree, one of the largest of evergreens, while as well known, the T. occidentalis is never more than a small tree at best.

As Arborvitæ seeds sown in Spring germinate well, seeds should be sent for from the coldest regions; then seedlings worth having would result. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Japanese Barberry and Spiræa Van Houttei as Hedge Plants

That veteran nurseryman and keen observer, E. Y. Teas of Ohio, favors us with a few notes on Hedges, placing special emphasis on the value for that purpose of Spiræa Van Houttei. Of interest will also be his remarks concerning Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora; especially his method of pruning may be a revelation to those of our readers who may have had difficulty in producing blooms in quantity or perhaps experienced difficulty in maintaining life in this variety as was our experience

While I think highly of the Japanese Barberry for a hedge, that is not the only one which is useful. It is now about 14 years since I planted a hedge of Spiræa Van Houttei in this village of Eaton, Ohio. I planted it in November, and for years it has been the admiration of the community. More hedges of Spiræa Van Houttei have been planted here since then, and we have some specimens as fine as can be found anywhere. In June, when in boom, these hedges are not surpassed in graceful beauty by any other shrub. They are usually trained to about 5ft. high and 3ft. across. They should be cut back in June and again lightly in August. They are practically defensive against stock and dogs. The plants are as hardy as Oaks.

California Privet usually kills to the base line. This Spring's plants have generally started from below, and are now about 2ft. tall. There are comparatively few vacant places. I do not think this equals in beauty either Spiræa Van Houttei or Berberis Thunbergii.

Hydrangea Arborescens Grandiflora

In this village there are hundreds of clumps of Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora, or American Everblooming Hydrangea. The clumps stand 5ft. to 6ft. high, and about 3ft. across. These have been in bloom since the fore part of June, with heads of flowers 6in. to 10in across. These clumps will afford some bloom nearly every day until sharp frost about the last of October. This plant does not form a tree-like shrub like Hydrangea p. g., but should be cut down to within 5in. or 6in. of the ground in February. If early bloom is desired, it is well to leave a half dozen branches near full length for early bloom. The cut stubs will shoot up and begin to bloom the latter part of June. I have repeatedly sold this Hydrangea to customers in far away Winnipeg, also in Montreal, and the type, H. arborescens abounds in the moist regions of Georgia and Alabama, so its hardiness should satisfy customers in all sections.

Georgia Fruit Tree Bill

There has just been filed in the Georgia Legislature a bill (S. 214) to establish the measure of damages in those cases where fruit trees are not true to name. The purchaser may collect $3 per tree for each year between the date of purchase and the first day of November of the year in which such trees shall have borne fruit disclosing the variety thereof.

It is apparent that no Georgia nurseryman could sell any fruit trees if this bill were enacted. A thousand trees, taking seven years to bear fruit, would involve damages payable by the nurseryman of $21,000. Such measure of damages is absurd, and does not, in any event, represent the actual damages, as a review of cases decided by the courts will show. This bill, if enacted, would render the more or less usual disclaimer of warranty clause employed by American nurserymen of no avail. CURTIS NYE SMITH.

In our next issue we propose to publish an article by Mr. Matthews on "Evergreens for City Gardens." It will be appreciated, we feel assured, as it names all the evergreens which have been tried and found suitable for the purpose.

Seedsmen and others are warned by the Federal Trade Commission to scrupulously observe the many laws now in force governing unfair methods of competition, including maintenance of standard resale prices, arbitrary control over the business of dealers through threat of price discrimination, etc. Convictions have been made.

Guada Bean

Even though the Guada Bean has to date not been accounted as of much value, the plant arouses considerable curiosity, and if any of our readers should desire to obtain seed they can procure same from F. H. Bruning Pty, Ltd., 64 Elizabeth st., Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, who claim that in addition to its culinary value the Guada Bean emits a pleasant fragrance and is ornamental as well. And, by the way, the correct botanical name of the Guada Bean as given by Bailey is Trichosanthes anguina and not T. anguinea as recently reported. It is a native of India, but widely planted, and is half hardy, Bailey states.

Burpee Farms' Inspection

On page 141 will be found an interesting account of Burpee Farms' Inspection, written by W. F. Therkildson, who has the happy faculty of making his writings interesting through the insertion here and there of a particularly happy word or line.

With our natural tendency to draw a lesson from good things which come under our observation, we want to point out to other seedsmen, both large and small, the desirability of having in their show grounds "Collection Gardens" on the order of those maintained by W. Atlee Burpee Co.

Even one Collection Garden, the result of $1 or $5 worth of seeds, would be an asset on the grounds of those of our florists who handle seeds; of these the number is quite large. There could be no better way of demonstrating what may be obtained from such a collection, and how it should be produced. The business reaped from such an exhibition planting would many times over repay the effort. Think this over for next year.

With a vegetable collection garden, a good representative perennial border, and a showground of trees and shrubs, the progressive florist could not fail to add largely not only to his reputation but to his annual income.

Why Call Yourself a Florist if You Don't Subscribe?

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

Just a word with reference to your editorial, page 92, under date of July 20, entitled, "Why subscribe if you don't read?" I am sure there is no one in the United States, particularly in the florist business, who can appreciate this more than the Washington representative of the S. A. F. and O. H.

We try to watch every new legislation, whether favorable or unfavorable, for the florists, throughout the United States and Canada, and we immediately wire information to the trade papers forthwith, as in the case of the 40 tons fuel order, or in the Bermuda Easter Lily case, or Senate Resolution No. 3344, and in every instance the trade papers have been prompt and anxious to publish all such information. It is really amazing, in view of all this, that so many florists seem to overlook the fact that they are making a living in the United States, and are or should be United States citizens, and therefore parts of our Government, and that "We are in this War to Win." And notwithstanding this this office is ceaselessly bombarded with all manner of questions that have already been fully answered in the trade press. I therefore wish to congratulate and commend you on your editorial "Why subscribe, if you won't read?" I might add to this "Why call yourself a florist or grower if you don't subscribe?"

Very truly yours,
Wm. F. Gude,
Wash. Rep. S. A. F. and O. H.

July 20, 1918.

Coal Screenings for Western States

The news that Indiana, Illinois and states west of the Mississippi river will be allowed to burn screenings for the remainder of their coal allotment was received in Indianapolis with genuine satisfaction. It is now believed that the meeting in Washington with the fuel administrator was productive of results in a great way, and that the eastern florists will be remembered just as soon as it is possible to do so. Irwin Bertermann.

The Coal Situation

The order covering the use of coal under the 40-ton maximum allowance having been passed on favorably by the Fuel Administration will relieve the anxiety of thousands of smaller florists, as this official decision will enable them to obtain as much fuel this coming Winter as they had been using previously.

Larger florists will be glad to learn that Dr. Garfield, head of the Fuel Administration, has made the statement that coal will be apportioned from Washington to meet the necessities of each and every state and those states which have not yet received their allotment will certainly receive it before Winter sets in, so this declaration should relieve the minds of those particularly who are still without their quota.

For conditions in Illinois and Indiana and States west of the Mississippi, see our Chicago letter this issue.

New New York Fuel Administrator

After a long delay, D. W. Cooke has received the appointment as Fuel Administrator for the State of New York. Mr. Cooke is vice-president of the Erie Railroad; also was acting as chairman of the Traffic Executives of the Allied Nations. Chas. E. Robertson and Reeves Schley will become assistant fuel administrators. Mr. Cooke will have full authority over the entire State of New York. In making announcement of his appointment Dr. Garfield made this important statement:

"In the present distribution plan, each State will receive a fixed part of the available supply as determined by Washington and New York accordingly is bound to receive its part in any event, whether delivered now or later."

This announcement should give some relief to the anxious florists in New York State who have not yet received their coal supply. Of these there are quite a number, from what we gather, and they should feel further assured through the fact that in Mr. Cooke New York State now has a man of great executive ability in charge of the fuel situation.

Society of American Florists and the Trade

In three weeks from the date of this week's paper members will be leaving or preparing to leave for St. Louis where, on the following Tuesday, Aug. 20, will be opened its thirty-fourth annual convention by the Society of American Florists.

It has been the writer's privilege to attend every one of these annual conventions, dating from the 6th held in Boston in August, 1890 (with the exception of that one held in St. Louis in 1904) and so some authority may be attached to what is here said with regard to the progress of this organization, prefacing with the remark that through observation and participation in convention meetings of other bodies, all alike are showing a marked tendency to take up business efficiency problems differing greatly from the old times in which days it was the fashion for most to extract pleasure to the limit out of the convention and "hang" business! But there were some marked exceptions in the case of the Society of American Florists, as many of its meetings were highly indicative of a business procedure in that a number of earnest minded men closely attended all the meetings and joined heartily in whatever debates were up.

Some of the meetings in the early days were heavily attended, many of them more so than of late, notably that one held at Washington in 1892, when the late James Dean presided and held big audiences through sheer exercise of his masterly authority and tactics. In those days, and before the trade papers began to exercise the influence that they do today, matters which occupied the floor were of a technical nature, and had to do mainly with the everyday cultural work problems of the grower.

In line with all other trade associations, however, the later tendency to take up discussion of the business problems of the day by the S. A. F. has been marked. Again, in common with other trade organizations, the whole progress has been accentuated through the efforts of its officers, working in connection with specially selected committees, to prepare the way beforehand for the enactment of special association legislation business. Thus it now happens that if the delegates on the floor are keenly interested in measures in progress, or if they h not paid attention to the publicity which had hitherto b given the measure, they remain in ignorance of w actually had been transacted—their own fault. method of progress through committees has been bro about through the acknowledged fact that few innovat indeed could be carried through in a brief three days, w no previous discussion has taken place, and three or score active men, without previous investigation, took the measure under discussion, at whatever angle it presented itself to them, each man in eloquent defens his own idea, with the result that the body of deleg were puzzled as to what course they should take, and measure, regardless of its merits, as a rule was laid the table or utterly defeated. Many important meas in the past were so defeated, hence the introductio working out problems by committees and then ha them approved on the convention floor.

All too many florists and men of the allied indust seem to have concluded that their attendance is not w while at the convention nor their financial support requi These men are at error in both particulars. Their pres on the convention floor can be made manifest and t hearty interest further demonstrated through taking membership. The very men who are likely to be most are those seemingly most indifferent.

Just why or how any man or firm can deliberately ig the Society of American Florists is something those wh of it cannot understand. Even though in many cas may be impossible to attend meetings, all in the t should at least be members, if even for the moral sup Particularly every florist who is a grower should member just as every florist who is a retailer should be to the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Ass'n, membe dues being a trifle indeed in comparison with the be which these societies are conferring on the trade at l There may have been a time in the history of the so when urging men to join did not have the warrant it has. Today we know, and all others know, that men ship is next door to a vital necessity, and he who ref from joining, and he who remains indifferent, are acting for best trade interests.

The Society of American Florists should have a men ship of at least 5000—there are sufficient men engag the industry to warrant its officials looking for a men ship of 8000.

Just imagine, if you please, the effect these days a to some of the Washington officials on the part of officers of the S. A. F. would have if they could sho solidarity behind them of 5000 employers, representin average capital of $5000, and the employment of at 25,000 persons.

We are addressing ourselves today broadly to our rea and we hope that what we say on behalf of the Socie American Florists will have good effect in inducing ma join who have hitherto remained on the outside.

Remember the dues to the S. A. F. & O. H. are on the first year, and $3 each year thereafter, or $25 fo membership to those already members. Surely this petty sum to give up yearly when it is considered that amount of money will make you a member of o the most progressive and most influential of the t organizations of the country.

It will do no harm to point out that had it not been fo existence of the Society of American Florists the re tions under which growers are laboring today as to coal allowance might have been more severe, in fact for its representatives they might have been put o business entirely. Similar severe conditions might been visited upon the trade in several other direct Of these facts the man who reads his trade paper dilig must surely be aware.

Directly or indirectly the Society of American Flo and the men in its ranks have been responsible for majority of the benefits enjoyed by the florists. Take recent concrete example: The Publicity Campaign the sale of flowers. Had it not been for the inaugura of this campaign by the Society last August at New it is a safe prediction that probably fifty per cent. of sales of flowers which have been made since last would never have been consummated, whereas in part through this campaign flowers have received notice in the public press in the past five months tha the previous five years. This one fact alone should b conclusive in impelling florists to join the Society wit further delay.

It is an easy matter to go with the stream and to life easy when business is running freely and m coming in without much strenuous effort; it is an altoge different matter to breast the stream when the card against you, but it is at times such as these that the an shows forth, and one evidence of this "showing forth" ist now will be in joining up with the Society of American lorists and tenaciously sticking to it.

The secretary of the Society of American Florists, as early everybody knows, is John Young, with headuarters at 1170 Broadway, N. Y. A cheque for $5 will over dues and initiation fee for first year, and can be sent rect to Mr. Young, or any remittances covering new embership sent to THE EXCHANGE will be duly rwarded to Mr. Young.

Join now, and thus pay honor to the Society which is orking for YOUR best interests.

Los Angeles, California

Dr. C. L. Marlatt will attend the interstate plant uarantine conference to be held at Riverside, Cal., ov. 11 to 16, in person, as representative of the Fedral Horticultural Board, Washington, D. C., of which is chairman. The presence of Dr. Marlatt, the ghest autority on quarantine matters in the country, annot fail to strengthen the conference. It is quite a ng time since Dr. Marlatt has visited California and is hoped he can be induced to prolong his visit in der to view the horticultural activities of the State. here are also other matters in regard to which his inion will be valuable. H. W. K.

Quarantine and Disinfection in the West

The State Horticultural Commissioner informs the os Angeles office of THE EXCHANGE that he is in reipt of a communication from the Governor of Lower alifornia in regard to the coming interstate quarantine nvention to be held in Riverside, Cal., Nov. 11 to 14, uring the convention of the State Nurserymen's Assoation. With the receipt of Governor Cantu's letter complete list of the Rocky Mountain and Pacific States, anada, Hawaii and Lower California have recorded a nanimous opinion in favor of this convention. The ficial invitations have been sent out by Governor ephens of California to the governors of all the States ove mentioned, asking that they send delegates to the nference. Among the suggestions received from the fferent States as to the points which should be brought o are: First, what constitutes an infestation; second, e subject of uniform inspection methods. In this conection it should be stated that the different States ve been asked to forward to the State Commission of orticulture, Sacramento, any topics which are of parcular interest and which it is desired to bring before e convention for consideration.

Here is an opportunity for the seed, florist and nurry trade to present any grievances its members may ish rectified, and also an open forum from which to scuss the whole situation of quarantine regulation as affects their business. Our readers in the Rocky ountain and Pacific Coast States ought to try and be presented at this meeting. Particulars are to be had om the undersigned by addressing him: 237 Court st., os Angeles, Cal. HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

Chicago Florists' Club

The monthly meeting and Midsummer rally of the hicago Florists' Club was held at Karthauser's Garen, 6656 Ridge ave., Rogers Park, on Thursday evenng, July 18. That the florists like to get out of the city nd enjoy the beauty of suburban scenery on these long ummer evenings was fully attested by the attendance nd the great satisfaction expressed by all present at he thoughtfulness of the committee in providing such n ideal place for a Summer meeting. President Lauenschlager presided and the business portion of the eeting was put through in due form.

Louis Finnerman, wholesale florist, applied for membership in the club, which will take the usual course. At his point Chairman Waters of the good of the club ommittee said he would like to see more retail florists n the club and urged every member present to try and ring with him to the next meeting the applications of ne or more retailers for membership.

M. Barker, chairman of the transportation committee, eported on numerous trains and various routes from Chicago to St. Louis for the S. A. F. convention next nonth. Pres. Lautenschlager deemed it advisable that ome road and train be designated as the official route f the club so that visitors coming to Chicago to go with he club could make their arrangements accordingly. On motion it was decided that the 11.37 p.m. train on he Chicago & Eastern Illinois R. R., on Monday, Aug. 9, be agreed on as the official train. This train leaves rom the Dearborn st. station. It was urged that a large umber from Chicago attend the convention. Robt. Newcomb, who was just back from St. Louis, stated hat they were looking for a large representation from Chicago, and no one would be disappointed at the arangements the trade there were making to entertain e S. A. F. delegates.

A letter from the New York Florists' Club was read regarding the embargo on all import stock and suggesting that the Chicago club send a protest to the War Board on such restrictions and explain how this would hurt both the industries of the florists and the nurserymen. Leonard Vaughan spoke on the subject and explained that the fear of getting insect pests into this country in the soil that is usually attached to the roots of plants was another cause for the embargo, as well as the scarcity of space on the steamers for such imports. After some discussion it was decided best not to offer any protest to the government at this time or interfere with the work they were doing to win the war.

It was announced that there would be a meeting of the National Credit and Protective Association of the S. A. F. at the Hotel La Salle on Aug. 17, 18 and 19, before going to St. Louis, and President Lautenschlager asked for a donation of $50 from the club for their entertainment. It was later decided that the appropriation be made $100, and that this include all other visitors, as well as the Committee on Credits and Protection.

This closed the business portion of the meeting, when luncheon and refreshments were served, after which Chairman Waters called on Ed. Hunt, recently of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, who, in a Jackie uniform, was in attendance from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. Mr. Hunt sang a few popular songs.

E. H. Moore, a representative of one of the local coal companies, read a paper on the conservation of coal in the furnace from a fireman's point of view. Much coal can be saved by careful stoking. Emil Buettner, a large Rose grower of Park Ridge, stated that florists might learn something from the present difficulties they had to encounter on account of coal shortage. He said better Roses can be grown in a temperature lower than what was frequently given them. The quality would be at the expense of the quantity; there would be better but fewer Roses during the Winter months in lower temperatures. August Poehlmann spoke on the great difference there was in firing with Western coal compared with Virginia and other coal that the trade has been using so long in Chicago, and that firing would have to be learned all over again at a loss and sacrifice to the growers.

The coal problem was a bad one, but not the only one, as the labor problem was also serious. Even with plenty of coal, the speaker said, they would be required to close part of their greenhouses for the want of competent labor. Under the difficulties the grower is working under, none of them is making the money he ought to, and he made an appeal to growers to get better prices for their stock. There should be an established price. The general public is paying more for everything they are using, and why not for flowers? Growers who formerly paid $30 a ton for fertilizers are now paying $55; lumber, paper, coal, labor, etc., have nearly doubled in price, and still the price of flowers does not increase. The growers pay the coal bills and all the cost of production—the commission men fix the prices. All surplus stock is a waste and a greater loss to the growers now than ever before. Mr. Poehlmann said it took 39,000 tons of coal to heat their greenhouses last year, and the increased cost of coal ought to cause growers to get together and establish a price that would bring them returns commensurate with the increased cost of doing business.

Nick Wietor spoke of the tendency there is among some wholesalers and retailers to go both East and West for stock when the same stock is to be had in the Chicago market. He touched on the shipments of Chrysanthemums from California and American Beauty Roses from Eastern growers. 'Mums from California, grown by cheap Japanese labor, hurt the Chicago market, not so much by the stock that comes to this market, but it cuts off all the large trade there has been in 'Mums from this market to the large cities farther West. Robt. Newcomb, who has been on the Pacific coast for several months, stated that the florists in all the large cities farther West ceased to grow 'Mums and depended entirely for their supply from the Japanese growers in California.

Jas. Psenicka of Gross Point, Geo. Ball of Glenn Ellyn, Ed Muret of Park Ridge, and Otto Amling of Maywood all spoke from the grower's point of view. Mr. Amling said it was an impossibility to shut down half of one's glass from an economical point of view; the wear and tear of the property is worse closed down than in operation, and the investment brings no returns. He was of the opinion that Roses should never be sold for less than $4 per 100. Commission men who handle outdoor grown stock from farmers and others not regularly in the florists' business should discourage it in favor of growers who have large amounts invested and who ship stock every day in the year.

Anton Then, who is about to retire from business, and who has been in the trade in Chicago for over 30 years, said he had long since given up hope of ever getting the florists of Chicago to agree on anything; each one was afraid the other one might get the best of him, and they would not agree.

At the next meeting, which is to be held at the same place, the leading commission men of the city will be asked to be present and express their views of the situation from the viewpoint of the commission man.

Time for Sowing Perennial Seeds

Will be too late between Aug. 1 to 15 to sow seeds of following plants for next years' flowering, and what protection shall I give them during the Winter. They are: Gaillardia, Coreopsis, Shasta Daisies, Pyrethrum, Wallflower, Snapdragon, Polyanthus, Delphinium, Hollyhocks and Digitalis. I also would like to ask you to advise me if you know any perennial flowers of merit whose seeds would not be yet too late to sow for next year's flowering.—J. D., Great Neck, N. Y.

—We think it would be safe to sow the seeds not only of these perennials which you mention, but of all the other herbaceous perennials during the period Aug 1 to 15, and that they would be of sufficient size to Winter over safely and that they would make blooming plants next season. Of course, if you could transplant them into coldframes or sow the seeds in these frames and carry them over in these, even if they were set pretty closely together in the frames, this would probably be the safest and best way to Winter these perennials and would give you the best plants next Spring. If you have no glazed sash for covering the frames, sash covered with protecting cloth or burlap would answer the purpose very well.—J. H. S.

The Late James Dean

U. S. Post 325 Grand Army of the Republic holds Funeral Service

Funeral services over the late James Dean, its commander in 1894, were held by U. S. Grant Post 325, Grand Army of the Republic, Chaplain Stewart, officiating, at its headquarters 489 Washington ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., on Friday, July 19, at 2 p.m. Floral tributes from his many friends were banked around the casket of the deceased and an additional auto was filled with them. The usual simple but impressive ritual for the dead was followed.

A touch of pathos was added by the presence of his fellow Post comrades, none of whom was under 70 years of age and all of whom wore the full dress uniform of the Civil War period, together with many decorations, medals, etc., on their breasts.

Several members of the post eulogized their deceased comrade, praising him as a manly man who had led a life of service, and set an example by ministering to the sick, giving such attention to whatever duties beset him that he had proven to be an exemplar to all following him as commander. Another post member, Ex-police Inspector Miles O'Reilly, described Mr. Dean as a loyal man and a good citizen, pointing out the fact that it was due to such men as Mr. Dean, who offered their services and lives freely during the stirring times of 1861-5 when the States were threatened with division, that this one united and grandest country in the world is now in existence.

A touching ceremony at the close of the services was the laying on the bier of a wreath, a spray of white flowers, and a cycas leaf, as token of affection, symbol of purity, and symbol of final victory. An American flag lay on the breast of the deceased.

As the funeral procession slowly made its way into the lodge room the "last call" was sounded, and at the close of the service in the distance was heard a bugle sounding taps, once again repeated at a still farther distance.

Among the many present in addition to the family was David Deans, of Astoria, brother of the deceased, and other relatives. Representing the trade were a number of the members of the Association of Past Presidents of the N. Y. Florists' Club (of which the deceased was a member, having been president of the N. Y. Florists' Club in 1892), among these being Alex. S. Burns, 1890-91; W. Albert Manda, 1893; Walter F. Sheridan, 1901-02; C. H. Totty, 1907; A. L. Miller, 1910; Jos. A. Manda, 1912; Wm. H. Siebrecht, Sr., 1913, and Wm. H. Duckham, 1914. Robt. Craig and John Westcott, of Philadelphia; Winfred Roelker, Eugene, Henry and Paul Dailledouze; A. F. Faulkner of the American Florist; A. T. DeLaMare, and a host of other friends were present.

The funeral cortege proceeded to Greenwood Cemetery after the G. A. R. services, where interment took place.

Obituary

Allen D. Bixby

Allen D. Bixby, 48 years of age, florist of Manchester, N. H., while driving an automobile across a railroad crossing on the morning of July 7 was struck by an express train and instantly killed. Mr. Bixby tried to cross the tracks while the protecting gates were being lowered, and when over the rails his engine apparently stalled. Eyewitnesses shouted to him to jump from the car, and also tried to push the car back, but found the brake set. Mr. Bixby seemed bewildered and remained in the car. His widow survives him.

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

Retail Florists Should Increase Their Summer Sales of Hydrangeas

This article by Joseph H. Sperry dwells on the many uses of the Hydrangea as a Summer plant, with a talk on the side as to two kinds of salesmanship, proving which method works out best in the long run. The Hydrangea is without doubt an all around serviceable Summer plant; those who have traveled and observed its use and pliability for the different purposes mentioned will attest to this fact.

BEFORE telling how to make good the statement in our headline, we would, by the way of introduction, like to relieve our minds of a few thoughts which our subject remotely suggests to us. Here they are, without any kid gloves on them, and please do not become irate, if they chance to give you a jolt, but rather let them lead you to repentance and reform.

Some retail florists in their business follow out the theory that if the cut flowers which they sell their customers do not keep very long, they will sell them more flowers per year, and if the plants which their customers purchase after a little go to the "demnition bow-wows," their plant sales will be larger. For this reason they give little instruction, if any, to their patrons about handling the cut flowers which they purchase so that they will keep a long time, or in caring for the plants which are sold to them, so that they will thrive and give pleasure for many months, or even years, and come to be, as it were, the pet plants of the family.

There is another class of retail florists, men thoroughly well informed in their line of business, who never fail when selling cut flowers and plants to their customers to instruct them in a quiet, unostentatious way how to care for these so that they will keep in good condition the longest possible time. Now, Mr. Retail Florist, if you unfortunately are in the wrong class, you should make great haste to get out of it and to get into the good business class as soon as possible, for the retailers in the class to which you belong are men of limited business vision, and as time goes on will, because of their narrow mindedness find some of their customers leaving them and going to the far sighted broad minded florists of the good business class, and the volume of their own business decreasing yearly.

There is another result, too, of the way in which the florists of the wrong class do business — worse even than the ruination of their own individual business. We said that they drove some of their customers to buy of the florists of the good business class, and we may say further that they cause many others to become so dissatisfied with their purchases of flowers and plants that they cease altogether to be flower and plant buyers. In this way these florists retard the general volume of flower and plant sales to quite an extent from its normal increase.

Well, this is a pretty long introduction. Artemas Ward, the old time American humorist, used to deliver a lecture entitled, "The Babes in the Wood." After entertaining his audience with his humorous sayings for an hour or so, and just as he was thanking them for their kind attention, he would suddenly say, "Oh, I have forgotten to tell you anything about the Babes in the Wood; I will tell you about them some other time." If we do not get to our subject, the Hydrangea, soon, we will be in the Artemas Ward class, so "now we're off" to tell what a good plant the Hydrangea is for the retail florist to recommend to his customers for Summer use, and incidentally to make a few suggestions as to the condition in which he should deliver the plant to his customer, and how he should instruct him to care for it.

Do not, Mr. Man, say, "It is rather late to talk about Hydrangeas now," for what we learn this Summer, if we are not improvident, we can CAN for next Summer's use. We have in the blooms of the Hortensia varieties of the Hydrangea several different shades of blue, and of pink and of white. There is Otaksa, an old favorite, whose flowers are usually pink, but become blue in some soils and under some treatments. Thomas Hogg, another old favorite, with white flowers, and several beautiful French varieties which have largely superseded the older varieties, among which may be mentioned: Avalanche, white; Renée Gaillard, white; Madame Mouillière ,pure white with carmine eye; Madame Maurice Hamar, rosy pink; La Lorraine, dark rose; Bouquet Rose, amber rose; General de Vibraye, bright rose.

The first reason, then, why the retail florist will find the Hydrangea a good plant for Summer sales is because its flowers are of several pleasing shades of colors, and its trusses of bloom are large and showy, and because it is very floriferous and sure to flower under ordinary care.

Secondly, if the plant receives good care, the blooms will remain on the plant and retain their beauty for a period of from four to six weeks. We have now, in a 20in. tub on the lawn in front of our house, a Hydrangea whose blooms (which appeared on June 1) had not yet on July 20 entirely lost their beauty, and on which fresh blooms appeared from time to time during this period, the last of which will, no doubt, keep their beauty well into August. Is there any other semi-woody plant grown in receptacles which the retailer can recommend with confidence to his customers to bloom freely, if well cared for, during so long a period in the months of June, July and August?

Thirdly, Hydrangeas are available for use in a wide range of sizes, from those growing in 6in. pots up to those in 26in. to 30in. tubs, and can be depended on to flower in all these sizes. This reminds us to say a word about the receptacles in which Hydrangeas may be grown. It is customary to grow the larger sizes, for instance, those requiring from 12in. to 30in. receptacles in tubs, because no other receptacles are available; It would be better to grow the smaller sizes also, which require from a 6in. to a 10in. receptacle, in wooden receptacles instead of in the ordinary clay pots, because the evaporation from clay receptacles is rapid and, when placed outdoors it is almost impossible to keep a Hydrangea in a clay receptacle sufficiently watered. Furthermore, plants in receptacles placed in the open or on the piazza or its rail or the steps leading up to it, are liable to be blown over by the wind, and when this happens a clay receptacle is usually broken but one of wood is uninjured. There is a way of preparing Hydrangeas in small sizes, either in clay or wood receptacles, which will make them easier for the buyer to care for, and will keep them in bloom longer. The method is simple and as follows: Wrap the receptacle from top to bottom with Sphagnum moss first, secure it in place with twine, then over the Sphagnum put a layer of green sheet moss and confine it there neatly with green twine. Instruct your customers to wet this moss covering freely, preferably with a sprinkler, whenever they water the soil in which the plant is growing. Explain to them that this covering, if kept wet, not only will prevent a too rapid evaporation of the water from the soil, but that the moss, itself, if the plant is in a half shaded position, will keep somewhat green, and add to the plant's attractiveness. Even the large tubs might with benefit to the plants be mossed in this same way, especially if placed in exposed positions.

We have previously touched on the matter of position, and this leads us to say that Hydrangeas, while preferring a partly shaded position may, in large sized tubs, be placed where they receive the full light. The small to medium sized plants can be placed just inside of the piazza railing on tables low enough so that the top of the receptacles will be about level with the railing, or on a board placed obliquely so as to rest on the railings just back of where they meet at the corners of the piazza, or, again, on the top of the posts at the foot and head of the steps which lead up to the piazza. They may also be placed directly on the ground in front of the piazza and near to it. This is an excellent position for Hydrangeas in receptacles of any size. Hydrangeas in tubs from 14in. upward are excellent for placing at intervals either side of the walk or drive which leads up to a house, and there is no other flowering plant so satisfactory for this purpose.

Hydrangeas require much water; when they are in a position exposed to the full sunlight they need to be watered copiously two or more times each day, and when you sell a Hydrangea to your customer you should try to impress upon him the necessity of watering the plant frequently and reguarly, and that water is the sine qua non in caring for a Hydrangea and further, that if in spite of this care, his plant wilts, he should change its position to one in which it will be partially shaded, especially from the midday sun.

Again, we would urge all retail florists not only to thoroughly inform themselves by observation and by reading how to best care for cut flowers and plants, but to patiently educate their customers in this matter for, by so doing, they will not only build up a large, profitable business, which they can hand down to others, but they will teach the public at large to have confidence in and respect for retail florists as a body of men who are well informed in their line, and who have liberal views of how it ought to be conducted, and of the relationship which should exist between them and their patrons.

F. T. D.'s Next Meeting

Albert Pochelon, secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Ass'n, wishes to let it be known through THE EXCHANGE that the F. T. D. "will have some live meeting in St. Louis, opening on the morning of the 20th of August at 10 a.m., and President Gude says that this means 60 minutes past nine, and not 65 minutes past nine." As the S. A. F. will not come into session until 2 p.m. there will be no conflict of hours.

It is intended that the meeting will be of just as much interest as was the annual meeting held in Cleveland last October, in fact, speaking from THE EXCHANGE'S viewpoint, we predict it will be even more enthusiastic, there having been so many happenings affecting the trade since that time, both favorably and unfavorably, and will probably be one of the most interesting features in connection with the coming S. A. F. and O. H. convention.

No shop complete without our Design Books. Let the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE send you full particulars of the best two ever issued.

Essential Follow Ups to Successful Advertising

Looking out into the broad expanse of this great country of ours during my travels of the past seven or eight years and reviewing the success of the retail florists generally, I found that those who used advertising in its true form to help their business, succeed more quickly than those who do not. Of course, there are exceptions, but broadly speaking, why should they not succeed?

In the first place, he who is broad enough to advertise his products must secure the best possible flowers to insure their sale. Then he must purchase quantities large enough to insure his efforts after he has created the desire for his product. Automatically, he must create a delivery system to take care of this demand, and then he must surely have office system to look out for his accounts, etc., so that his desire for an advertising campaign brings out all functions essential to the success of a first class florist.

It makes for better business, and incidentally, the florist who uses advertising is open to opportunities for the better grower to tie up to him, as he is creating a market more readily than the florist who does not advertise; hence, his turn-over is greater in quality, freshness and volume.

Moral: Does it pay to advertise? Try it and see.

HENRY PENN,
Chairman National Publicity Campaign.

Catering to the People Who Are Buying Flowers Now

Using the war as an excuse for economy, the people who heretofore were the largest buyers of flowers for social entertainments, dinners, etc., have practically ceased buying. This is the rich class. But there is another class which is making more money than ever before and spending it freely for flowers. These are people who have always longed for the beautiful, or for what they considered the luxurious. This class is much larger than the very rich, and offers a field of unlimited possibilities for the florist.

These people are beginning to believe, thanks to the efforts of the Florists' National Publicity Campaign, that flowers are taking their place as essentials in these war times, when the things of the spirit are so much needed, not only by our boys, both before they go into the trenches and after they return home, but as well by the folks back at home who are facing problems in the every day grind, without any applause, or without any cheer of bands playing. Flowers produce the same psychological effect upon one at home that music produces in lightening the spirits of the soldier. Witness the military band in every regiment, the value of which is well known to military science. American business men are rapidly awakening to the fact that psychological effects are a potent influence upon the buying public.

A striking case in point is that of a prominent Detroit club man who had been a large buyer of flowers for commercial entertainments as well as social, and after war was declared, although making more money than before, began to constantly reiterate the statement, "Don't buy flowers, buy flags." The constant repetition of this statement so impressed itself on the mind of a prominent local florist that he decided to find an opportunity to convert this club man to the proper use of flowers. The opportunity soon presented itself, the club man being taken seriously ill and sent to a hospital. Mr. Florist sent him three flags with a card, feeling sure that the lesson would "soak in." It did. Not to be harsh, however, before the man's discharge from the hospital, he sent him a beautiful bouquet of red, white and blue flowers, mixed with flags. Needless to say, the man was thoroughly cured.

The writer, in a recent interview with Mr. Pochelon of Detroit, confirmed her own opinion that the flower buying public of today is the great middle class who have more money than ever before, and who are spending twice as much for flowers as before the war. It is therefore only good business and a common sense conclusion to cater to this class of trade. This opinion is confirmed by all the enterprising, wide awake florists throughout the country.

In conclusion let us say that it is money in the pocket of every florist to advertise the fact that flowers are for everyone—not alone for the rich—and that they are essentials, not luxuries. D. B.

Conserving Ice

Ice is costing more every year, and the price of ammonia and ice-making equipment, as well as of electric current, have reached such high figures that it has become extremely expensive to operate a refrigerating plant. Therefore it is essential that as much ice be saved as possible, and this can only be done through preventing warm air from entering the refrigerators.

In many florists shops old ice boxes have been in use for many years. The fastenings have become worn or loose, and probably the rubber stripping has become hard and dry or has rotted, so that it does not take a firm grip on the doors or casings; thus cold air leaks out and warm air gets into the refrigerator. This greatly increases the cost of keeping the refrigerator cold. However, the largest waste is found in the frequent opening and closing of doors. In some cases the box is not equipped with small end or side doors; thus the large door has to be opened every time a vase of Roses or other flowers is shown a customer, or stock taken out. If the refrigerator is equipped with small doors, there are more openings, it is true, which it is harder to keep airtight, but if the small doors are properly fitted a big saving can be effected by placing stock properly so that it can be reached through a small door. All boxes should be equipped with plenty of glass so that the customer can see the stock without its being necessary to open doors to show it to him.

In the large one-door boxes it is necessary to enter the box every time stock is needed. However, even in such cases it is not necessary to take the customer inside, and it should be a rule of the store not to allow customers to enter the refrigerator. The temperature in the ice chest rises several degrees in a very short time after a person steps inside, and of course this is still greater in the case of two persons, especially on a hot Summer day, as may be noted from a thermometer hung in the refrigerator. Customers, too, will often remain in the refrigerator longer than is necessary. Moreover, these sudden changes in temperature are bad for the flowers. The effect on the ice bill of enforcement of the rule just suggested will certainly be noted very soon after its adoption. Clerks also will sometimes visit the refrigerator oftener or stay longer than is necessary, especially on a hot day, and this practice, besides increasing the cost of operation, is bad for the clerk, as it may produce rheumatism.

The best solution of the ice problem is to use refrigerators of modern type, which it is not necessary to enter in order to obtain stock. However, many florists who have ice boxes of the older styles cannot afford to replace them, so it becomes necessary to find ways to operate them on as economical a basis as possible. Judging from some of the Government reports relative to ammonia and the manufacturing of ice, and the need of conserving these articles, thus also conserving coal, it would not be at all surprising if ice prices went considerably higher than they are now, and regulations may eventually be adopted to conserve ice by limiting the quantity to be used. In its Retail Department THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE presents throughout the year articles of interest and instruction and pictures especially of value to the retail florist. Do you read it regularly? It will pay you.

Henry Penn, of Boston, has another new idea which he entitles:

Conservatism, Even in a Card

To help along the idea of conservation Mr. Penn introduces a new business card, the design of which he has copyrighted, and which reads in this way:

When you think of Flowers—
Think of Penn

In the lower left hand corner is a reproduction of the well-known signature of Penn, the Florist, accompanied by the copyrighted notice. The card measures 3¾in. wide and 2¼in. deep.

Mr. Penn asks us to tell him what we think of the idea. Like many of his publicity moves this new card is what we would term a rattling good idea, or a fine advertising "stunt," as the advertising writers call anything that appeals, and is made doubly effective for the reason that for many years Mr. Penn has used this distinctive signature on all his stationery, so that the customer and even strangers once seeing it recognize the emblem, its neatness and compactness combining the acme of advertising originality.

Slogans and Signatures

This leads us to add a line having to do with slogans and signatures. Every progressive house should have a slogan and likewise possess a distinctive signature. The latter can be used with effectiveness in printed matter whether applied for purposes of boldness and strikingness or for small cards, as in the present case. Such a signature should be free from excessive decoration, and its reproduction should be through what is called the "line" process so that it could be used with equal clearness on either coated or rough paper; in other words it should be done in line drawing, and a good artist can design striking effects even for line work.

The house slogan has of course to be something distinctive from an association slogan, and both of these can be used freely, each one in its place.

The use of slogans and distinctive signatures possess cumulative value for advertising purposes in towns and cities of any size. Many business houses are known by their slogans.

Flowers for Rest Rooms

"Usual business being shattered by the war," says H. P. Knoble, of Knoble Bros., Cleveland, Ohio, "florists must be alert in suggesting and creating new uses for their wares. As an illustration, thousands of women are being employed in the workshops, thus necessitating rest, reading and recreation rooms, which institutions will undoubtedly be permanent, as woman has found her place in the industrial world. On the point that the presence of flowers is necessary in those places in order to get the desired atmosphere, most employers will be found open to conviction. We have already booked a number of contracts for this purpose and we confidently look forward to the creation of much profitable business in this particular field."

Should Clerks Know Cost of Goods?

[Consul Fred C. Slater, Sarnia, Ontario, Canada.]

A recent issue of the Canadian Grocer has a very interesting article under the heading "Should clerks know the cost of goods?" This publication put this question to merchants in Canada from ocean to ocean. By far the majority replying are in favor of giving the clerk this information; while some are opposed to it, and others compromise their answer by favoring the giving of such information only to certain trusted confidential clerks.

The arguments in favor of the proposal are variously given, but the key to the different statements appears to be that you must trust a man in order to make him trustworthy; that clerks who know these secrets take more interest in the business, are more efficient and are able to talk more intelligently to customers, besides entertaining a better feeling toward their employer.

The negative replies do not advance much reason other than that the clerk should not know the firm's secrets, for when once entrusted with such secrets he is not liable longer to regard them as such. One reply to this question came from across the line in California, where a large establishment employing over 400 clerks gives an answer decidedly adverse to the idea, stating that clerks knowing the private cost mark are liable to overstep their authority and sell goods lower than they ought.—Commerce Reports 158, July 8, 1918.

FRAT-M'S
GET BUSINESS

WHAT ARE THEY?
They are the different Fraternal Emblems fancifully and artistically embossed in gold on 4-inch heavy paper circles.

HOW ARE THEY USED?
The gummed backs are attached to chiffon, ribbon, door sprays, sprays, pillows, wreaths, casket covers or any floral piece.

WHAT ARE THE ADVANTAGES IN THEIR USE?
They save time, freight, express, space and expense of fraternal wire designs. Any Fraternal Order can give a floral piece of any price, and yet convey the fraternal spirit by the use of FRAT-M. Fraternal Orders are buying them to place on the door badges of deceased members. Frat-M'S will get you some of the millions of dollars that fraternal orders are spending annually.

WHAT DO THEY COST?
They cost you 20c. each or $2.00 per dozen, cash with order. An order of two dozen will get the exclusive use of FRAT-M'S for you for one year if you live in a town of less than 25,000 population. They put you ahead of the "Come and Get Me" competition and create no end of favorable comment.

JOHN G. ESLER - SADDLE RIVER, N. J.

Lancaster, Pa.

The retail business occupies the same position it did a week ago, with just about enough business to meet current expenses. The victories we are winning over on the other side have put a jubilant note into the people of Lancaster that will no doubt be felt in business from now on, and optimism is the order of the day.

Out at Leola, Willis B. Girvin, with John Shoenberger as manager, is going ahead with a view of having the best Winter he ever had. 'Mums Chadwick and Nonin are planted, with one house of Pompons; they are all looking good. His Carnations are nearly all planted, some from the field and some from pots, the varieties being principally Matchless and Mrs. Ward. He will have some Matchless to sell from the field. Roses have been tried out on this place and not found wanting, as arrangements are being made to increase plantings as soon as business conditions become normal. Mr. Girvin is especially well pleased with Hill's Columbia and very likely any money invested in stock will be put into that variety. One house will be planted to Killarney for Summer blooming. Mr. Girvin, like Mr. Barr, has an immense farm, and Tobacco is one of the big propositions on it, along with the regular rotation of crops practiced in this county from time immemorial and just recently discovered to be the proper method by the rest of the world. He has about an acre of Asters Crego and Royal, the latter just beginning to come into bloom and both looking fine. In fact, Asters all through this section are extra good.

Lancaster Co. Florists' Association

With a bright sky overhead, a touch of real Summer weather and about 125 people out for a good time, the picnic at Avondale, the farm of Ex-President B. F. Barr, could not well be anything but a success, and a great success it was. As out of town guests we had with us T. J. Nolan of New York, Philadelphia, North Tonawanda, Scranton and Lancaster; D. J. Keohane of the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; C. U. Liggett of Philadelphia; Ralph Eaby from the Pennsylvania Seed Farm, Paradise, Pa.; Mr. Marshall of Kennett Square, with his wife, daughter, sister and mother. Wm. F. Therkildson of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. and S. S. Pennock, who expected to be with us, wired their regrets.

The formal garden was the first attraction and this is improving every year the hardy end of it—and proves both a delight and an education to florists. The beds of Petunias, Verbenas and Heliotrope Bruantii were just in their prime, the only spot not in its full beauty was the Roses.

The second attraction was the acres upon acres of evergreens in every stage of growth from the rooted cutting or seedling to the finished product, waiting for a buyer. To name them would be to issue a catalog. Sufficient to say that they are in good shape; his deciduous trees are equally good.

The Peony acreage has been increased, and a start was made with perennial Phlox that will no doubt eventually be planted by the acre. Several very good seedlings have been developed among the Phloxes, two of which will no doubt be heard from later on.

The farm end contains some 13 acres of Tobacco, and immense tracts of corn, some of which is just coming up, and Mr. Barr was asked if it was intended for next year's crop.

Coming back to the house and lawn, the sports were pulled off under the direction of Mrs. B. F. Barr, Mrs. Albert M. Herr, Mrs. Elmer Weaver and Mrs. Lemon Landis, with the following as winners: Ruth Baer, John Landis, Robert Snodgrass, Paul Weaver, Francis Fine, Harry Rohrer, Esther Kreider, D. Irwin Herr and Elizabeth Hershey. Suitable prizes were awarded, and the older people enjoyed themselves with bowling on the green, croquet, quoits and card playing, with a few sitting on the grass discussing the fuel situation and kindred subjects.

About 4 p.m. we heard the whistles blowing and the bells pealing in Lancaster, and a rush was made for the telephone to get the news, which, turning out to be the first decisive victory for our boys on the other side, the day, July 18, 1918, was especially enjoyable.

At 6 o'clock lunch was partaken of, some enjoying it in family groups, and some in community groups, all having an abundance; the club supplied the coffee and ice cream to complete the meal.

About 9 p.m. found us bidding our host and hostess a fond farewell, and hoping that the next picnic would be an equal success.

This was meeting night of the club, but no business was transacted; it was all deferred until we meet at the home of President Elmer Weaver on Aug. 15.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Scranton, Pa.

The twelfth annual outing of the Scranton Florists' Club was held July 12 at the MacDonald Cottage, Falls, Pa. The weather was perfect and a delightful time was enjoyed.

On Wednesday evening, July 17, the secretary of the club entertained at his home, in honor of Raymond MacDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. William MacDonald. Moosic, Pa., who is joining the Colors. After luncheon, A. Schultheis presented Raymond MacDonald, on behalf of the club, with a black leather comfort kit. Charles Rivatsos presented him with a khaki kit.

The club also presented a kit to Francis Moran, a member of the club, who left on the 15th to serve his country.

The Market

July 23. The pronounced features of the wholesale cut flower market this week are a large supply of Roses, Gladioli and early Asters, with a demand entirely inadequate to use up the daily arrivals in regular sales.

The supply of Summer Am. Beauty Roses is large and accumulations are the order of the day because of the small demand. Special grade blooms are selling at from 5c. to 25c. each and other grades at corresponding prices. The supply of hybrid tea Roses is very heavy. Daily sales fail to use up all of this and the part which is held over until the next day is disposed of at buyers' prices. Top grade blooms are selling at from 3c. to 5c. each in general, with small sales of extra choice varieties at somewhat higher prices, as per quotations in price list. Bottom grade blooms are selling at from 25c. to $1 per 100.

The arrivals of Carnations are small, the best selling for about $2 per 100. The supply of the preferred varieties of Cattleya orchids is not large, but there are more than enough of those varieties which are not favorites with buyers. A few of the variety Harrisonii sell for 10c. to 15c. each, the rest going for little or nothing. Even choice blooms of C. gigas, which are not over abundant, so small is the present demand, are selling from 60c. to 75c each. There is a small supply of both white and pink Lilies, the former selling from $4 to $6, and the latter from $3 to $4 per 100. The pink Lilies are especially slow sellers. Lily of the Valley is meeting with little demand at $2 to $4 and, occasionally, $6 per 100.

Asters and Gladioli are the leaders in Summer flowers. The former are selling at from 50c. to $2 per 100 with occasional sales at $3.

There is a full line of all other Summer flowers, both annuals and perennials, which meet with a moderately good demand at quoted prices. Indoor grown greens are moving slowly, both on account of the general daily market conditions and because they now have to compete with the branches of the edible Asparagus which are offered on the street in the wholesale district at a small price.

News Note

Although the S. A. F. convention at St. Louis, Mo., is less than a month away, we so far hear very few of the members of the craft in New York City and vicinity declaring their intention of attending the convention. Perhaps, however, as the times draws near for the opening of the convention and the weather grows a bit cooler, the desire to again shake hands with old time friends from various parts of the country will lead the usual number to journey to the hospitable city of St. Louis.

J. S. Fenrich, 51 W. 28th st., and his family are now at his Summer home at Bradley Beach, N. J. Mr. Fenrich is commuting daily between Bradley Beach and his place of business in New York City.

Wm. Iler, head salesman for E. C. Horan, is now taking his annual two weeks' vacation.

George Bradshaw and Charles Kessler, salesmen for Wm. Kessler, are now on their annual vacations and Wm. Kessler himself is holding the fort during the absence of these head salesmen.

J. K. Allen, 116 W. 28th st., is keeping his own books while his bookkeeper is enjoying her annual two weeks' vacation. Mr. Allen, as is well known, has been engaged over 30 years in the wholesale florist business, and there is no part of the business, whether the selling or bookkeeping or anything else, which he is not able to attend to thoroughly.

H. E. Froment, 148 W. 28th st., one of the largest receivers of Roses in this city, or any other, is, during the present two weeks, holding the job of his bookkeeper, Miss Mabel Conkling, and his head salesman, Phillip Ditzenberger, while they are on their vacations. Mr. Froment expects to take his usual vacation later in the season.

The Greek American Florists' Association will not hold its usual outing this year. The association feels that on account of the present war, involving nearly all the nations of the world, that they should use the money which would be spent for such a festive occasion for patriotic purposes.

Tom Wolf, from Waco, Tex., has been spending a few days in New York while on his way back to his native city.

N. Pappas Co. has recently moved from the main floor of 112 W. 28th st. into a part of the store at 110 W. 28th st., and B. Rosens & Sons, who have occupied the first floor at 112 W. 28th st., are now occupying both the first and main floors.

Several of the wholesale florists are now closing at 4 p.m. or earlier each day.

Edward J. Garrity, 25 Broad st., New York City, has been appoined temporary receiver of all the property of the Barney B. Jacobs Co., Inc., 114 W. 28th st., under a bond of $14,000 for the discharge of his duties as such receiver.

Plants Wanted at Camp Mills, N. Y.

A. L. Miller, florist and nurseryman, of Sutphin road and Rockaway boulevard, Jamaica, N. Y., recently mailed the letter which follows to some 150 growers on Long Island and to all the New York seedsmen:

The officers of the Labor Company at Camp Mills (L. I.), N. Y., whose duty is to beautify the grounds, have asked me to aid them in securing plants for that purpose. We all know how barren the camps look, and with a few plants they can be made a beauty spot, a delight to the eye.

The season is about over for selling plants and as a rule all we florists have a surplus of our stock. Any kind of plants that we can furnish will be acceptable. Do your share in this good work and drop a postal card at once to Captain Frank G. Moreau, Prison Officer, Camp Mills (L. I.), N. Y., or myself, and the plants will be called for. This is another appeal to the florists' patriotism and we are asked to respond freely and generously.

Let us join together and do our share. In this way we can help make the officers and boys at Camp Mills strong and gay, giving them courage to meet the enemy "over there."

Mr. Miller adds: Up to present writing we have received favorable replies from the following: Clarence Ankers, Rockville Centre, N. Y.; Jos. Wachtel, Catherine st., Jamaica, N. Y.; Geo. Donnelly, Aqueduct, L. I., N. Y.; Fred Marquardt, Middle Village, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Geo. J. Wackenhut, Middle Village, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Louis Schmutz, Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y.; D. Y. Mellis, Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y.; J. Ebb Weir & Co., Fort Hamilton ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.; George Rogers, Hempstead, L. I., N. Y.; John Fieber, Metropolitan ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.; John Bracker, East Williston, L. I., N. Y.

Mr. Miller will be glad to hear from others favorably disposed.

Boston

The Market

July 23.—There is not much doing in the wholesale flower market and Midsummer dullness prevails. There is a goodly quantity of flowers arriving daily and the quality in most cases is quite good.

Am. Beauty Roses are in considerable supply but, although the quality of the flowers is good, demand is but moderate at 4c. to 25c. There is an ample supply of good hybrid tea Roses which have only a moderate call at this time. Prices vary from 1c. to 10c. apiece, the latter price is for Hadley, Russell and Ophelia.

The supply of Carnations is diminishing and with the intense heat of the past two days the quality in future won't be as good, price holding well at 50c. to $2 per 100.

The supply of Cattleya orchids is not large and prices are from 50c. to 60c. per bloom. The supply of longiflorum is limited with prices holding well at 6c. to 10c., although the call for them is per bloom. The supply of Longiflorum is Valley is small, it sells at $6 to $10 per 100. Sweet Peas are of good quality and selling fairly well at 50c. to $1 per 100. Centaureas, Gypsophila, Larkspur, Gladioli and several other Summer flowers are abundant and moving slowly. There is a plentiful supply of greenery. Hydrangeas and Boston ferns are practically all the plants offered at this time.

The Picnic

The program for the Gardeners and Florists' Club picnic, taking place July 24, is out. There are 25 numbers on the athletic list, three baseball games, a foot ball game and a tug of war, commercials vs. private gardeners. There will be a big gathering if the weather holds good.

Robert Montgomery and family have gone to Bustens Island, Me., to spend the remainder of the Summer at his beautiful cottage.

As usual at this time the beautiful field of the new Chinese Lily, Lilium myriophyllum, is drawing a good deal of attention and there are many florists who make the trip to Roslindale to see it. The severe Winter had no effect on these Lilies; they are perfectly hardy and are as showy as ever.

Martin Wax of the firm of Wax Bros. on Tremont st. is spending a month at Grand Lake Stream where he enjoys excellent fishing.

WRITE for our market letter on local conditions, if you are a shipper of flowers.

We are in close touch with the market and keep our shippers well posted.

We never fail to please them when it comes to making returns—the prices secured are the highest obtainable and settlements are made without delay.

Special opportunity for a couple of Good Rose Growers who are looking for best returns. Our present demand is greater than our supply.

Peter Fisher of Ellis, Mass., is to close up several of his greenhouses this Winter, just running enough greenhouses to take care of his home trade. His Carnation stock will be grown by Arnold & Fisher of Woburn.

Community Market at Hort. Hall

Through the co-operation of P. A. O'Connell, Suffolk County food administrator, and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, a community market will be opened at Horticultural Hall on July 31. This market will be free for the disposal of surplus products of war gardens. The market will be open on Wednesdays and Saturdays until further notice. Applicants for space should apply to William L. Terhune, at 29 Mason st.

Welch Bros. Co. are making extensive alterations in their wholesale store on Devonshire st. Several large, handsome cases are installed, and the place is being painted all white.

Max Bornstein, who has been at the Co-operative Flower Market for eight years, has joined the Colors and is now at Camp Devens. R. C.

Chicago and the West

Inactive Market

July 23.—The satisfactory conditions prevailing for several weeks took a change the middle of the past week to a very inactive market. The hot wave being experienced has increased the supply and shortened the demand. The bathing beaches have offered a refuge to one-seventh of the population of the city during the past few days, and the parks and other Summer resorts have taken out of the city daily numbers of people whose thoughts turn not to flowers in the meantime. The shipping business is fair and local trade is confined mostly to funeral work.

There are enough Roses for all demand but the quality has deteriorated somewhat under the present weather conditions. Good stock of shipping quality is most in demand; short open stock finds but little sale. Carnations are scarce with the exception of some field grown stock which has commenced to come in. For funeral work Asters are taking the place of Carnations which will fill the void until the new crops come in later on.

Gladioli has taken a prominent place on the market and is to be had in quantities at all the wholesale houses. The local crops are all coming in and the newest and best varieties are to be seen everywhere. So far the prices have been satisfactory but the large amount to be disposed of daily has a tendency toward lower prices.

There are enough of Easter Lilies. The supply of Valley has also increased. Orchids are on the short list. Sweet Peas are in good supply, mostly outdoor grown, and meet with only fair demand. Gypsophila paniculata is a favorite among hardy outdoor grown stock, a large part of this supply comes from States west of here, where it is said to grow better. The supply of all outdoor stock, such as Snapdragon, Shasta Daisy, Coreopsis, Phlox, Delphinium, etc., is large and not in active demand. The supply of green goods is ample, the new crop ferns are of fine quality.

The genial Tom Wolfe of Waco, Tex., was a visitor this week on his return trip from the Elks convention at Atlantic City, N. J. He tells his friends here they may look for him at the convention in St. Louis next month.

News of the Week

Anton Then sold his greenhouse establishment the past week to Mrs. J. Fred Wustenhoff who will take possession at once. The Then establishment is one of the oldest and best known establishments in the city and is situated on Winnemac ave. on the north side. The property consists of 16 houses, all of which are in good condition. The business will be conducted along the same lines, and similar stock will be grown for the present as was done under the Then ownership. Mr. Then has been in Chicago about 52 years and the greenhouses were first constructed under his direction about 30 years ago, and have been maintained in good condition ever since. The new owner is not unknown to the trade of the city, having been connected with the trade in Wilmette and other points along the North Shore.

Robt. Newcomb, one of the best known salesman in horticultural lines traveling out of Chicago, has severed all business relations in this city and will in the future make his home in the West. The Miller Floral Co. of Farmington, Utah, has decided to open a retail establishment in Salt Lake City and Mr. Newcomb has been secured as manager. The store will be up to date in every way and is situated in one of the best locations in the city. Salt Lake City has now a population of 200,000, and the demand for plants and flowers has shown a wonderful increase during the past few years. The Miller Floral Co. operate 250,000 sq. ft. of glass at Farmington and grows an excellent line of plants and cut flowers that has in the past been sold chiefly at wholesale. Mr. Newcomb will remain in the city several days making purchases for the new enterprise. It is proposed to open the new store about Sept. 15.

THE cool weather we have had has undoubtedly reduced the cut of flowers to some extent, but without the active demand there would have been more than enough flowers on the market.

ROSES. We have quite an ample supply of them, and with the cool weather we have had our Roses are of a good quality. Our supply consists of Russell, Prima Donna, Ophelia, Sunburst, Hadley, Shawyer, Maryland and Wards.

GLADIOLI. Plenty of them now and no orders will remain unfilled. Light and dark pink, white and red in all the best and newer commercial varieties. $6.00 per 100.

ASTERS. The cut is not very large, but your order will be filled if it is placed early. Most of our growers will make daily shipments now. The flowers are as good as can be expected of the early crop. $2.50 to $4.00 per 100.

Burpee Farms Inspection

On Saturday, July 20, the department managers, farm managers and division foremen of W. Atlee Burpee Co., made a trip of inspection to Fordhook Farms, leaving Philadelphia at 1.02 p.m. on the Reading and arriving at the Farms at 2.30 p.m. After a careful inspection of the trials they were taken in cars to the various farms, comprising some 800 acres in extent, and the brilliantly colored fields of Poppies, Phlox, Salvia, Calendulas, Petunias and other flowering plants were certainly gorgeous and at their best.

This was followed by an inspection of the "Collection Gardens." In these gardens all of the collections cataloged by the house of Burpee were planted in measured plots, so that one might visualize the exact area that should be devoted to the various collections, and at the same time see the returns that may be secured from a properly cultivated area as represented by the space devoted to them.

The "Suburban Garden Collection," or Five Dollar Box, was one of the most attractive, because it is very nearly the average garden size, namely, 50x80 ft. There was everything from Radishes down through Lettuce, Squash, Tomatoes, Peppers, Egg Plants, Musk Melons, Watermelons, Carrots, Bush Beans, both green and wax, Pole Beans, Pole Lima Beans, Beets, etc., in sufficient quantity for the average family. They were all at their best and certainly demonstrated the possibilities of a small area.

The "Country Garden," or "Ten Dollar Collection," demonstrated the possibilities of an area 100x100ft. The popular "One Dollar Box" was certainly the best looking small garden that one could possibly imagine. Even the "Children's Garden Twenty-five Cent Collection" of vegetables and flowers on an area of 10x10ft. indicated that considerable could be grown.

The visitors discovered that very large Watermelons were some times found on very small plants that had been carefully placed in amongst the vines by those in attendance. A little further on, a new plant (Nicotiana cabbagensis) was discovered. This plant was carefully constructed from a Cedar pole with Cabbage side leaves, and blossomed quite good cigars in paper covers. It was really a good imitation of a tobacco plant in bloom.

The value of the small tractor was also clearly demonstrated here, the Beeman garden tractor doing all sorts of stunts for the edification of the visitors.

The Spring House, on the farm devoted to these garden trials, gave up some delightfully cool Watermelons, some of which were horribly carved, but were thoroughly enjoyed by those who were lucky enough to be "among those present." The party, thoroughly refreshed and in good spirits, again took to the automobiles on a trip to the Zetty and Fox Farms. Castle Valley Farms was the last on the program.

On the Zetty Farms a crop of Wheat was just being harvested. Some of the boys saw for the first time what a delightful job threshing could really be made into, for, with automatic feeders and a bailer bailing the straw, the job was devoid of much of the dust and unpleasantness that was formerly a part of the work of those who had to work behind a blower. Memories of the days when the writer used to have to feed or,at least, do his part in the feeding of the hungry threshing machine, seemed almost an impossibility when you watched this automatic machinery doing the entire job from feeding to bailing at one time.

Here also the boys saw that late planted Potatoes can be grown very successfully on Bucks County soil, also the driver of one of the cars proved that a Ford could run on three tires and one rim. Here again the trouble attendant to the use of tractors was demonstrated, for we found broken gears on both a Moline tractor and a Cleveland. However, the farm manager assured us, that had it not been for the various tractors and mechanical cultivators that were in use on the Fordhook group that it would have been impossible to have prepared and cultivated the great area that we found in such excellent condition.

Leaving the thresher the party returned by the way of Fox Farms, and then to Castle Valley Farms, where F. F. Rockwell's pigs and Peaches received no little attention, and a great deal of enthusiastic comment.

"Doc" Coville is some "chiffonier" when it comes to driving a car, and he is said to be the best dust sprayer in all Bucks County as was greatly evidenced by those in the car immediately following his. However this was soon forgotten on the return to Fordhook because, after washing up, they partook of a lunch on the porch of Fordhook, under the two great Lindens, and as the guests of David Burpee. I am enclosing menu of this meal, which is self-explanatory.

Splendid speeches were made by F. F. Rockwell and James A. Crossett, and after a unanimous vote of thanks to the host the automobiles were again pressed into service, and the 5.43 at Farm School was held up and boarded. Everything would have been fine on the return trip, except that we had to change trains at Lansdale, and here we found that through a wreck farther up the line we had to wait an hour and a quarter. Of course, there was the electric limited to 69th and Market sts. had there been any one in the party with sufficient intelligence to have known it, but it was quite apparent that all preferred a ride on the Reading, as two trains pulled out directly under our eyes without anyone getting aboard, nevertheless, it was voted a perfect afternoon by all present leaving pleasant memories of the trip, the afternoon's entertainment and paricularly of the "Hungry Man's Collection."

Quiet Market

Business for the past week has been exceedingly quiet. The market is now liberally supplied with the usual supply of Summer flowers. Short stemmed Roses remain in oversupply which leaves many leftovers; medium and long grades move to advantage. There are no American Beauty Roses coming into the market; long Russells and Mock readily fill in this gap. There are still a few Carnations arriving. Asters are now coming into their own and there is an excellent supply in daily receipts; they are taking well. Some of the long, indoor grown stock is exceptionally good and commands a corresponding price. Gladioli are also in heavy supply; in fact, they are in over supply; prices have fallen sharply. Lilies continue strong, both in sales and receipts. Valley is poor and almost off the list; the demand for it is very limited. Orchids remain on the short side. Outdoor flowers are coming in more freely. Sweet Peas are about done.

Notes

Henry I. Faust of Merion is a very successful grower of Cyclamen and has thousands of them in all stages of growth coming along in splendid shape for the Fall.

Robert Crawford, Jr. has closed down his greenhouses at Secane, Pa. It is also understood that Mrs. Sarah I. Smith of Secane expects to close down her place. Mrs. Smith is a Carnation specialist and ranks among the leading growers of the divine flower about Philadelphia. Another grower in this territory intimates closing down.

Harry Jones, head of the purchasing department of J. J. Habermehl's Sons, is hearkening to the lure of the briny deep.

Harry Eisele, floor manager of the Leo Niessen Co., has forsaken the cares of business for the next two weeks.

Wesley Clarke and Thomas Mitchell, two of the S. S. Pennock Co.'s leading salesmen, are on their vacation.

At Wm. J. Baker's Delphinium Belladonna and Gladioli are the quality features among the outdoor flowers.

At Charles E. Meehan's are to be noted some very excellent Carnations for this season of the year.

Carl Corts states that coal is coming in steadily at the Joseph Heacock Co.'s plant at Roelofs.

C. U. Liggit states plants for growing on are in brisk demand, with ferns having first call. Ferns, it is predicted, will be good property this coming Fall.

Trades in Greater New York Sold Over $15,000,000

During the recent W. S. S. drive the Pioneer Division of New York, composed of 150 commercial, industrial and professional trades' committees, sold a little over three-fourths of the entire sum of War Savings and Thrift Stamps disposed of in Greater New York, and secured more than two-thirds of the three thousand members to the Limit Investment Society to which membership only those are admitted who have bought one thousand dollars' worth of War Savings Stamps, maturity value. W. Ward Smith, vice-chairman, is congratulating the trades organizations for their splendid work.

Trade Report

Funeral work and telegraph orders have been the mainstay of the past week's business. Several days were entirely void of any unusual work but the end of the week saw a fair allotment of funeral work in the several shops. Flowers of all kinds, particularly field grown, have been very plentiful and at times prices deviated from the current lists. Beautiful Lilies—giganteum at $10 per 100, auratum at $15 to $20 per 100 and rubrum at $5 to $6 per 100—were a mainstay in the market. Carnations are quite scarce at $2 to $3 per 100 because of depleted benches in the greenhouses.

Roses are quite plentiful, however, and many of them are of Winter quality too. The customary wholesale prices range from $5 to $15 per 100; the retail 75c. to $4 per doz. Small Roses for corsage work are not very profitable and, no doubt, will not be grown very generally during the coming season when there will be but a limited demand for party and decorating work. Columbia Roses are generally grown in this vicinity and a quantity of shorts are being received at $3 to $4 per 100. Excellent Gladioli are in the market at $3 to $4 per 100; fine Shasta Daisies may be had at 50c. to $1 per 100; also Larkspur at $1 to $3 per 100 sprays. Hydrangea arborescens is plentiful at $2 to $3 per 100 sprays and lends itself finely in decorative work with Tritoma Pfitzerii at $3 to $4 per 100. Chatelaine Begonias, the dark red variety, are seen in beautiful specimen plants in this locality and there is general praise bestowed upon them by purchasers as they keep well and bloom vigorously; $1 to $5 each is obtainable for good stock.

News Items

Len Elder has returned from a fishing trip to the northern part of the state.

Otto Lawrence, Bertermann's decorator, is spending his vacation in Buffalo, N. Y.

Those cities fortunate enough to have Army Posts, Louisville (Ky.), Chillicothe (O.), and Indianapolis (Ind.), have much more of an opportunity for flower work, particularly F. T. D. service, than those not quartering Army service.

Alfred Petit is to return from California and take charge of his big growing establishment this Winter.

Robert Ellis and family have returned from a visit to Richmond, Ind. Nearly all the florists there have their housing completed and are ready for the Winter trade.

Those growers producing a lot of Summer flowers are finding a very profitable outlet for them at good market prices.

The next meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana is to be held either at the Central Hospital grounds in Indianapolis or at the Circle Flower Shop. Secretary Steinkamp says that announcements will be mailed very shortly. The August meeting is to be quite an important one as there is much business to come before the body at that time. I. B.

The Market

Very warm weather was ushered in on July 1, and is having the customary depressing effect upon business. Stock brought from a distance, particularly Roses, is arriving in condition only for immediate use. Sweet Peas, which held up so well during the prolonged cool spell, are rapidly deteriorating. Growers of this popular small flower have done well this year as vast quantities were sent in and favorably marketed. Some splendid Asters are daily arriving and meet with a ready sale, as do Gladioli, receipts of which are now more liberal. Business is generally quiet but the market is in a healthy condition. Vacations are the order of the day and there are very few florists who are not taking a brief period of recreation.

Florists' Club Meeting

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Hollenden, Aug. 5, 1918, at 8 p.m. H. P. Merrick of Lord & Burnham Co. will address the meeting on the subject, "Economy the Keynote in Heating"; G. L. Mercer, "Commercial Floriculture as a Career"; H. B. Rapley, "The Private Gardener and the War"; Fred Steinbrenner, 'The Retail Florist Under Present Conditions." A full attendance is requested. Nominations of officers for the ensuing year will also take place.

Wire Situation Acute

The predicted shortage of annealed wire for florists' use is now upon us, being emphasized last week by the refusal of several orders by the American Steel and Wire Co., which concern is now employed exclusively on government and preferred work. As a result of this, the limited stocks of wire in the hands of the florists' supply houses have rapidly become depleted. Required for the making of funeral work—a very essential purpose indeed—and admitting of no substitute, it would seem that the florists are entitled to a special dispensation permitting them to obtain the necessary wire. The J. M. Gasser Co. has appealed to Washington hoping to secure a ruling upon the matter, the receipt of which is awaited with much interest.

Local wire workers announce that a raise in the price of their wares is made inevitable by the tremendous advance in the cost of raw materials.

The Market

Roses are not very plentiful and usually run rather short. A few Carnations may be had, but within a week or so they will stop until the new cut comes into the market. Easter Lilies are again scarce, although some come into the wholesale houses regularly; rubrum Lilies are fairly plentiful. Gladioli are in a fair supply and are proving good property. Asters are rapidly becoming plentiful; up to this time they have sold very readily. A few late hardy Hydrangeas may be had and in another week they should be plentiful. Other offerings include Snapdragon and Feverfew.

St. Paul, Minn.

Trade in general is slack, and until the present week, all classes of stock were scarce. Roses especially. Larger quantities of the latter, however, are procurable now, with the exception of Russells. Carnations are scarce, good ones are wholesaling at 3c. There is a glut of outdoor grown Sweet Peas and they are selling for 40c. per 100; less when bought by the 1000. Funeral work remains heavy. During the past week the weather has been very warm, with several heavy thunder storms, and all outdoor stock is in good condition.

The proprietors of the Chicago Ave. Greenhouses have just been called to the colors and are seeking to lease their plant during their absence.

Most of the Asters in the Twin City districts have been a failure this year, owing to stem rot. The Snelling Ave. Greenhouse lost two houses which were planted out and several other firms lost all outside stock.

Florists' Club Meeting

The St. Louis Florists' Club held an interesting meeting Thursday afternoon, July 11, at the home of Jules Bourdet, vice-president of the S. A. F. The meeting opened at 3 p.m. with nearly half the membership present. President Bourdet presided. The opening proceedings were quickly disposed of and reports from all committees were heard. The trustees reported that they had arranged for the annual outing of the florists at Romona Park and that July 18 was set for the day, everything being in readiness for the event.

J. J. Beneke, secretary of the publicity committee, made a report on the financial condition of this committee, showing that a large sum of money would be available for fall advertising, beginning Sept. 15.

W. J. Pilcher, chairman of the membership committee, reported that he has received the required amount of club members as members of the S. A. F. and that the club would be represented on the board of directors the coming year. This report brought much joy to the members.

Julian Mars, representative of the Chicago Carton Co., was elected to membership and the following filed applications for membership: H. Nichols, J. Barnard, C. W. Woss and Chas. Kuehn, Jr.

The trustees announced that Superintendent Strehle of the parks had invited the club to hold its August meeting at the Jefferson Memorial, Forest Park. The invitation was accepted with thanks.

The next business taken up was the nomination of officers, and the following members were placed in nomination for the different offices: A. H. Hummert, president; W. J. Pilcher, vice-president; J. J. Windler, secretary; W. C. Smith, treasurer; Alex. Lurie, a three year term trustee.

The rest of the afternoon was taken up with discussions concerning the forthcoming S. A. F. convention, reports being heard from the chairmen of the various committees. During the reports and discussions a great many good suggestions were made to keep the committee active in their work. The meeting then adjourned, the members enjoying the usual refreshments. The host was tendered a vote of thanks for the afternoon's pleasures. O. K. S.

Kalamazoo, Mich.

Owing to the death of a prominent business man of this city, the funeral trade had quite a spurt for a day or two, but outside of this business as a whole may be said to be very slow.

The fuel situation is very unsatisfactory and not much progress can be reported; on the other hand, the labor question becomes more acute each week as the draft calls off the men. Three dollars is the minimum for common labor here and not worth much when you get it; a two horse team with one man commands from $7 to $8 for an 8-hour day, so perhaps it is a good thing we florists have to cut down on production, for we certainly will save on labor and fuel.

Happily the farm crops promise well and there is not much likelihood of food being short. The frost on June 22 did not do much damage. There is some talk of consolidation of two florists here the coming season; otherwise most of us will go it alone as usual. The winter's crops are coming along nicely, good rains having fallen the past two weeks. S. B.

Should Have Been Tagged and Labeled

I am inclined to the opinion that normal or pre-war times may be discounted entirely as things belonging to a past generation, and that we should readjust our affairs with the viewpoint of more readjustments to come rather than expect to return to the old times of haphazard and independent business methods.

Competition has had a fair trial and has been found unable to make good in times of stress. Sooner or later co-operation will be acknowledged its superior; but as yet I see only faint signs of its arrival; there is yet evident too much of the old self-interest and of the feeling that "if Smith cannot carry on, well, it's up to Jones to reap an advantage through the gain of at least a portion of his unfortunate fellow tradesman's clientele.

For my part, I can see no reason why there should not be started at an early date, through the Society of American Florists an inquiry which would consider the actual cost of production, handling and marketing our produce, and from these figures and deductions establish a minimum price to govern each month's business. This should be sufficient to do away with the necessity of the exorbitant charges now obtaining on special occasions which prove so detrimental to the trade. With a fair minimum right along, there should be no excuse for pickling or soaking our steady and best customers. Surely there can be no difficulty in doing this if we want to, but if we don't want to, then there are thousands of reasons for not doing it.

I wonder if we have already experienced the time of our lives the past few years, and if it came on us so gradually and so naturally that we just kept looking ahead for the "good times," when they were already with us and we did not know it, always expecting them to be duly tagged and properly labelled on arrival? SAMUEL BATSON.

Houston, Texas

Despite the middle of the warm season the florists of Houston have done remarkably well the past week. They have felt the rush, as most of them have employees out on vacation, so that those left behind have had to work doubly hard.

R. C. Kerr reports having done a very good business the past week. M. C. Walker, having returned from his vacation trip, E. C. Eichling, general sales manager and secretary of the new R. C. Kerr Co., has gone for a visit to New Orleans, where his people have been in the florists' business for years. Mr. Kerr received so many compliments on the window display designed and executed by Messrs. Eichling and Walker that he had had a photograph made of it. A reproduction of the picture appears on page 131.

H. H. Kuhlmann of the Kuhlmann Floral Co., says that he had a fine trip around the country during his vacation. He visited Corpus Christi and numerous other towns in Texas, going in his car in company with Mrs. Kuhlmann. He says he has had all he could do to keep up with business the past week. He has been renewing his decorations for the Rice roof garden. The Tomato plants included in the decorations bore a good crop.

R. G. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouse says that business the past week was unexpectedly good, keeping him on the run all the time, as several of his people are on vacation. Mrs. Tobola, recently married, left last week for a trip. Mr. Hewitt says that the Blue Bells have helped out the florists considerably this year. Carnations are being shipped in pretty well, but he has held up a little on Roses.

M. E. Foster, president and editor of the Houston Chronicle, visited the City Greenhouse recently, and was so delighted with the landscape features of the grounds surrounding the houses, as designed by Supt. C. L. Brock, that he sent one of his writers, R. A. Sell, to give it a big write-up. Mr. Sell succeeded in making a very interesting article.

The Crape Myrtles are now out in all their glory. The Houston Hort. Society, whose president, S. J. Mitchell, is now enjoying himself in New York and environs, has decided to make Houston a Crape Myrtle city, and will doubtless make a feature of this movement next year. Owing to the heavy rains that have fallen this season, all shrubbery is doing very well. The bloom of the Rose of Sharon has been particularly fine.

Gillespie Kuhlmann, brother of H. H. Kuhlmann, Jr., and associated with him in the Kuhlmann Floral Co., has left to join the Navy of Uncle Sam. Another brother, Lawrence, is already in the Army.

If it's "good old summer time" when next you are in Lawrence, look up Wagland's place and, 'mid charming surroundings, cool and comfort yourself with one of his famed chocolate ice cream sodas.

Or if it's soda's off season, than every inch of the greenhouses will be interesting. You will walk up and down all the walks—see if you don't.

A. H. Wagland, The Leader of Lawrence A Business Builder And Unique Advertiser

THE other day, our Boston office sent us a couple of photographs of A. H. Wagland's place at Lawrence, Mass. In their comments written on the back, was "This man Wagland is a great advertiser. He is to Lawrence what Henry Penn is to Boston."

Of course, we at once wrote for full particulars.

Here they are, copied word for word from their reply.

"In the spring of 1915 we completed for Mr. Wagland the greenhouses shown in the photographs and accompanying plans. For a retail establishment in the city, Mr. Wagland's place is most complete and conveniently arranged and is also very attractive. There are, as the plans show, a good sized store and office, a show house, workroom, general purpose greenhouse, forcing house, cool house and frames. There is also to be added in the near future a store house.

"The show house is always nicely arranged with palms and ferns and the best of the flowering plants from the greenhouse. The latter is 45 ft. wide and 92 ft. long. It has concrete walks and well built benches. At the end of the greenhouse is a lean-to 9 ft. 6 in. wide which is divided into two compartments to give a forcing house and a cool house. At the corner is to be built a store house in which potting soil, pots and other bulky material will be stored. Valley connections are already provided for this store house. The workroom, where floral pieces are made up, is slightly apart from the greenhouse and office so as to be out of the way of visitors. A fine new refrigerator has recently been installed as a part of the store equipment. Along one side of the greenhouse next to the drive way is a line of cold frames which are taken up when not in use and stored away. This p'ace of Mr. Wagland's is located on Broadway, about five minutes' trolley ride from the center of the city. He also has a fine up-to-date store on Essex Street which is the main business street of Lawrence.

"Mr. Wagland is a firm believer in publicity and makes use of every medium which he knows of, including electric signs, bill boards, street car cards, newspapers, calendars, programs, etc. He never misses an opportunity of letting the people of Lawrence and vicinity know that he is ready to serve them. Around the holiday season, in December, his show house is most attractively arranged and is lighted up with festoons of colored electric lights. His three delivery trucks are decorated in the same way.

"Just before Easter this year, Mr. Wagland announced through the newspapers that a flower show would be held. At a rough estimate more than 2,000 people visited the greenhouses in the three or four days before Easter. Needless to say, the show was a huge success in every way.

"In building the show house, Mr. Wagland had the benches arranged so they can be taken down readily and in the summer time when the florist business is dull he takes these benches out, installs a soda fountain, tables and chairs, a victrola hidden behind a bank of ferns and has a sort of grotto with a pool and gold fish in the center. During the hot summer months he dispenses cooling refreshments which are all the more refreshing because of the attractive setting and arrangement. As the roof is glazed with ground glass and carefully shaded, the place is comfortably cool."

To which let us add, that we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas

Now Ready for Delivery

TO BLOOM FOR THANKSGIVING AND UNTIL MARCH, sow the seed in August in sand using 2 seeds in a 2-inch pot. After growth is advanced a few inches transplant to permanent positions about three inches apart.

All strains of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas contain "rogues" both as to color and the Winter flowering characteristic. The Australian varieties are almost perfectly "fixed" in both respects and are better than the American sorts. Any late bloomers can be readily distinguished as they commence to branch an inch or two above the surface of the soil, whereas the Winter-flowering plants produce a straight vine and more pointed foliage, making no lateral growth until 15 to 18 inches above the surface of the soil. The late bloomers should be eliminated as soon as they can be distinguished.

Australian Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas

BLUE FLAKES. Deep blue, pencilled over a delicate gray white ground; the best blue to date.
CÆRULEA. Delicate sky blue, sometimes a little lighter.
CONCORD BLUSH SHADES. The colors range from white blush and creamy pink to deep pink.
CONCORD CHARM. Delicate shades of white and blue; white wings and very light heliotrope standard.
CONCORD CHRISTMAS PINK SHADES. A Spencer strain of Christmas Pink coloring; as there is some variation in these they are offered as shades.
CONCORD COUNTESS. Most attractive tint of pink, the ideal flower color.
CONCORD COUNTESS IMPROVED. A larger and finer strain of Concord Countess, blush pink on white, ground, deepening at the edge of the standard. Pkt. (25 seeds.)
CONCORD CHIEF. Intense, rich deep maroon, massive Spencer form.
CONCORD DAYBREAK. Cream with standard heavily edge buff pink.
CONCORD EMPEROR. A rich glowing crimson, large blooms of excellent substance and very free flowering.
CONCORD EXQUISITE. Pale pink on rich cream ground, three on a stem. Pkt. (25 seeds.)

Hardy Plants can Help Solve the Coal Shortage

The writer, Samuel Newman Baxter, furnishes eight arguments in favor of a more liberal use of perennials by the florist-grower. Inexpensive to raise—Furnish flowers in profusion of color and attractiveness—Salable as pot plants—Roots increase in value

Several reasons may be advanced for the florist-grower opting herbaceous perennials as a side line:

1. The impending coal shortage.

2. They require less ground than trees, shrubs or evergens, as grown by nurserymen.

3. There is an increasing demand for "hardy garden" or ld fashioned" flowers which do not require replanting m year to year as do annuals.

4. Unlike annuals which, if not sold the first year are a ls, perennials increase in size and value and, in most cases, ny be multiplied considerably by division of the old mps.

5. Those suitable for cutting purposes, like Peonies, may t a return from blooms alone.

6. If the plants or flowers are not sold, the latter afford their season display material for the window or show ound and in this respect, would be like a department re, having no expenses for the material used for window mming.

7. Of the other outdoor specialties—trees, shrubs, evergens—herbaceous perennials are the most closely related the florists' trade. Lily of the Valley and Spiræa, for tance, may already be on hand, so why not augment m with some or all of the list suggested below.

8. Now, while it is not yet too late to sow many of the ds to obtain salable plants for next season, is an opportune time to start, and the advertising columns of THE CHANGE are replete with a splendid assortment. Order onies now for early Autumn planting. The following is selected for its popularity with garden lovers and in st instances works in well with the florists' trade. though the list is condensed it is not recommended that be adopted in its entirety. Better to select a limited mber of sorts, particularly, if grown for cutting purposes d quantity is desired.

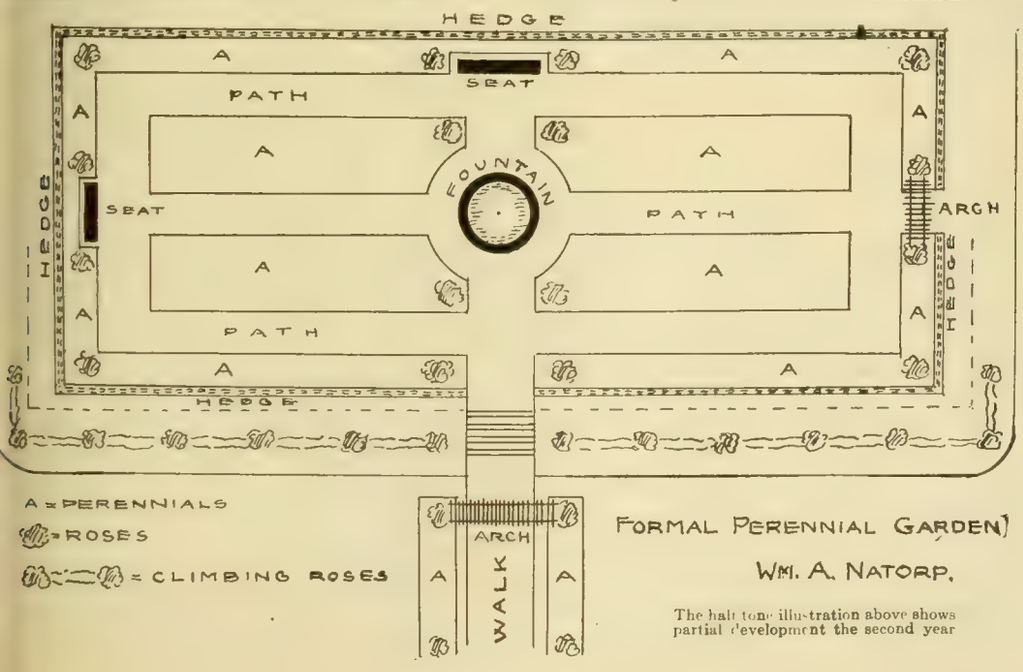
Formal perennial garden, second year See text

Most of these plants may be grown and offered for sale in pots. This feature is desirable in that they may be sold after the regular Spring shipping season for field-grown stock is over and throughout the Summer. It also enables the grower to sell them when in flower, a practice which should prove profitable to the florist with a sidewalk display and a good store trade. A pot of Lavender in bloom, for instance, should prove a good seller. Pot grown plants save time of digging in assembling an order and facilitate packing for shipment. On the other hand the writer usually obtained larger plants when purchasing them field-grown, and the latter sort is recommended for the buyer who purchases during the dormant seasons and wishes clumps, and which are really worth more, according to the size. Follow the course which your trade and facilities demand.



FORMAL PERENNIAL GARDEN

WM. A. NATORP.

The half tone illustration above shows partial development the second year

Formal Perennial Garden

On an old estate near Cincinnati was a tennis court which had not been used for years, and the accompanying photograph and sketch show how, with a little work, it was made the most attractive spot on the grounds.

Instead of making many walks and curves which would prove more expensive and difficult to maintain, a plain path system was found attractive. A marble fountain in the center with a white basin and plain marble benches gave an Italian effect. An extensive assortment of hardy perennials was planted, producing a good showing the entire season. The center beds could be slightly elevated by using some annuals in places where the first early perennials have finished blooming.

As a hedge plant Spiræa Thunbergii is used which gives a good showing in early Spring with its delicate flowers, while its foliage is attractive throughout the Summer. Different varieties of Rambler Roses trained on stakes loosely tied add much to the natural appearance. The paths are made of grass. A few groups of Tulips planted in the Fall also proved very good.

Phoma Stem Blight of Potatoes

The extreme eastern end of Long Island is largely devoted to Potato culture, and on a quite recent visit to the section along Peconic Bay and reaching over to the Sound, the writer was much struck with the ravages of what was apparently a new Potato disease. Writing to Dean A. R. Mann, of the N. Y. State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y., we find that the station had already had its man at work on this disease, particularly in Nassau and Suffolk Counties, experimenting to find a means of control.

The disease has been identified as Phoma Stem Blight; it has been quite destructive in France, and there have been occasional evidences of it in this country but no serious outbreak until the present epidemic. Circulars describing the effect of the disease have been sent to pathologists throughout the United States, and requests made for notification of points where the disease may be present, and for co-operation.

Symptoms of the disease are as follows:

Symptoms

Irregular areas in the field show the tops yellowing, wilting, falling over and drying up. The diagnostic marks of the disease are, however, the canker like spots on the stem at the surface of the ground, and often further up on the main stem and branches. The spots are at first water soaked and do not extend deep into the stem tissues. Later they become dry, often of a reddish brown color with a light almost white center. This white center usually shows large numbers of the dark brown to black pimple-like fruit bodies of the pathogene.

The lesions are also usually to be found on the lower part of the stem under ground. The fungus often works out on the stolons and attacks the tubers, forming superficial brown spots about the stem end. Only an occasional tuber shows the disease.

At a distance the Phoma affected areas are easily confused with yellowing and dying, due to dry soil or other unfavorable soil conditions. The canker-like spots are, however never present on the stems of plants in the latter case.

The disease has been observed to be most common and severe on the Green Mountain variety, also on Irish Cobbler; not observed on other varieties. Some fields show 50 per cent. infection as the letter to pathologists states, but the writer saw fields which were almost completely infected, while nearby were other fields apparently in full health and vigor; one peculiar feature noted, riding along in the car, was that hardly a field planted on absolutely level ground showed signs of disease, but that it seemed most prevalent in fields having a valley-like slope.

From the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station comes word to the effect that the losses in the Potato fields of that state is being caused by tipburn, rather than leaf-blight, due to excessive dry weather. When it is impossible for the Potato plant to take up as much water from the soil as it gives off into the air, hence the leaves burn.

The life work of the scientist is to discover all new forms of disease, then experiment for remedies; but may not the troubles with Potatoes this past season or two have been brought about in great part through lack of nourishment in the soil due to absence of suitable fertilizers, and aggravated, undoubtedly, by drought which we are now experiencing at this critical period in the ripening off of the growth of the Potato?

Efficiency in Greenhouse Management

Prof. L. C. Corbett, horticulturist in charge in the office of Horticultural and Pomological Investigations, Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who has devoted considerable time and research to the study of greenhouse construction and heating, is giving our growers some good material in the papers which follow. We have already published several articles on the subject of conservation in heating, and for that reason there may be found a few repetitions in Prof. Corbett's articles which have already been given.

The point impressing us strongly in the beginning of the article is where Prof. Corbett says: "Contrary to general belief, the geographical location of a plant does not make as much difference in the amount of fuel consumption in a given period of time as most growers believe." In other words, while firing is going on, a florist in the North will burn no more coal, pro rata, than a florist in the South.

Storm doors and the proper use of ventilators are touched upon; also the cleaning of the boilers, draft, proper height of chimney, circulation by gravity, the correct location of the expansion tank, proper pump to use—centrifugal and other types—proper location of the boilers in a steam heating system and automatic air valves cut into the lines to make for good circulation. All these points have been given careful consideration. It follows that the owner of a greenhouse, even though he may look upon himself as a "sharp" when it comes to heating, will find profit through a study of this paper, while those who are "willing to be shown" will find ample material, the adoption of which will bring about its own reward.

Making the Best Possible Use of Every Unit of Heat

With a greatly reduced supply of fuel for the coming season the greenhouse men face the necessity of making the best possible use of every unit of heat. Growers who have efficient heating plants, and well constructed houses in good repair, and who are already making the best possible use of their fuel, can do little except to substitute cool crops for such crops as Tomatoes and Cucumbers. Many heating plants, however, are in poor repair, and do not make good use of the fuel consumed.

Contrary to the general belief the geographical location of the plant does not make as much difference in the amount of fuel consumed in a given period of time as most growers believe. Data collected by the Dept. of Agriculture show that plants located in the Boston (Mass.) area use pretty nearly the same amount of fuel in a definite period of time as those located in the southern portion of the country. The firing period, however, is shorter in the southern portion of the country, hence with a reduced supply of fuel, plants so located will be able to operate at a fuller capacity, due to the longer season in which no fuel is required.

In order to make the best use of the supply of fuel available, it will be necessary to practice every possible economy. The grower should at once put his plant in condition to utilize every unit of heat to be secured from his allotted supply of fuel whether it be coal, wood, oil or natural gas. No matter how carefully the greenhouse is constructed, from the very nature of the structure it is difficult to heat. It is a well-known fact that heating engineers allow several times as much radiation for each square foot of glass as they do for brick, stone or even wood walls. The greenhouse must, of necessity, be of light construction, as heavy members cause an undue amount of shading, and, unless very well braced and secured, there is bound to be a certain amount of vibration, owing to wind, snows, etc. The tendency is for putty to become loosened, thus making the house more or less open and, unless prompt repairs are made, the structure soon becomes so loose that it is almost impossible to maintain a suitable temperature without the use of an excessive amount of fuel. Anyone who has had occasion to climb on the roof of a greenhouse will realize how much heat is lost around the glass owing to small leaks. There is in all cases a veritable current of heated air arising from the roof of almost any greenhouse, unless it be one in the very best of repair. The Summer months should be utilized to go over the houses and tighten them up in every way possible. Where any doubt exists the glass should be removed and replaced, using fresh putty.

Greenhouses are likely to settle, due to improper foundation, causing the doors and ventilators to fit poorly. Time spent in refitting doors and adjusting ventilators so that they will close properly, and the placing of felt between the doors and jambs, and between the ventilators and the heaters on which they rest, will be time and money well invested.

Make the Greenhouse Tight

Greenhouses having wooden side walls are likely to be wasteful of heat; such structures should be tightened in any way possible. It is frequently feasible to line the inside of the wall with cheap building paper, this material being satisfactory for a season or two and, in view of the fact that the whole operation can be done at low cost, it will in many cases pay handsome returns on the time and money spent.

Many of the growers in the northern section of the country make a practice of using storm doors on the outside of the houses to protect the plants near the entrance from strong drafts. This in an excellent idea and should be more generally followed, as it not only protects the plants from draft but conserves heat. A portable vestibule and storm door may be built up at small cost, and can be used from year to year.

While all greenhouse men realize that ventilation is essential to successful growth, many growers make the mistake of opening the ventilators of their houses a great deal farther than is necessary to produce the desired results, a practice which is exceedingly wasteful of heat. During the coming Winter the grower will find himself under the necessity of conserving every unit of heat in order to carry his crops through on the amount of fuel available to him.

Put the Heating Plant in Thorough Order

The overhauling of your heating plant should be undertaken without delay if not already attended to, and put in condition to insure its operating at maximum efficiency during the firing period. There are several ways in which its efficiency may be increased. Clean the boiler so that no heat will be lost through soot covered tubes or fireways in the boiler; this is especially necessary when bituminous coal is used. Records show that a thin film of soot on the fireways or tubes of the boiler will, in the majority of cases, prevent the transmission of 25 to 35 per cent. of the heat in the fuel. This means that this heat passes up the stack and is lost.

In locations where the water contains lime or other scale forming ingredients it is wise to clean the boiler thoroughly with some scale removing compound, as a thin film of scale is liable to cause undue loss of heat. Scale is not as liable to form in hot water boilers as in steam boilers, but if the water contains lime or some other ingredients, scale will be deposited in even the hot water heating boiler.

Good draft is essential to the economical consumption of fuel. The boiler should have sufficient draft so that the damper in the smoke pipe can be kept nearly closed most of the time. A boiler of such size that it can be operated without being forced will in most cases be more economical than a boiler that must be forced continually, to do the work. The capacity within certain limits of any boiler depends quite largely on the size and height of the stack. The accompanying table gives the size and height of stacks recommended for different sized boilers:

Size and Height of Stacks for Different Sized Boilers

Rating of hot water boiler in sq. ft.	Size of stack in inches Round	Square
400	8	8x8
500	8	8x8
700	8	8x8
850	10	8x12
1000	10	8x12
1200	10	8x12
1350	12	12x12
1500	12	12x12
1700	12	12x12
2100	12	12x12
2400	14	12x16
2700	14	12x16
3000	14	12x16
3400	14	12x16
3700	16	16x16
5100	16	16x16
8500	18	16x20

The height of the chimney or stack must be determined by the height of surrounding buildings or trees, also as to whether the plant is located on a hill on in a valley, and by other factors. To insure good draft it is necessary that the chimney extend several feet above any surrounding obstruction, otherwise poor draft is liable to result. If the present chimney is too small it may be possible to increase the draft by increasing its height. In many cases a few feet increase in height of chimney will provide the necessary extra draft. Forced draft apparatus may be resorted to, but anything that depends upon motive power of any sort for its successful operation is to be avoided if possible. As a rule, it will be far better policy to secure the needed draft through an increase in the height or size of the chimney than by the installation of forced draft apparatus. This is particularly true of hot water heating plants, as in this case steam is not available to operate the engine or turbine to supply the draf the case of larger plants a practice frequently fo is to have one boiler in the plant operated on a basis at high pressure for the purpose of furn steam for the pumps and other uses. When such case, forced draft apparatus can be used to advantage.

Insuring Good Circulation

Hot water heating plants depending upon gravit circulation must, to insure economical results, be car planned and, in addition to this, the pipes and rad manifolds must be kept in perfect alignment if circulation is to be insured. Greenhouses are lia settle, allowing the heating pipes to get out of ment, thus interfering with the rapid circulation water. The water in a hot water system is used as a medium for transferring the heat from the to the greenhouses themselves. For this reaso faster the water circulates the more efficient wi system be. Time spent in re-aligning the pipes s they have a uniform grade will be a material economical operation of the plant. In many case efficiency of a hot water heating plant may be materially increased by re-locating the expansion In most hot water heating systems this tank is l at the highest point in the system which, in the c gravity systems is, as a rule, near the boiler. In f years it was the custom to run the pipes up h the far end of the houses and back to the return of the boiler. This necessitated the location of th expansion tank at the opposite end of the houses the boiler. It has been found, however, that by t the flow pipe from the boiler and carrying it to a as near the ridge of the houses as possible and allowing the pipes to drop gradually to the far e the house and back to the boiler, with the exp tank immediately under the roof of the boiler gives better results.

The higher the expansion tank, the greater the sure on the system, and the higher it is possi carry the temperature of the water. Many utilize closed expansion tanks located at any conv point in the bolier room, these tanks operating exactly the same principle as a pneumatic water s system tank. The expansion line from the heatin system enters the tank at the bottom and, as the expands and enters the tank, the entrapped air is pressed, thus increasing the pressure on the entir system and, of course, making it possible to carr temperature of the water up to 240 or 250 d without trouble. This as a rule mean a more ef system. The same results may be secured by co ing the heating system to the city waterworks sy thus insuring that the system will always be fille that the expansion will be taken care of in this ma This places the same pressure on the heating s as is carried on the city water system, enablin operator to carry the temperature up to 220 o degrees, the temperature depending on the pressure ried on the city water system.

If it should prove impossible to make extensive ch in the plan of the heating system, the re-location c expansion tank need involve but little expense and in many cases, improve the efficiency of the pla or 20 per cent.

Economical Use of Pumps

Direct acting steam pumps are perhaps more w used for increasing the circulation in hot water hea systems than any other type of pump. They have advantage of extreme reliability and are installe some of the largest and most up to date hot w heating plants in the country. The steam use operate these pumps is, as a rule, taken from one b of the plant and, after passing through the pump as a rule, taken from one boiler of the plant and, passing through the pumps, is discharged into a water heater connected with the main heating sy so that no heat is lost. Repacking and fitting of valves of these pumps will increase their efficiency be of considerable assistance in fuel economy.

The WEEK'S WORK

Conducted by FRITZ BAHR

Notes for August

If you can manage during this month get all the repairs on the houses com- ted you are indeed "away ahead," but takes a good man to replace broken ss on a roof or use the putty bulbs ile it is hot and dry outdoors. There no such thing as being "ahead" of ir work in a greenhouse. Most of us e all we can do trying to catch up. if you can possibly make extra ef- ts during August in getting things in ape there is a chance during Septem- r and October to do some outdoor work only for yourself but for some of ir patrons. Keep on talking peren- ls and hardy stock; don't let August by without sending a neatly printed ce of advertising to your customers, ing attention to Irises and Pæonias ich should be planted during Septem- r. Make use of a good cut, don't say much, and follow this up with more ut other hardy plants later on. If ngs are quiet indoors get busy out- rs; don't tell anyone there isn't much ng in the flower line, but keep on re- nding your patrons to "cheer up" ngs around the home with hardy flow- ng plants and that you are selling more them than ever before. This appeals them. From now on until the 'Mums in bloom every retail grower should to make money outdoors—what you ven't got in the way of stock locate w so you know what to depend on, and cost as well. Visit some of your neigh- rs, not only the florists but the nursery- n and work with them. Are your first eesias planted? If not, get busy; you nt them for Christmas. Is that store ng to have a coat of paint? Callas liable to be in great demand; get m now. Twine and wire for the Car- tions won't get more plentiful nor aper and you will need other necessary plies.

Planning Crop Rotations

I don't think we take nearly enough e to map out our work and plan what to be done so as to get the most out the houses. The average retail grower ps on changing the location of cer- n crops from year to year, not be- se certain things do better here or re or not as well, but it all just hap- s. We made money on a bunch of lamens this year, or think we did, for all of that it is very likely that won't have Cyclamens at all the year owing. A bunch of Snapdragons had e finely in a certain house, but some- ng entirely different will have that ch the next year. Greater attention uld be given to planning ahead and n follow out as nearly as possible at it is thought best to do. A system this kind will not only mean avoid- empty benches, waste of energy and ck, but will give better returns which absolutely necessary, especially now. matter how small or large the grower, must sooner or later come to appre- te the fact that every foot of bench e has to bring a certain amount of 6ft and for every foot that doesn't the ance of the house has so much more own upon it. The man who trusts to d luck or hopes that a certain crop l make up for other crops not so d is on the wrong road. You should e a good reason for certain crops be- in certain places and you should w what other crops are to follow and e their place. Nothing is truer than t empty benches don't pay.

An Example of Crop Rotation

There is no end to the crops we can w in the benches during the year, and w to let one crop follow the other in der to obtain the best returns from a en space. To the smaller grower this of greater importance than to the man an unlimited amount of glass. Let give an example of how a bench can be made to bring in money from next November until the following August: Plant Freesias now, say 6⅝ size bulbs to a 4in. pot; let them come along outdoors in a frame; start a good strain of Pansies at once outdoors; it would have been better if they had been started two weeks ago. By the first of October plant the Freesias in rows across the bench, allowing 24in. between the rows; don't divide the Freesias but plant them out as you place them on the rows, pot on pot. Start enough so as to plant 20 or 30 rows and again for 20 more a little later. After that or from Oct. 25 on plant the bulbs right into the bench. Between the rows of Freesias plant Pansies or, at least use a part of the bench, Myosotis, Calendulas or dwarf Snapdragons may be used also. The first Freesias will be out of the way by New Years, when you can plant more, or the space may be taken up by Gladioli America. These can take their place, followed by more Gladioli started in 3½in. pots. In the meantime Spanish Irises may be used also, or the small flowering Gladioli. Start double Cornflowers in January and grow on in 3½in. Plant the first one between the Pansies in April not less than 15in. apart; they won't interfere with the Pansies for some time. When the first Gladioli leave the bench, plant Tomatoes "Comet" from seed, some in January. Let them have 15in. of space and grow single stems, or more Gladioli from pots can be planted to follow. It doesn't follow that this arrangement will suit all requirements, but it has been made to pay excellent returns, far more than on single crop for the same sized bench. However, there are other combinations well worth considering; the above is only meant to get you to consider such planting.

In the 'Mum House

Plenty of Moisture Needed

For the next month it will be a good practice for you to see to it that the very last thing done in the houses is to spray the 'Mums. During extra hot spells it isn't enough to just spray the tops a little; get that hose and full force of water underneath the plants and "give it to them." Wet below the benches, the sides of the house and the walks. Chrysanthemums while growing need a lot of moisture, more especially if you desire good foliage. You can tell in a minute by the color of the foliage if the soil in the benches is too wet—yellow color and a sickly growth are the results; avoid it by examining the soil in the benches before you apply water. As much harm is done through lack of moisture as from any other cause, and the plants in the benches in about 4in. of soil suffer far more than those in solid beds where the roots have a chance to go down into the soil. With the foliage moist over night during July and August it is easier for the plants to withstand the hot days, and while by spraying one is bound to get water on the soil in the benches, that doesn't say they have to be soaked every time one sprays; or on the other hand that spraying twice a day is suffieient for the plants and makes watering unnecessary. Then, too, rainy spells also have to be taken into consideration. To use water and use it rightly means a great deal in the greenhouse and only experience can teach a man just how to do it. But one can help him along with suggestions toward the right road.

Mignonette

Mignonette likes cool weather, during Midsummer. There isn't much to the plants nor the flowers outside of their delightful fragrance. To see the flowers at their best, culture under glass is necessary in many localities, and wonderful spikes can be had during Midwinter and up to the beginning of Summer. No retail grower should be without Mignonette during the Winter months any more than without Stevia. It would be hard to find a patron who doesn't like Mignonette whether grown into 18in long flower spikes or as plants with three to four doz. small branches. As with the Sweet Peas for the small grower it is always well to have, during the Fall months, a few batches of small Mignonettes on hand in 2½in. pots. There may be room on some bench where a few dozen plants can be planted out, or where other crops, which at first promised to bring in a whole lot of money, turned out wrong in the last minute. I don't call it waste to throw out if necessary a surplus lot of stock such as had been grown on to take the place of other plants. You can't slip small Mignonette plants very successfully; they won't stand it. Obtain a good strain of seed, make use of 2½in. pots, and sow about three to five seeds to the pot. Shade until the seedlings are well under way; after that the coolest house you have but all the sun that shines. Place a wire screen or light cheese cloth about a foot or so above the little plants to keep the butterflies away. Given the most beautiful plants to look at, if there are Mignonette in the same house the butterflies will insist on laying their eggs on them, and later on the green caterpillars will finish the Mignonette. Thin out to two plants per pot. Will take up the benching later.

Mignonette, always popular

The 40 Ton Coal Maximum

While there was good reason for every one to try his best to secure the 50 per cent. of coal allowed the florist for the coming Winter, since the good news came that the small fellow can have his full share if within 40 tons, it is more important than ever for him to load up, for things are happening so unexpectedly that no one can tell what the next order or ruling may be that comes from the Fuel Administration. If you once have your supply of needed coal or most of it under cover on your own grounds you will feel better. It isn't selfish or unreasonable for us to strain every point to secure our supply of coal when perhaps others in the town we live in, in other lines of business, have trouble in obtaining their requirements. The florist who has greenhouses must have coal in order to make a living. One cannot close down a greenhouse the same as a grocery or drygoods store or a factory and open up again in a few weeks. The minute one stops things go back, and in the course of five or six days thousands of dollars worth of stock would be ruined. An effect, much the same, would be produced in Summer if water was withheld from the flowers for a few hours. If we are told that there is to be no coal for us, we will have to close down, but if there is a chance of obtaining it and we are granted the privilege, let's get it and get it quickly. There are men who have already closed down, sold out or let everything lay because things looked gloomy a couple of months ago, and some of these very men are sorry right now for what they did. Things look brighter, but even if other unlooked for conditions should arrive, why not do your best to meet them and hang on as long as you can to manage your business. A way will be found to pull through—some way, —so get your coal ready for shoveling.

Don't Be a Slacker

Don't behave
Like a slacker;
Serve and save:
Be a backer
Of your country
And the war:
It's you and me
They're fighting for.
And in nineteen

After glorious Victory
Uncle Sam will Say: "My son,
Now that Peace
Is nobly won,
Here are your savings—

Keep the Flowers Growing

The N. Y. State College of Agriculture, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., devotes one of its Bulletins to an article entitled, "Keep the Flowers Growing, and Tell your Boy at the Front about the Posies in the Dooryard."

It points out that during war time there has been danger that the cultivation of flowers may be too much neglected. The effort of the college is to urge that there is no less a place for the cultivation of beauty now than there was before the menace of Prussianism threatened the world.

To assist in the work it recently issued publications on "The Culture of Garden Roses," "Spring in the Flower Garden," and these have just been followed by "Autumn in the Flower Garden" (No. 128), telling how to have a succession of hardy perennial flowers clear through October.

Our readers in New York State would advance this educational work by suggesting to their customers that they send a postcard request for these publications which are an aid to the trade and not a hindrance.

European Seeds

We regret that the advices from our teemed correspondent, "European eds," have been reaching us so irregu- rly of late, and quite often none at l, having evidently gone astray in the ails. This situation we hope shortly see remedied.

From Inside the Seed Bin

The Half Yearly Clean-up Inventory

Yes! it's a mean job, is it not? and ie you generally put off until you are ood and ready to tackle it. But it has be done, and is really an essential every seed house that is run on proper siness lines.

"Inventory" is usually finished by the iddle of July, and should be ready July but this year I know a few houses hich are still working on it due to a busy onth of June attending to store and ail orders, with short and partly new lp.

Having completed the entries in the d year stock sheets ending July 1, with e stock on hand, a new set of sheets r loose leaf binder, or a regular ready- ade stock book should be provided for e entry of the carried over stock, fol- wed later with entries of fresh pur- ases.

I do not know how all seed houses ep their records but I know how some , and each has its own particular style suit the class of stock. However, the mmon intention of all is simply to be le to ascertain at a glance what sales ou are making from day to day, and hat you have made at the end of the ar compared with that of former years.

Previous to the Government order com- lling dealers to furnish particulars of rtain seeds as to purity, germination, c., I know several good, honest seeds- en who never kept a set of stock books, id had not the slightest idea how to art when they were compelled to, but ow that they have adopted the system ey are wondering how on earth they t along before without it. Mind you, I n't mean to convey that it was care- sness or negligence on their part, but ey never felt the necessity of it and erefore never had any use for it.

One sometimes meets that man with a reat head" who can tell you offhand ow much seed (of any kind you may ention) he bought, sold and has on nd, simply by watching and handling ie daily orders and noting mentally the ifferent transactions. There are possibly en who can do this with a fair amount accuracy, but such a man would be where in a large conern.

While taking stock and before putting way the seed to be "covered over," it ould be thoroughly re-cleaned and put to clean containers. The storing of seeds as been covered in a previous article. am sorry to say this re-cleaning process often neglected by many firms, and ough the seed may show a high germi- ation, dirty seed is one big black mark gainst the house, a condition that soon ecomes linked with the firm's name mong the trade. Customers resent hav- ng to take the dust and chaff out of ed, not to mention paying for the extra eight. If not intentional it shows care- sness and loose business methods. Try nd follow the motto, "Don't send out any seed that does not look exactly like that which you would buy yourself."

Stock record sheets vary according to the requirements of the volume of business done and the kind of stock, i. e., vege- table, flower or farm seed, but the follow- ing are suggested headings for columns of the purchase side of the stock book:

On the opposite side, or Sales Sheet, are columns for entries covering large and moderate quantities sold, giving "Date," "Quantity," "Purchaser," "Packet Stock" (being amount put up in packets or ounces), and amounts sent out to grow on contract, or stock other- wise disposed of. Columns are also often provided for quotations from different sources of supply.

These suggestions may prove helpful to the average dealer handling a moderate line of seeds, but I cannot attempt to describe or lay out here some of the elaborate systems I know of without earn- ing the worst wishes of the compositor, besides disclosing trade secrets. Nemo.

New York Seed Trade

Bulb Situation

Many inquiries are heard among the seedsmen about French bulbs, and not a few express grave doubts as to whether they will arrive this season, and some express the opinion that the outlook for the arrival of Dutch bulbs, dubious as it is, is better than for French. Some importers, on the other hand, believe that both Dutch and French bulbs will come into this country this season and think it possible that the restriction on the importation of Japanese Lily bulbs, too, may be removed. The fact is it costs nothing to make a guess about what is going to happen as regards bulb impor- tation, and you may guess right.

The most comprehensive exhib't of green Beans in the pod ever noted in this city was seen recently in the store win- dow of J. M. Thorburn & Co., 53 Barclay st. There were 40 varieties of these Beans. They were grown on the trial grounds of this firm at Noroton, Conn., and embraced all the leading green pod and wax pod varieties. Masterpiece and Bountiful were especially fine, but others were almost, if not quite, equally good.

Burnett Bros.' building, at 92 Cham- bers st., recently purchased by them, is being made ready for occupancy soon, and the stock at their present quarters is being made ready for removal.

Roman J. Irwin, 108 W. 28th st., re- ceived a postal from Sergeant David Thom, formerly in his employ, announc- ing that he had arrived safely "over there."

J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, Ill., came to this city early this week and is spend- ing a few days here.

The W. W. Barnard Co. report an unusually good business during July. C. O. Wilcox came in Saturday to spend Sunday with his family in the city. Morris K. Smith states that the Pearl and Bermuda Onion crops just harvested are being shipped and are of excellent quality. A. H. Goodwin left Saturday for New York where he will join Mrs. Goodwin and others, forming a party which will go for a few weeks' recrea- tion to New Hampshire and the White Mountain regions.

The American Bulb Co. is having a fine trade in Freesia bulbs; shipments go out daily to every section of the coun-

Will Japanese Bulbs Come?

A. Henderson of A. Henderson & Co. is of the opinion that there are sufficient Japanese Lilies in storage to last until the first of the next year when the planting of the Easter crops will be over.

Seitaro Aria, who is one of the largest dealers of Lily bulbs in Japan, and his secretary-interpreter, H. Sacaki, spent a few days here the past week on their way to Washington, D. C., where Mr. Aria will make a plea to the War Board on behalf of the Lily growers of Japan. Mr. Aria stated there will be nothing left undone to have the embargo lifted on Lily bulbs as it would cause the ruin of the bulb industry of Japan. If the bulbs cannot be exported this season the growers will not plant for another season's crop.

The harvesting of the Onion set crop in the Chicago district is now on, with the prospects for a fair yield. There has been much rain during the past few days, which makes the situation uneasy lest it might prevent the complete maturity of the crops.

Vaughan's Seed Store has received its third and largest shipment of Freesias and they are moving in large quantities daily. Since it became known that Bermuda Lilies would come there has been a large enquiry for same. The price is, however, said to be prohibitive as the growers are asking from 50 per cent. to 100 per cent. more for their crops this year than last.

J. C. Vaughan left Saturday for a business and pleasure trip to New York and other cities of the East.

Dealers in fertilizers have been notified that there is an embargo on the use of burlap for fertilizer sacks when the quantity contained is less than 200 lbs.

Importers have been notified that before the license is issued for the exportation of French bulbs the stock must be on the wharf at the shipping port and the steamer space engaged.

Freight Charges on Cash Basis

The order covering freight charges which went into effect Aug. 1, cancels existing credit accommodations but carriers will be permitted to extend credit for 48 hours after receipt of a shipment of a consignment if it be prepaid, or after delivery at destination if it be a collect consignment, provided a surety bond is furnished. Each railroad will require a separate bond, but it may accept from any shipper one bond covering all its uncollected charges at all stations.

To meet this new order of freight handling in such a way as to relieve the merchants of all unnecessary trouble and expense, various accident and indemnity companies and others possessing the privilege of executing bonds, are prepared to execute bonds for merchants at the rate of $5 per $1000 per annum, the minimum being $5 for each bond required.

Weekly Market Review, Fruits and Vegetables

For the period of July 23 to 29 inclusive shipments were lighter in practically all lines of produce, and prices tended generally upward. Many commodities experienced slight losses early in the week but practically everything except Tomatoes closed strong. Watermelons, Peaches and Potatoes showed particular strength over the week end.

The full report covering fruits and vegetables on the market, from which the preceding is taken, is issued weekly by the Bureau of Markets, U. S. Dept. of Agri., 204 Franklin st., New York City, and we presume copies may be obtained from that office.

Seed Reporter for San Francisco

The U. S. Dept. of Agriculture has appointed S. S. Lawrence to act as its local representative in seed reporting, and his office will be located at 1133 Merchants Exchange bldg., 433 California st., San Francisco, Cal. This office is intended to be for the general public service, supplying information as to sources, distribution and production of seed throughout the State.

Our Advertising Man's Corner

300 RENEWALS IN 5 DAYS

Pay attention, ye men, who seek the worthwhile advertising mediums!

There appears from day to day in the large metropolitan dailies page advertisements inserted by the publishers of magazines, monthlies in particular.

These appeals vary from talks on the vast amount of money in circulation, and the new activities and larger life of the women in our land, with their great purchasing power, to the number of tooth brushes bought annually by the subscribers to the magazine.

All this is interesting, sometimes most convincing, and oftimes, undoubtedly, actually a true statement of affairs, as far as the merit of the particular medium from an advertising standpoint is concerned.

But while many of these same magazines spend their thousands of dollars to secure advertising, only a few of them enjoy the eagerness on the part of their readers to renew their subscriptions year by year, as shown by those who subscribe to THE EXCHANGE.

The magazines previously referred to find it absolutely necessary to keep up the strongest kind of subscription campaign, and "woe betide you" if your name is ever placed on their list of subscription prospects. Letters and more letters will continue to reach you week by week until you get that real tired feeling.

Because, however, we are in the business of publishing a paper which, actually and without reservation, is part and parcel of the trade and, as one of our enthusiastic subscribers said recently, "is as necessary to every man in the trade, as the warmth of the sun to the plants which he grows," we are saved the necessity of building up a forced circulation.

Every name on our list has been put there for the simple reason that these subscribers have expressed a desire to have the paper by sending us a remittance of $1.50, our present subscription rate for one year and, further, these continue to be subscribers, because of their prompt renewals, year in and year out.

Hence: 300 renewals in 5 days.

We believe that the simple story always best conveys the point; it is our belief that advertisers will see in this plain statement something holding value for them.

I have read THE EXCHANGE for a number of years and have been able to sell all I grew.—Ernest Harris, Delanson, N. Y.

Department of Plant Registration

Public notice is hereby given that the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., submits for registration the following new Roses:

Rose Premier, seedling of Ophelia X, Mrs. Chas. Russell; color, deep pure rose; very large in bloom; splendid forcing qualities; a "big Rose" in every way; exceptionally free bloomer.

Rose Victor, seedling of Ophelia X Killarney Brilliant; type of Killarney Brilliant; very free; large in growth and bloom.

Rose Golden Rule, seedling of Ophelia X Sunburst; a yellow Rose, much like Ophelia in growth; good color; excellent forcing qualities; very free in growth and bloom.

Rose Mme Butterfly, a highly colored sport of Ophelia.

Any person objecting to these registrations, or to the use of the proposed names is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objections to the registrations, the same will be made three weeks from this date. JOHN YOUNG, Secy. July 27, 1918, 1170 Broadway, New York.

The Sweet Pea Crop

"Sweet Peas, at Watsonville, Cal., have done well this season and will afford a good yield, but elsewhere in the State the aphis appears to have made a clean sweep of the plants."

Commenting on the above which appeared in a contemporary, July 20, a leading grower says:

"This is wrong. Near the ocean at Watsonville the yield will be good. Near town aphis have riddled the vines. We have one patch, 30 acres, total loss; several other pieces of ours, total over 300 acres, that will not make one-tenth of a crop. On the other hand several growers near the ocean have some good Peas.

CLEVELAND, O.—On and after July 30, the business known as the Children's Flower Mission will be changed in name to that of The Templin-Crockett-Bradley Co. There is no change in either the personnel or policy of the company, but the use of both names the past six years having caused some confusion it has been deemed advisable to adhere to the corporate name exclusively in the future.

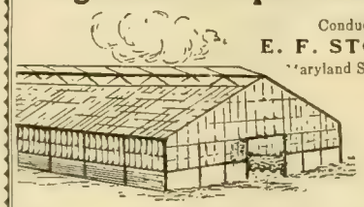
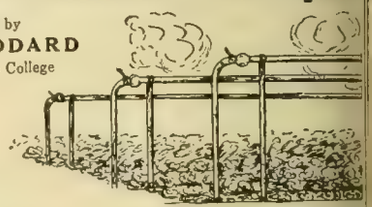
Vegetable Crops Under Glass and in the Open

Conducted by E. F. STODDARD Maryland State College





Using Greenhouses to Grow Early Frost Tender Vegetable Plants

The fourth of a series of articles dealing with the use of greenhouses for growing early vegetable plants for transplanting outdoors to produce Summer vegetables. This article covers Celery and Onions

Growing Early Celery Plants in Greenhouses

Early Celery is another crop that may be started in greenhouses for transplanting outside to produce Summer vegetables. While Celery is not as important as Cabbage or Tomatoes as a food crop, it is a delicious vegetable which adds to the variety of vegetables in home gardens. Celery needs a light, rich soil which is not found in every home garden. For these reasons the demand for Celery plants will not be as great as for Cabbage or Tomatoes. Nevertheless, there will be, no doubt, a great many sections in the country where Celery plants will meet with ready sale, particularly to experienced gardeners.

Celery is classed among the less hardy or frost-tender plants, although it is considerably hardier than Tomatoes, and if well hardened before going to the field may stand a very light frost. Celery requires about nine weeks to grow the plants and harden them properly before they are planted outdoors. If the average date of the latest Spring frost is about May 5, the seed would be sown about March 1. In this way it can be decided easily when to start the plants in different sections.

Celery seed is extremely small and germinates slowly. The young seedlings are very tender and will not push through the soil if they are covered too deeply. The soil for the seed bed must be light and porous, containing some fiber from compost or fine, well rotted manure. The seed may be sown on the benches or in flats. Since the plants will be transplanted later, it is convenient to start the seedlings in flats which may be carried easily to the potting shed or other benches where the transplanting will be done. Another advantage in using flats is that the surface of the soil in the flat may be made absolutely level with a straight stick, and when the furrows are made an even depth this insures an even stand of seedlings, nearly all of which will be ready for transplanting at the same time. This avoids waste of seed, and the necessity of throwing out some seedlings when the larger ones are taken out for transplanting.

The flats must have three or four cracks in the bottom to provide good drainage. After the flat is filled with soil, and leveled off, the furrows may be made with a straight stick, about ¼in. thick. This furrow which is thus ¼in. wide, should not be deeper than ⅛in. The seed should be purchased early enough to make a simple germination test to find out how thickly it will be necessary to sow. Good seed may be sown at the rate of about 15 to 18 seed to the inch. Label the flats properly About 1/16in. soil is enough covering Firm the soil lightly over the rows. Th rows may be 1½in. to 2in. apart.

The flats must be watered with watering can having very fine holes, s the seeds will not be washed out. I shallow seeding a damp cloth or piece o burlap is often laid over the flat befo watering to prevent washing out th seeds. From this time on there shoul be a constant supply of moisture for th seeds since they germinate slowly, takin about 14 to 16 days when the tempera ture is about 65 deg. to 75 deg.

To keep the moisture supply as con stant as possible, a piece of newspape may be laid over the flat until the seed begin to germinate. At this time th paper must be removed promptly or els the plants will become weak and spind ling. If the seed is sown directly in th bench soil, a lattice screen may be use to shade the ground, or else a piece o burlap, or newspapers. Remove the cov ering promptly when the seeds begin t germinate.

When the first rough leaf has devel oped the seedlings are ready to be trans planted. Florists may be accustomed t transplanting certain kinds of seedling when they are very small, but vegetabl growers prefer to wait until they ar a little larger, since they are handle more easily. Of course, they are not al lowed to become too large before shiftin

If the plants are to be shifted only once before they are planted outdoors they should be transplanted about 2in apart in flats or beds. When they are t be shifted twice to produce reallly strong plants they may be set 1½in. apart in flats and later shifted to 3in. pots. Fo this second shift some growers who raise their own plants often use 4in. pots in which larger plants may be developed.

While the seedlings are young the temperatures may be about 65 deg. to 75 deg. until they get a start, and then the temperatures may be lowered gradually to about 55 deg. at night and 60 deg. to 65 deg. during the day. When the plants are large enough to be hardened still more, the temperatures may be lowered gradually about 10 deg. more. For this hardening process cooler greenhouses may be used at first and then coldframes if the greenhouse temperatures are too high.

Ailsa Craig and Giant Gibraltar. Since the sets will not keep from one season to another, it is necessary to start the crop from seed each year. The seed may be sown outdoors as soon as the ground can be prepared, but in a great many sections where the Summers are too hot to grow Onions, those started from seed outdoors will not attain a desirable size before hot weather stops their growth. For these reasons it is desirable to sow the seed in January or February in the North, or earlier than this in the South.

Seed sown about Jan. 15 will develop plants about the size of a pencil by April 10 to 15, when they may be planted outside, in the vicinity of Washington, D. C. The seed may be sown in flats which can be carried easily from one house to another or to frames, to harden them properly. The seed is sown about ¼in. deep in rows 1½in. to 2 in. apart in flats. Good one year old seeds may be sown at the rate of 10 to the inch. When the plants get a good start they should be thinned if necessary to stand about ½in. apart in the row. Careful seeding will avoid much thinning.

The plants remain where the seed is sown until they are planted outdoors. The vegetable gardening students at the Maryland State College tried some experiments in transplanting Prizetaker Onions once before they were planted outside, but they found that these plants were neither larger nor stronger than those not shifted, when the time came for field planting. When the seedlings are about 6in. tall, they are clipped back to about 4in. and when they grow tall again they are clipped back a second time. This prevents the seedlings from becoming too large and starts a slight swelling of the bulb. When they are planted in the garden, the leaf surface may be reduced again and this is the last time they should be clipped.

The temperatures for germination are about 55 deg. to 65 deg. Later on, as the plants become larger, the temperature may be lowered to harden them. These young Onions will not stand a frost like Cabbage plants will. If the tops are injured by frost because of insufficient protection before the plants are well hardened, they will not make the best growth afterward.

The discussion of this vegetable plant was omitted when Cabbage and Lettuce were discussed because Onion plants will not be grown as generally as the others mentioned, but in some localities money may be made from the growing of Onion seedlings. Seedlings grown by the method described make a fine growth in the field, since they are in a growing condition when they are planted outside. Very large Onions may be grown on rich soil by giving them a little hand hoeing to keep the soil loose around the bulb. Some of the largest bulbs I have seen grown from good seedlings averaged 4in. to 6in. in diameter, a few of them being 7in.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y. Louis Mancinicllo, of 88 Marion st., a florist, 59 years of age, was thrown to his death on the morning of July 30, when a Broadway surface car hit his market wagon at Broadway and 21st st., New York City. His sons, Frederick, 10 years old, and James, 12 years old, had assisted their father to load ferns on the the wagon and accompanied him on the way to market in 28th st., New York. The boys were sleeping in the wagon when the accident occurred. The jar, when the car and the wagon came into contact, was not sufficient to awaken the boys, but it was severe enough to throw the parent from his seat and into the path of an oncoming trolley car which the motorman was unable to stop in time.

Houston, Texas

To the victors belong the flowers and triumphal wreaths. While the florists of Houston are experiencing a little of the dullness of Midsummer, they look forward with optimism, due to the way in which the war is going now, to the time when they will be selling huge quantities of victory bouquets.

R. C. Kerr reports that the store has been getting about 500 Roses a day from the R. C. Kerr Co.

Anent the coal discussion, in a recent article about flowers and their place in our daily life, a newspaper states that flowers can be raised in Texas cheaper than in the North, because in Texas it is necessary to build a fire only two or three days a week from Nov. 15 to Mar. 10, whereas in the North the houses must be heated from Sept. to almost June, one Northern concern's coal bill alone being $63,000 for the Winter of 1917-1918. All the large greenhouses of the R. C. Kerr Floral Co. are heated with wood. The statement is made that in the new plant of the recently incorporated wholesale plant and flower business of the Robt. C. Kerr Co. one large greenhouse will be entirely devoted to Rose Columbia.

R. G. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouses is taking a well earned vacation.

Mrs. C. Thomas, with the Q. & S. Florists, will soon take her vacation and go North for the rest of the Summer.

Paul M. Carroll furnished the decorations for a large luncheon at the Country Club, using Blue Bells and Daisies; also the decorations for the large church wedding of a lieutenant at Camp Ellington flying field. There have been a number of weddings from the camp.

A fine bedding plant for this section, and now in bloom, is the Vinca or Periwinkle. It is hardy, needing little water, and its flowers always look bright and attractive. C. L. B.

Quiet Market

There is very little doing in the florists' line at the present time, the bulk of the work being in the nature of funeral work, with a fair demand for flowers to be sent to hospitals and infirmaries. These are keeping the local florists reasonably busy but the usual Midsummer dull season is on.

With the growers, nearly all of the planting has been done and they are for the most part tying up plants and propagating Spring plants, this occupying the greater portion of their time. Indications are that all the growers around Louisville will attempt to keep their houses going during the coming Winter, a number of them having stated that they would lay in a supply of wood to help out with the limited amount of coal.

News Notes

Herbert Walker of the F. Walker Co., who suffered a broken hip when a barn door fell on him, is just now able to be at his office. Mr. Walker was confined to his bed for nine weeks and has as yet not fully recovered his strength, but for the past week has been spending a part of his time at his desk. He is hopeful that within a short time he will be in perfect health once more and can get back into harness again. Mr. Walker has announced that the greenhouses located at New Albany, Ind., would be sold as soon as a purchaser could be found. Mr. Walker has about all he can attend to in his store and greenhouses in Louisville and has decided to dispose of the New Albany plant. The New Albany houses are in excellent condition and he should have little trouble in disposing of them.

Frank and Henry Kleinsteuber, sons of John Kleinsteuber, who work with their father in his establishment, have given up the florists' business, for the Summer at least, and have both secured positions at the Henry Vogt Machine Co. Mr. Kleinsteuber states that when the Fall rush starts the boys will be back with him.

The third of the Pontrich brothers to enter the army, Rudolph Pontrich, has been sent to Camp Taylor for training. He is a brother of Simon Pontrich, and before entering the service was with his brother in the florists' business. Simon Pontrich reports business good, with a fair demand for funeral work. He has planted all of his Carnations and Chrysanthemums and says that he put in more of the latter this season than has been his custom.

H. Kleinstarink states that things are quiet with him; some funeral work, cleaning up his houses and propagating Spring plants keeps him fairly busy. He has put in a fair supply of wood and says that he will get as much as he possibly can in the hope of keeping his houses going all Winter. Mr. Kleinstarink was one of a number of people who joined the War Savings Limit Society, purchasing $1000 worth of stamps. O. V. N. S.

At the 87th fair of the American Institute, which is to be held in conjunction with the Dahlia exhibition by the American Dahlia Society, $20 and diploma and $10 and diploma, respectively, are being offered as first and second prizes for the best and largest exhibit of agricultural implements, and like prizes for the best and largest exhibit of horticultural implements.

Middle Atlantic States

Buffalo, N. Y.

The market was loaded with everything in flowers, Carnations and Roses predominating. The supply of Roses was the heaviest of the Summer season; Carnations were also very plentiful. The best of the Carnations sold at a fair price, while the ordinary sort dragged considerably, a good portion being lost. The extremely hot weather has caused a great loss in cut stock. Roses arrived in bad condition, even when well iced in shipments. Am. Beauty Roses were in good supply, though it was impossible to hold them in bud. The demand was very light.

Gladioli, Asters and other outdoor material, such as Sweet Peas, Cornflowers, Mignonette, Larkspur and Achillea, have kept the market well filled and sales have not been any too brisk. Some fine Lilies are coming in and these have had a fair demand.

Delightful Outing

Genuine success and real old-fashioned enjoyment marked the recent annual outing of the Buffalo florists and their families at the country home of the Buffalo Automobile Club. The program was in charge of E. C. Brucker, Edward Werrick and Edward Stratemeyer, who prepared a gilt edged program. According to everybody present, the picnic was "the best ever."

The guests motored to the picnic grounds. The weather was ideal and the program of sports, lasted through the afternoon and up to 9 o'clock in the evening. The events included a sack race, 100 yard dash, hop-skip-and-jump; lady's walking race, etc.; boy's race, girl's race, old man's race, fat man's race, etc. There were games for men, women and children. Thrift Stamps were included in the prizes. There was a ball game, the winning side receiving $5, which was donated to the Red Cross. William Grever and John Kramer were captains of the respective teams. A very fine lamp was donated by A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. The gift was raffled and part of the proceeds was turned over to the Red Cross. The guests included Mr. Slicker, representative of the Randall Co. Free refreshments were served under "the old Apple trees" in the club grounds.

Dancing was indulged in during the evening, and a first-class banquet was keenly enjoyed. The banqueters numbered 131. Discussions of the coal question and other trade talk were strictly tabooed at the outing. The observance of this ruling contributed to the success of the program. JOSEPH A. McGUIRE.

Lancaster, Pa.

There is little retail business, with a correspondingly short supply of really good stock.

B. F. Barr & Co. are making very necessary repairs and additions to their store, and it is getting to look like a metropolitan shop.

The weather has been abnormally hot and in most sections stock is beginning to suffer from the drought; only local showers, over small areas, have fallen.

Fuel Circular

The Fuel Administrator sent to every florist in this section a circular letter telling him just where he stands on the fuel question so that there is now no excuse for anyone going wrong or getting into trouble.

The circular says that all who use 40 tons of coal or less may get their full supply; those who use more than this amount are entitled to 50 per cent. of their amount, with the privilege of all the screenings and wood they can get without railroad transportation.

Saturday, July 27, was a red letter day for the Gardeners and Florists' Employees' Fraternal Ass'n, an organization not in active existence but held together by social bonds. The members had an all day picnic in Hunsacker's Meadow, along the picturesque banks of the Conestoga River. The following were present: Harry Benner, Lewis Benner, Edwin Beck, Ames Kauffman, Harry Flawd, John Fleer, Jos. Clerico, Jos. Gipple, LeRoy Getz, Urban Taylor and David Coble, with their wives and families. Miss Laura Jacobs, John Fleer and Harry Haverstick were the single members of the party and acted as chaperons for the rest. With plenty to eat and drink, bathing, and a banjo and phonograph to furnish the music a delightful day was spent.

July Market Keeps Up

Business for July kept up well. There is plenty of stock, but the demand is not as great as it was. Roses seem to be the heaviest crop; the grades are nothing extra. Some Am. Beauty Roses of the new crop are now coming in but there is very little demand for them. Gladioli are coming in in limited quantities but show the effects of lack of rain.

Asters are coming in more plentifully and will soon be flooding the market. Lilies are arriving in larger quantities and prices have dropped. Carnations are still to be had, but they are of poor quality; they sell only because there are not enough Asters on the market.

News Notes

Milton Alexander, representing Lion & Co. of New York, was a caller this week. It has been four months since this popular salesman visited this city, due to the illness of his child at home.

Herschel McCallum left for Camp Sherman on Tuesday for military service.

W. A. Clarke and family have gone to their home on Lake Chautauqua for the balance of the Summer.

The Pittsburgh Florists' Club will hold its outing and picnic at Walnut Beach, Sewickley, on Aug. 7. An interesting program of sports, with prizes, has been arranged, and an enjoyable time is promised.

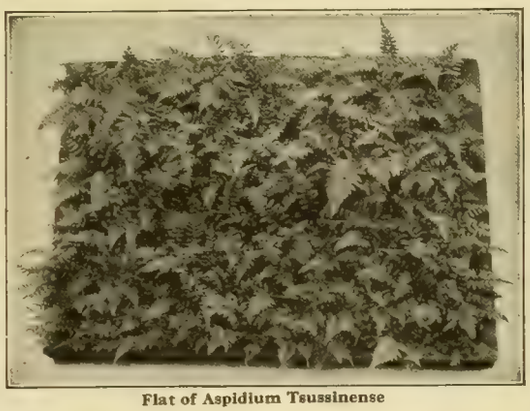
PROTECT YOURSELF NOW FOR DISH FERNS

For the Coming Fall and Winter



Flat of Aspidium Tsussinense

We say "PROTECT YOURSELF NOW," this is meant as a fair warning as we shall be obliged, in order to CONSERVE BOTH FUEL AND LABOR, to greatly reduce our usual supplies of potted Ferns for the coming Winter. There will not be enough to go around hence the above suggestion.

We are in position at the present time to supply the varieties noted below in excellent shape for present potting, in flats of about two hundred plants each, at $2.00 per flat.

Note: This is the old price which has ruled for more than a quarter of a century, there has been no advance.

ADIANTUM Cuneatum	PTERIS Distinction
ASPIDIUM Tsussinense	PTERIS Magnifica
CYRTOMIUM Rochfordianum	PTERIS Multiceps
ONYCHIUM Japonicum	PTERIS Ouvrardii
PTERIS Adiantoides	PTERIS Rivertoniana
PTERIS Alexandriæ	PTERIS Wilsonii
PTERIS Cretica Albo Lineata	PTERIS Wimsetti

Any of the above varieties at $2.00 per flat. We cannot supply less than a full flat of a variety.

We also offer a limited stock of ADIANTUM Hybridum, CYRTOMIUM Rochfordianum Compactum in flats at $3.00 per flat.

DISH FERNS FOR PRESENT USE

We have a fine lot of choice varieties now ready to send out, from 2¼ in. pots, at $5.00 per 100, $40.00 per 1000; 250 or more will be supplied at 1000 rates.

The above prices are intended for the trade only.

An Attractive Gardenia

A vase of 12 blooms of Gardenia Boufbigioli, staged by Richard Gardner, at the Horticultural Society's monthly show for July, attracted considerable attention, and is considered to be quite an acquisition by the trade. In size the blooms rank with the better known G. grandiflora; the petals, however, instead of incurving are reflexed, giving a flat flower. It is a good keeper if cut before fully open and kept in water in a cool place for 48 hours before using. The chief value of the variety is that it can be flowered during the Winter, and in the Spring months—setting buds freely in November, which the grandiflora positively refuses to do. Two year old plants Mr. Gardner claims produce the finest bloom.

Practical Landscape Gardening

ROBT. B. CRIDLAND

Never has any technical book been so heartily appreciated by florists and nurserymen. Read what W. F. Webb of the Guaranty Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y., said of it:

"I have looked this book through carefully and it seems to me that it fills a long felt want which our salesmen would appreciate. While it is true that not all nursery salesmen may be able to grasp the essence of this book, still it is the exceptional men who really do want to learn what there is to landscape gardening and who lay the foundations to our business. I would like to be able to furnish every man on my force with one of these books. It is the best book on the subject I have ever seen and I try to keep familiar with all the literature published on landscape gardening."

Second Edition Just Fresh From Our Presses

Magnificently illustrated with 91 photographic reproductions—pictures which teach—67 sketches and 33 plans with planting keys. The book is not only at your command for the information desired, but it is as well a splendid book to interest your customers in. It encourages them to buy your products, for they feel they must emulate at least some of the good landscape features they see scattered so freely throughout its 266 pages. Postpaid, by mail, $1.90

dead, or if the latter be true that Lieut. Conheeny's brother, Corporal A. B. Conheeny, who soon sails for France, may be given an opportunity to avenge his death.

The monthly show of the Horticultural Society was poorly attended. With such hot weather people did not care to be indoors. ALEX. MACLELLAN.

Worcester, Mass.

A visit to the various flower shops found them busy with funeral work; the florists all report business for July as much better than a year ago. The store windows are unusually attractive, and prove a big drawing card, although transient business is of course rather quiet.

In the Service

Among the employees of Worcester florists only two have been called in the draft and there has been the same number of enlistments. The cases of one or two other prominent florist clerks are being looked into on the new ruling under the "work or fight" order, but thus far no changes have been made.

Flower Show

The first of the monthly exhibitions of the Worcester County Hort. Society was held on Thursday, Aug. 1, from 2:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. In spite of the hot and wet weather the previous shows of the society this season have been excellent. The attendance also has been larger than ever before, many war gardeners coming to see how the experienced grower is progressing with his crops.

Fighting the Aphis

The green aphis has obtained a strong hold on the Potato crop throughout Worcester County, and every effort is being made to keep it in check. So much spraying has been done that it is almost impossible to obtain any Tobacco stems, Nikoteen or "Black Leaf Forty." Leonard C. Midgley, supervisor of war gardens, is kept busy day and night answering questions regarding the aphis.

As there are several new growers of outdoor flowers bringing their blooms into the market, there seems to be no shortage of blooms at present. Flowers are of good quality and variety. Asters are excellent. Carnations are in small supply, at $1.50 per 100; Roses 75c. to $5; Sweet Peas 25c. to 35c.; Asters $1 and $1.50; Gladioli $1 to $2.50. Besides the sorts named several varieties of outdoor flowers are offered, ranging in price from 25c. to $1.50 per 100; these help out greatly in funeral work. F. L. M.

Solving the Express Problem

There are at least two florists who have solved the problem of shipping, now in such unsatisfactory condition. The Blind Floral Co. and F. G. Hinkel & Bro., both of Pittsburgh, are shown in the photo, just ready to leave the greenhouses of J. L. Schiller, Toledo, Ohio, with their supply of Primula obconica, using their pleasure cars for the purpose; if ever shipments arrived in good condition at destination it will be theirs. They had special boxes made at home, deep enough to suit the purpose, and which fitted snugly in the back part of their cars. These are plainly visible in the photo, and contain several thousands of Primula obconica, from 2in. and 3in. pots, and there was room for more.

They left Pittsburgh in the early morning, arriving in Toledo in the evening; called up Schiller in the morning to have the plants picked and wrapped, and they were ready to leave at 2 p.m. to go to Cleveland to add to their express matter.

A sure way of getting plants in good condition, even if expensive, but these gentlemen had a lot of fun as well out of their trip.

The gentleman in front of the first car is Mr. Hinkel, the one in front of the second car is Mr. Blind. The others are relatives and friends, who shared the pleasure and the work.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

Milford J. Beneke, son of J. J. Beneke, St. Louis, Mo., has left to train at Jefferson Barracks.

Fred B. McClunie of Hartford, Conn., with the 36th Company, 154th Depot Brigade, Camp Meade, Md., is in officers' training school. He is a former military man of the old State militia and should make a good officer.

Raymond MacDonald and Francis Moran, both members of the Scranton (Pa.) Florists' Club joined the Colors recently.

J. A. Thode, Washington, D. C., is now a lieutenant in the United States Army. Mr. Thode wrote the article which appeared in our issue of June 29, entitled "A Decalogue for Flower and Plant Growers."

Rudolph Pontrich of Louisville, Ky., was recently sent to Camp Taylor for training. He is the third of the Pontrich brothers to enter the army, and before going into the service was in the florists' business with his brother Simon.

Gillespie Kuhlmann, brother of H. H. Kuhlmann, Jr., and associated with him in the Kuhlmann Floral Co., Houston, Tex., has left to join the Navy of Uncle Sam. Another brother, Lawrence, is already in the Army.

The proprietors of the Chicago ave. Greenhouses, St. Paul, Minn., have been called to the Colors and are seeking to lease their plant during their absence.

Max Bernstein, who has been at the Co-operative Flower Market, Boston, Mass., for eight years, has joined the Colors, and is now at Camp Devens.

"Cited for bravery over there" is Paul T. Hurley, son of Joseph D. Hurley of Ardmore, Pa. Paul T. Hurley is in the American Marines and was mentioned with two other marines who, armed with an automatic rifle, by a fearless dash into the open during the present fighting in the Marne sector, surprised an enemy machine gun battery, silenced it and held off German re-inforcements until their own patrol had reached safety.

M. C. Midgley of Worcester, Mass, a former correspondent for THE EXCHANGE, is doing aviation construction work in France, where he arrived last October. He belongs to the 465th Aero Squadron. His cousin, William Midgley, also of Worcester, is in the Medical corps stationed at Camp Merritt, N. J.

John Smith, of Samuel Smith's Sons, doing business at Newport and Jamestown, R. I., left for Camp Devens.

Corporal A. B. Conheeny, Newport, R. I., soon will sail for France. His brother, Lieut. Gerald Conheeny, after 12 months in the trenches and prior cavalry service, was recently reported as missing.

Peter A. Troiano, for four years with Geo. G. McClunie, florist, Hartford, Conn., has joined the Navy.

Sergeant David Thom recently wrote his late employer, Roman J. Irwin, wholesale seedsman and plantsman of New York City, that he has arrived "over there."

Fritz Bahr, Highland Park, Ill., writes that his son Fritz has been returned to the Presidio (San Francisco), with an injured eye, due to a defective gas mask. Fritz Bahr, Jr., is serving with the 160th California Infantry.

J. J. Thomas, for several years on the sales force of the H. M. Sanborn Co., Oakland, Cal., is in the U. S. Coast Defense Service. He is stationed at Vancouver, Wash.

Appeal for Plants for Camp Upton

We are in receipt of a communication from Lieut.-Col. J. E. Abbott, Group Headquarters, 152d Depot Brigade, Camp Upton, N. Y., making a request for flowers and plants, the desire being to beautify the grounds around several of the buildings at Camp Upton.

Lieut.-Col. Abbott would be glad indeed to hear from growers willing to help along the endeavor. While this appeal is made rather late in the season, when growers will likely have disposed of or thrown away much surplus stock, if there is any available material, we can assure our readers that Lieut.-Col. Abbott will much appreciate their donations of flowering plants or shrubs at the present time. Outside of bedding stock, probably the most effective gift just now would be that of evergreens.

Wants to Greet Soldiers Overseas

Our good friend, J. S. Brunton, managing director of the Horticultural Trade Journal, Burnley, Eng. (near London), writes us that he will be pleased to meet American and Canadian soldiers or sailors going abroad, formerly connected with the florist, seed or nursery lines, and to be of any asistance to them that is possible, or simply to have a pleasant chat together. He will be glad to visit in hospitals near London such of the boys in the trade as may be laid up there. Mr. Brunton's telephone is 309 Burnley; direct telegrams (from London) Hortus, Burnley.

Exciting Experience

Malcolm G. Blackwell, son of F. L. Blackwelll, florist of New Bedford, Mass., had a thrilling experience recently when the U. S. Cruiser San Diego, on which he was a gun pointer, went down off Fire Island. Young Blackwell was three hours in the water, clinging to a life raft before he was rescued. He saved his money but lost his equipment. He is now at the home of his uncle in New York City, and is expected home on a furlough any day.

FRED REYNOLDS.

Mailing Yourself Money

Every time you stick a Thrift or War Savings Stamp on your card you are mailing money to yourself to be received later with interest. Cashing in these stamps is going to be better than "getting money from home," for with the money comes the reminder that you contributed to the great victory which then will have been completely won.

Clubs and Societies

Westchester (N. Y.) and Fairfield (Conn.) Horticultural Society

The regular monthly meeting was held in Hubbard's Hall, Greenwich, Conn., Friday evening, July 12. There was a large attendance, with President P. W. Popp in the chair. The chief feature of the evening was an illustrated lecture by a representative of the Bell Telephone Co.

W. J. Seeley reported that all arrangements are made for the outing and games which will take place at Lawrence's Inn, Mamaroneck, N. Y., on Tuesday, August 6. Sports will start at 11 A. M., dinner 2 P. M. Tickets can be had from Mr. Seeley, Byram Shore, Portchester, N. Y.

The sympathy of the members was extended to Joe Manda whose son is wounded in France. Mr. Manda gave a short address.

The judges for the evening were Messrs. Marshall, MacAllister, Aitchison and W. Wert. There were 20 entries for six varieties of vegetables. While the judges were going over the numerous exhibits Mr. Strange gave some lively selections on the piano. Vegetable awards: 1, W. Graham; 2, C. Duncan; 3, J. Stuart; 4, R. Grunert; 5, P. W. Popp. Heamanthus, King Albert from P. W. Popp, first prize; vase of Lilum Regale from R. Williamson, second; vase of Lilum Regale from J. Stuart, 3.

George Baldwin, Oscar Addor and committee received a hearty vote of thanks for their efforts in making the Summer show at Mamaroneck a success. Following is the list of prize winners at Mamaroneck: Vase of Roses.—1, J. MacAllister; 2, J. J. Linane. 12 blooms of Roses.—1, James Stuart. Collection of hardy flowers, 18 distinct species—1, J. Stuart; 2, W. Graham; 3, J. Linane. Collection of hardy flowers, nine distinct species. 1, R. Williamson; 2, W. Smith; 3, F. Metzler. Vase of Iris.—1, F. Metzler; 2, John Orr. Vase of hardy flowers, one variety.—1, W. Graham; 2, J. Andrews. Collection of flowering shrubs, 10 varieties.-1, J. Linane; 2, A. Brown. Collection of cut orchid flowers, arranged for effect.—1. J. Stuart. Basket of Sweet Peas—1, A Smith. Vase of Sweet Peas.—1 A. Smith. Two specimen palms.—1, A. Brown; 2, J. Stuart. Specimen Palm—1, J. Stuart. Two Specimen Hydrangeas. —1, T. Ryan. Whitton. 50 pods Strings Beans.—1, J. Stuart; 2, J. Andrews.

For a display of Iris, Lilies and Eremurus, John Scheepers, Inc., New York, received a certificate of Merit; Collection of orchids from George Baldwin, certificate of Merit; display of hardy flowers from P. W. Popp, certificate of Merit; an exhibition of vegetables from P. W. Popp, cultural certificate; display of Gloxinias from P. W. Popp, Cultural certificate.

Table decoration.—1, A Brown; 2, C. Duncan; 3, J. Lough. The judges were G. MacKenzie, Huntington, L. I., James Smith, White Plains, N. Y., Joseph Mooney, Hastings, N. Y. The prizes were presented to the successful exhibitors by Oscar Addor.

Jack Conroy,
Corr. Sec.

Nassau Co. (N. Y.) Hort. Society

The regular monthly meeting of this Society was held in Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., on Wednesday, July 10, 7 p.m President Robt. Jones occupied the chair before a well attended meeting. There was an excellent display of flowers and vegetables on the exhibition tables. Rocco Cerrullo, Glen Cove, was elected an active member and two petitions were received.

The judges appointed for the monthly exhibits were S. J. Trepess, Robt. Angus and F. H. Meech. The awards were as follows: Six Tomatoes, 1, John W. Everett; 25 String Beans, 1, Frank Petroccia. 25 pods of Peas, 1, Frank Petroccia.

There was on exhibition a fine collection of Stocks (20 vases), from Thos. Twigg, well worthy of the cultural certificate awarded it. An excellent collection of vegetables, 12 varieties, exhibited by Frank Petroccia, was awarded a certificate of culture; six Cauliflower awarded honorable mention to Ernest Westlake; four heads of Lettuce, thanks of the society, to Arthur Smith; three heads of Lettuce, thanks of the society, to A. J. Young; three heads of Lettuce, honorable mention to Ernest Westlake; collection of Sweet Peas, honorable mention to Harry Jones; collection of Sweet Peas, honorable mention to Ernest Westlake; eight heads of Lettuce, honorable mention to Louis Hubbard; vase of Gladioli, honorable mention to Louis Hubbard.

It was decided to hold the Dahlia show on Wednesday, Oct. 2, and the Chrysanthemum show on Thursday, Oct. 31, and Friday, Nov. 1.

Thos. Twigg, upon request, gave a short talk on his method of growing Stocks, which proved very interesting. Mr. Holloway read an extremely interesting letter he had just received from Henry Gaut, one of our members in the Service abroad.

Competition for our next monthly meeting to be held on Wednesday, Aug. 14, at 7 p. m., six ears of Corn, 12 Gladioli and 25 pods Lima Beans.

HARRY GOODBAND, Corr. Sec'y

EGGERTSVILLE, N. Y.—Rudolph Boettger, grower, recently had a serious accident during a visit to Buffalo. While holding a bunch of Lilies in his arm, he took a knife from his pocket to cut the string which held them. The knife accidentally slipped and cut his nose. Seven stitches were required.

Evergreens for City Gardens

As compared with the wealth of plant life to be found the untrammeled country districts, we are confronted with decided limitations in plants adapted for city gardens. In a two-fold sense are we narrowed down in our choice. First, from the fact that space does not permit of a large collection. Second, the environment is not conducive to the health of the majority of plants.

It is conceded then that a city does not afford ideal conditions for plant life of any kind. Especially does this relate to that section of plants which comes under the caption of evergreens. More difficulty is experienced in the successful establishment of these plants than any other. Several reasons can be advanced for this, but chief among the many causes for failure are:

The intense heat of Summer, together with the absence of pure air.

Insufficient humidity.

The constant deposit of dirt and soot on the plants.

Many of our strong growing shade trees find it no easy matter to stand the heat of July and August, heat made more intense by cement pavements and brick walls. With evergreen it is still more trying, for if there is one thing more than another they crave and enjoy it is a cool, humid atmosphere. When we consider for a moment that a great many of them hail from a region where moisture abounds at least nine months in the year, and again compare the conditions to which they are subjected in cities, we can little wonder at the woebegone appearance some of them present.

It is not the object of these notes, however, to discourage the use of evergreens but rather to bring out some points which will come directly under the writer's notice that will lead to a more wise and discriminate selection. From personal observation of these plants growing under city conditions we are convinced that the broad-leaved type are by far the best, in fact, are quite successful.

In this section will be found but few of the conifers, for these have proven more or less a failure, especially those of closely crowded foliage like Arborvitæ, Juniper, Japanese Cedars and the like. These, while they may be able to stand the heat and lack of humidity quite as well as the broad-leaved kinds, fall a more easy victim to the evils of dirt and soot. This constant deposit (resulting from the smoke of mills and manufacturing plants, together with the many thousands of dwelling houses) sets securely among the finely divided foliage, forming eventually an impervious coat that corrodes the breathing pores of the plant, giving it a sickly appearance, and finally resulting in its death.

Broad-leaved evergreens, on the other hand, usually have a smooth and shining leaf on which the dirt and soot suspended in the air find difficulty in securing permanent lodgment. Heavy rains can also more readily cause the leafage of any foreign matter, while, if necessary, an occasional recourse to the garden hose will speedily and effectively dislodge the evil and give the plant that same comfortable feeling a human would experience after a good shower bath.

In giving the following list of plants we do so with a firm assurance of attaining a good amount of success with them.

List No. 1.

*Buxus arborescens, Tree Box. *Buxus rotundifolia, Round-leaved Box. *Buxus sempervirens, Common Box-bush. *Ilex crenata, Japanese Holly. *Ilex aquifolia, English Holly.

*Osmanthus aquifolius, Holly leaved Olive.

Mahonia japonica, Evergreen Barberries. Mahonia aquifolia, Evergreen Barberries.

Sciadopitys verticillata, Japanese Umbrella Pine.

Taxus baccata, English Yew. Taxus cuspidata, Japanese Yew.

*Ligustrum lucidum, Japanese evergreen Privet. *Ligustrum japonicum, Japanese evergreen Privet.

*Euonymus japonica, evergreen Euonymus. *Euonymus japonica aurea, evergreen Euonymus. *Euonymus Sieboldianus, evergreen Euonymus. *Euonymus vegetus, evergreen Euonymus.

*Aucuba japonica.

Prunus Laurocerasus, Cherry Laurel. Prunus Laurocerasus Schipkaensis, Cherry Laurel.

Yucca filamentosa, Adam's Needle.

*Abelia grandiflora.

Bambusa metake, hardy Bamboo. Bambusa pygmæa, hardy Bamboo.

*Pachysandra terminalis, Japanese Spurge.

All of the foregoing will thrive in any good and well prepared garden soil. Those marked with an asterisk (*) are readily increased from cuttings of half ripened wood during the Summer. Some of them are slow, perhaps, in making salable plants, but the nurseryman and florist with good propagating facilities can soon work up a large stock of them and so be independent of importations in a more or less degree.

An Evergreen Planting in the Heart of a Great City

The last two mentioned in the list are exceptionally good as a carpeting for higher growing plants or for a ground cover in shaded positions where grass fails to grow. The Pachysandra is usually placed among herbaceous perennials, but so cheerfully green does it maintain its foliage throughout the year that we do not hesitate to class it among evergreens.

Supplementary List.

Rhododendron maximum, native Rhododendrons. Rhododendron catawbiense, native Rhododendrons.

Rhododendron, English hybrids.

Azalea indica alba, Asiatic and Japanese Azalea. Azalea amœna, Asiatic and Japanese Azalea. Azalea Hino-de-giri, Asiatic and Japanese Azalea. Azalea Kaempferi, Asiatic and Japanese Azalea.

Andromeda japonica, Japanese Fetter-bush. Andromeda floribunda, American Fetter-bush. Leucothoe Catesbæi, American Fetter-bush.

We have purposely placed these in a supplementary list for the reason that, being all of the ericaceous group, they will require a special soil and situation. The soil should be well drained, should contain a large percentage of humus in the form of leaf mold, if possible, and be free from the presence of lime. A semi-shaded position will be better suited to them than the full glare of the sun.

For points north and south of Philadelphia, the above lists must necessarily undergo modification to fit climatic conditions. For southern cities we could avail ourselves of many other beautiful broad-leaved evergreens not permissible in the North.

The bold and striking foliage of these plants give a truly beautiful setting to a city residence and fit in so well with the architectural features of the house. Of course, such plantings are far more costly in the initial outlay than the old reliable Geranium, Canna, Begonia, or other temporary fillers, but the question of dollars and cents is hardly ever raised when the desire for certain effects has been realized and becomes a lasting satisfaction.

Our illustration shown herewith is a portion of a planting situated right in the busy mart of the city of Philadelphia and presents unmistakable evidence of what may be effected on similar properties. This planting is now past the experimental stage, having gone through some ten Summers and Winters of heat and cold, and, as portrayed, is well preserved and, like an oasis in the desert, is most refreshing to both body and spirit.

Free the Nursery from Insect Pests

Nurseries by reason of the multitudinous assortment of plants must necessarily offer an attractive feeding ground to the many insect pests, all of which have their favorite host plants. Despite this, however, the nursery is not the breeding ground which some authorities would infer. The State inspector and the nurserymen are always on the alert to discover and give short shrift to any injurious insect which dares to rear her brood. This is more than can be said of many private orchards and estates, where ofttimes a plague will continue to exist and send forth its contaminating influences unmolested owing to the indifference of the owner who refuses, by reason of the expense or otherwise, to apply a remedy for suppression of the evil.

The nursery employee who would have his employer show a clean bill of health can do much to aid him by not alone observing but seeking to find insects, old and new. If the latter consult an entomologist for they may turn out to be quite detrimental. This practice, aside from helping the "boss," is the finest kind of experience and training. To better combat the insect pests a study of their life cycles is essential and this leads to most interesting developments.

Several years ago the writer had a mania for corralling all suspicious bugs found on the nursery and kept the authorities busy identifying scale insects particularly. It was while looking for these pests, or anything else likely to prove injurious to nursery stock, that an infected White Pine, which was subsequently identified as the "blister rust," was discovered. Its deadliness was not so generally known in those days as it is today and, while the Government asked at the time for additional specimens, they could not be found. Who knows, therefore, but what the chance discovery and destruction of that single plant may have been the means of preventing the inroads in this vicinity of the blister rust which now threatens our New England forests?

Summer stock-taking affords an excellent time to visit every nook and corner of the nursery and lest some deadly enemy lurks on your very threshhold unawares keep your eyes open and not only observe but look for suspicious insects or fungi.

SAMUEL NEWMAN BAXTER.

There is no better time than RIGHT NOW to take up the study of landscape gardening, and it is fortunate indeed that such a book as Cridland's is obtainable for, on account of its simple explanations of details and its devotion to the requisites of small properties, it is of far greater value to the average nurseryman and florist than the usual "heavy" books on the same subject. Cridland's is obtainable from THE EXCHANGE office for $1.90, delivery postpaid.

Flowers Feed the Soul

The beauty of a flower is never lost; like good and truth it is indestructible, and it never fails to perform its function in the world. Let us have lofty ideals; let us have flowers.

The "Ninth Story Window" is sorely missed by the majority of our readers, especially these days when it would be a relief to turn for a minute to so entertaining a feature as was provided there by our late editor. Have we not a Scotsman among us able and willing to furnish jest, criticism and an amusing story or two, each week, and so keep the column going? Even an Irishman or a Frenchman might be capable. Who will volunteer?

New York State Fuel Administration

Chas. E. Robertson, of the State Advisory Board of the National Fuel Administration, has declined to serve as a deputy fuel administrator under the new appointee, Delos W. Cooke, whose address, by the way in case any reader should require it, is 61 Broadway, N. Y. City.

The Purchase Side of the Stock Book

Constant efforts are being made to improve the value of our Seed Trade Dept. Co-operation from seedsmen will help, too. This issue Nemo furnishes in that column some valuable pointers in an article on "The Half Yearly Clean-up Inventory," to which he adds a form for the "Purchase side of the stock book" that will be found of value to many seedsmen who are not above taking good advice when they see it, hear it or read it.

Practical Generosity

When a doer of good works does not make public his benefactions and they become unintentionally known, one feels inclined to give commendation of the highest type. Through questioning a representative of the firm of Hicks Nurseries, Westbury, L. I., we learn that army trucks from Camp Mills have called almost daily at the nurseries and carted away trees and shrubs, with the result that several of the hostess houses and other camp buildings have taken on a considerably brightened appearance on account of the planting of this refreshing greenery around these buildings at the cantonment. We are sure that others, after hearing this, will give the Hicks Nurseries commendation for this practical assistance to the undoubted morale of our soldier boys in camp.

Japan Lily Bulbs

An important item appears in our Chicago Seed Trade notes to the effect that Seitaro Aria, one of the largest and most responsible dealers in Lily bulbs in Japan, is in Washington where he will make an appeal to the War Board on behalf of the growers of that country in the endeavor to have the embargo lifted.

Should the War Board relent and allow the bulbs to come in, it is considered to be too late for the L. formosum to be of value for Easter crops as they could not be raised in time, but L. giganteum, which ordinarily arrives in this country beginning with October, would be of use for Easter as usual.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Aria's efforts will be crowned with success. Representing the needs of an ally his appeal will, without doubt, at least command a sympathetic ear from the Washington authorities and bring about the desired result if at all practicable.

Stop these Erroneous Reports

May we suggest to the Publicity Committee of the S. A. F. and O. H. that it would be to the interest of the trade generally if steps were taken by it to counteract as far as possible the impression which is being spread by at least some daily papers in various parts of the country to the effect that the florist trade is in an extremely bad way and that flowers this Winter and for the coming Easter will be produced at the best in negligible quantities due to coal restriction.

Old Sol to the Rescue

Scientists tell us that every day the sun emits sufficient heat to melt a block of ice 5000 feet thick and the size of the State of Massachusetts. Which is quite interesting news, indeed. We wonder just what the equivalent to this heat would be, expressed in tons of good Pennsylvania anthracite.

If the scientists would devote time to the deflection of some of this heat energy so that it could be stored up and made of service to run furnaces—florists' furnaces for instance, we are quite sure there would be no objection raised, particularly in a week of torrid temperature such as we have just been put through.

Some of the dreams of our earlier and more sanguine days have come true, and we still cherish the idea that before many years, in chill October, we'll say, florist John Smith will order the night man to turn on the sun heat a bit, just enough to keep the houses comfy. Why not? In Arizona, we are credibly informed, the warm water for your bath is furnished direct from the sun's rays, caught on a mirror and thrown onto a tank; crude, perhaps, but nevertheless furnishing the necessary media wherewith to remove from the human body the alkali deposit of the day.

While we may, in our years to come, be still able to obtain a 50 per cent. coal allowance, our children's children may have to get along on less. Who said, "We should worry?" Well, "worry" is a natural trait. Or perhaps we might dignify the word by the term, "looking forward to the welfare of posterity." That's what we are doing today, paying half of the expenses of the war cash down so as not to leave too great a burden on posterity.

Just as surely as we have seen the tallow candle supplanted by the oil lamp, the lamp giving way to gas, and this latter in turn to electricity, all of which has come about without disturbing any one's equilibrium, so, some bright morning we will awaken to the knowledge that old King Coal has lost his supremacy and, with that, his importance, and that a new, more effective and more powerful force has superseded it—and, what will afford satisfaction, that it will be much cleaner to handle. And the old world will wag along, serene as ever, but a trifle happier.

So while we fast let us feast—in imagination. It won't hurt; on the contrary it will aid us bear our present day deprivations.

But perhaps this deprivation may not prove as bad as was first generally thought. It begins to look that way. Now that the worst is known the trade shows signs of beginning to recover from the semi-panic in which it has been indulging these past three months or so, and the wise men among them, taking every necessary precaution, forsee the possibility of at least making both ends meet—with a little over for good measure—during the coming period we can best describe in terms of military command: "Fire"—"Ceasefiring."

Screenings for Pennsylvania Florists

We have it, on the authority of the well-known Lancaster florist, Albert M. Herr, that the Pennsylvania State Fuel Administrator has issued a circular letter in which he authorizes the use of screenings to florists.

Since Pennsylvania is allowed screenings, it would appear within the probabilities that the same permission may be granted to florists in other States, few of which, however, are so favored as Pennsylvania on account of its many local coal mines.

With the end in view of securing the same ruling for florists in other States who are in position to utilize screenings from local yards and at other points where they are in accumulation, we have written to Dr. Garfield, Director of the Fuel Administration, Washington, D. C., and also to Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F. and O. H.

We regret that last week, through oversight, a most important feature of our Chicago letter was omitted, giving further details as to utilization of screenings in that city and vicinity. This paragraph will be found in this issue.

Since writing the above an interesting story has reached us on the Illinois situation. Read this in another column.

And Now to Obtain the Coal

The grower is now free to get his fifty per cent. allowar of coal or, if his consumption has been 40 tons or less annum to secure the full 100% allotment, and in ma States is also privileged to burn slack and screenings wi out imposing on the railroads. The remaining difficu in the way is the transportation problem.

Some growers are becoming afraid because their coal not yet been delivered to them. Others are calling priority shipping facilities which will not be accorded. one State, at least, the supply of coal has been shut entirely for the present. These delays, while by no me pleasant, should not dishearten the florist or cause him relax efforts to get his supply of coal. Henceforth, grower will be very much in the hands of his local f administrator, so it will be well to endeavor to keep on best of terms with these gentlemen. Read letter fr local fuel administrator Williams of Illinois in this colur

Boosting the St. Louis Convention

President Lautenschlager of the Chicago Florists' C has appointed a committee whose duty it is to boost the St. Louis convention of the S. A. F. The commit consists of Paul Klingsporn, chairman; John Michels vice-chairman; W. J. Keimel, T. E. Waters and O Amling. This committee will meet this week and add fr thirty to forty more members so as to fully cover ev branch of the trade and the allied trades as well, and ens the largest attendance possible at the convention. T boosters will urge that every house of importance in trade in Chicago be represented at the convention by or more representatives. President Lautenschlager s it is up to Chicago to send a banner delegation—a c with over two million square feet of glass devoted floriculture should show no half way representati From the interest there is taken in the convention it lo at present as though there will be a large representati from here.

The modification of the fuel order allowing screeni to growers in Illinois and Indiana, and other Sta west of the Mississippi, will in the opinion of Pr Lautenschlager greatly increase the attendance at the cc vention from all these States. This new ruling comes as word of cheer to the trade in this section and enthuses t weak-hearted with renewed determination to make t coming season one of the best in many years. Preside Lautenschlager has mailed to every member of the Floris Club a copy of the letter from the Fuel Administratic allowing growers to use screenings for the full operation their greenhouses., It follows:

Letter to Illinois State Florists

You are hereby informed that permission has be granted by the U. S. Fuel Administration to burn scree ings for the full operation of greenhouses in the State Illinois, and a copy of the order covering the action quoted below:

The Coal (Screenings) Permit

Chicago Florists' Club,
C. L. Washburn, Chairman
Peter Reinburg,
August Poehlmann,
Fuel Committee.

Gentlemen: Answering your letter of July 19th. We ha given consideration to your request for greenhouses to bu screenings for the full operation of their plants.

The Washington order states that such permission may given "with the approval of the Federal Fuel Administrat for its State, may operate to its full capacity by the use screenings, the approval to be withheld where the giving of would impair the fuel supply to manufacturing plants on t War Industries Board's Preference List."

In view of that qualification in the Washington order, have decided that a general permission for the use of scree ings for full operation shall be limited to screenings procur from Central or Northern Illinois mines.

If screenings are desired from Southern Illinois mines su applications must be made to this office, stating the name the mine and the amount of screenings involved, and the matt will receive investigation and attention here. Special p mission will issue if found merited.

J. E. WILLIAMS, Fuel Administrato

It will be noted that the above order does not requ special permit to secure screenings from Central a Northern Illinois mines.

We urge our members to contract for and lay in a fu stock of screenings immediately—Arrange at once wi your coal dealer for complete delivery by Dec. 1, on yo full requirements—Screenings can be safely stored duri the early Fall and Winter months.

A Letter from the Chairman of the St. Louis Entertainment Committee

All delegates are requested to remain over on the fourth day, Friday, Aug. 23, when the florists of St Louis will take care of them hospitably in keeping with present conditions.

Our convention this year, it is true, should and will have more and longer business sessions than any convention we have ever had, and it is the foremost idea in the mind of every member of the S. A. F. and O. H. in this locality to help in every way possible to impress all that the meetings should be well attended. However we felt that a convention is not complete unless there is just a bit of entertainment in some form, but on account of the time being so well taken up the three convention days it behooves us to ask all of our visitors to stay over the fourth day, Friday, Aug. 23, and have one day of entertainment, not an elaborate program, but a pleasant day with entertainment fitting and in keeping with the present conditions.

We aim to adhere to the warnings of the officers of our society and ask every member to attend each meeting session; this will have a tendency to stimulate attendance for future conventions and will show that we are deeply interested and appreciate the work accomplished by our officers and directors in the past year. It is of importance to every florist to know and acquaint himself with the great work being performed by the S. A. F. and O. H.

All of the ladies are invited to attend, even though the three convention days are busy and occupied days for the men. The ladies will be looked after by our local folks and we might add that St. Louis offers a great variety of sightseeing, many points of interest for any sort of an inclination or temperament.

We further add that on the evening of the third convention day, Thursday Aug. 22, the Missouri Botanical Garden will entertain all members and ladies of the S. A. F. and O. H. in the former's gardens.

We once more ask all visitors to stay over the fourth day and take advantage of the opportunity to see everybody, to have that long-wished-for-talk with somebody; in short, to enjoy one day after three days of strenuous business meetings. This will put you into that "Gee, but the Boss must have had a great time at the convention," spirit, when you return home. It's really the after effects of any thing we do that counts. We want you to carry away from St. Louis an impression that will be a pleasant memory to you and a credit to our city.

We welcome you.

ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE,
Frank A. Winder, Chairman.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists

The St. Louis Convention

August 20, 21 and 22

The Program

The program for the Wednesday afternoon session, Aug. 21, has been amended to read as follows:

2.00 p.m.—Report of committee on publicity, by Henry Penn, chairman.
Report of the publicity finance committee, by George Asmus, chairman.
Report of the promotion bureau, by Secretary John Young.
Discussion.
Address: "Publicity," by Major P. F. O'Keefe, Boston Mass.

Under this arrangement, all matters concerning the publicity campaign will be taken up at one session, the whole afternoon being devoted to this very important subject.

The Trade Exhibition

That the trade exhibition will again be an important feature of the annual convention is now practically assured. While exhibitors located at a distance have been forced to consider seriously present conditions of freight transportation, the situation in this respect is sufficiently improved to remove doubt as to the possibility of arrivals on time for the convention dates. The attention of exhibitors wishing to have novelties or improved devices passed upon by the judges is directed to Rule X, which is as follows:

Awards: Exhibitors showing novelties or other improved devices which they wish to have examined by the judges for such special notice or award as they are deemed worthy of, shall make an itemized voucher thereof with the secretary in advance. Firms or corporations desiring their exhibits considered for award, must state the name of a member of the firm or company who is a member of the society. In case any article or device has received an award at a previous S. A. F. exhibition, award shall cover subsequent improvements only. No award will be made covering the quality of seeds, fertilizers, plants and other articles of such a nature on which an intelligent opinion cannot be had without a practical test. None but flower pots conforming to the Society's standards will be considered for award by the judges. No award will be made to exhibitors who are not members of the S. A. F. & O. H.

The following additions to the list of exhibitors have been made:

Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa.
Schloss Bros., Ribbons, Inc., New York City.
Ickes-Braun Mill Co., Chicago, Ill.
Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Inc., Eureka, Cal.

The exhibit of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries Co., which will comprise a collection of home grown bulbs, is directed by Chas. W. Ward, president of the company, to be sold at auction for the benefit of the S. A. F. Red Cross donation.

National Publicity Campaign

The secretary arrived in Portland, Ore., escorted from Tacoma, Wash., by J. B. Pilkington, a prominent member of the Portland Floral Society. Although his hour of arrival was near to midnight, James Forbes, representing the Portland craft, was at the station to meet him and conducted him to his hotel. Next day he was, under good guardianship, introduced to the florists' trade of Portland and vicinity, among whom he secured a number of new members for the society, and some substantial subscriptions to the publicity fund; several who had already subscribed doubled their subscriptions. He feels deeply indebted to the Portland florists for many courtesies extended, particularly to Mr. Forbes who, without encroachment upon travel time, was especially interested in seeing that the visitor had the opportunity to view the great Columbia Highway, the park system, the shipyards and other local places of interest—E. J. Steele, president of the Portland Floral Society, A. J. Clarke and J. B. Pilkington. The Portland Floral Society is a very much alive organization, and held a special meeting to welcome the secretary, at which about 50 were present, who evinced keen interest in the campaign, and in the work of the society. A most enjoyable banquet was served in a manner typical of the hosts, whose open-hearted welcome the secretary will long remember. From Portland he journeyed to San Francisco, again under the care of Mr. Pilkington who probably was expected to see his charge safely out of Oregon.

In San Francisco the secretary received many courtesies at the hands of S. A. F. Director Angelo Rossi, who was anxious that the visitor should meet with as much success as possible in our old convention city. To Hans Plath, Daniel MacRorie and Eric James he desires to express hearty thanks for assistance given him, particularly in journeying to surrounding towns. Interest in the campaign appeared to be quite lively in San Francisco, and some good contributions to the campaign fund resulted.

The time is drawing near when a general report covering the publicity campaign and the campaign fund must be made. A whole afternoon has been set apart in the St. Louis convention program for a discussion of publicity work, and the attendance promises to be large. At this time the subscription records will be presented, and all who have "done their bit" will share in the honor of having their assistance eulogized by an assembly which will be composed of men prominent in all branches of the trade.

Mr. Nonsubscriber: Can you, should you, allow your name to be absent from this roll of honor? Just think over the matter in the week to come. There is time yet for you to help swing this campaign fund over the point set for it before the date of meeting, and with your assistance the good work already accomplished may be continued over a period which, without the benefit assuredly to result, it might be hard for our industry to bridge. Never was publicity for flowers more needed; never could your support be more timely than now.

A professional gardener, commenting on the fact that he was much impressed with our desire and intention to give more space to nursery subjects, adds: "I fear, however, it may be hard to get some florists to maintain 'an acre or so.' If they would co-operate, and go in for distinction, rather than monotony, the field is limitless."

To strike the attention of the prospective customer or visitor, monotony is certainly to be avoided, but this can easily be accomplished by setting apart a portion of the show grounds for individual specimens; one or two of a kind, say of 15 and up different trees and shrubs, would certainly give a varying aspect throughout the entire season, affording agreeable contrasts and view lines.

Can We Have Asiatic Labor on American Farms?

Touching the question of importing Oriental farm labor to work on the depleted man-power of the American farming community, much water of varying tints and flavors has passed under the bridge since Chinese exclusion became a fact through an Act of Congress in 1879; our "views" have somewhat softened and, certainly, economic conditions during the past few years have undergone an upheaval which is still active. For nearly 20 years keen observers have realized that the labor problem on farms was far from satisfactory. The tendency in the past has been for the young men to desert agricultural pursuits for the more alluring inducements of the professions, mercantile and manufacturing occupations. In a degree this has been due to the depressed years of 1900-'12; when products of orchard and field ruled low and the growers' profits were correspondingly slender; something may also be said in criticism of the treatment of farm labor on many ranches on this Coast, such as bad housing, poor sanitation and inferior accommodations, cheap living, etc. Then, again, ranch labor in California is migratory and uncertain—first, there is the grain crop, followed by deciduous fruit harvests and, finally, in the Winter months, we have the citrus fruits to care for. This all is seasonal and sectional work, carrying the labor from one district to another as needed—all producing a spirit of unrest and irresponsibility which renders labor unreliable. With the advent of the war this has been materially changed. Farming and orcharding has suddenly come into possession of its own. Prices have soared and profits are correspondingly better. Naturally, wages have also increased, but with the best man power called into the war there has suddenly come a sharp shortage of reliable help—a condition that has been growing acute for some years, but which (with the advent of the war) has at once become painful to the danger point. To relieve this, what can be done?

Before entering into a discussion it might be well to consider some of the conditions that are looming large on the industrial horizon. Chief of these is the dominant fact that organized labor during the past decade has not only realized its strength, but it has learned how to use it. In England and America it wields a potent influence that demands a hearing. One of its features is a strong opposition to the importation of Oriental labor, though it be for only the period of the war. So pronounced is this that no legislative body, either State or Federal, is liable to put upon the statute books any measures looking to a letting down of the bars. The other fact is that the Administration, having pledged itself that during the war present relations between employers and employees shall not be disturbed, renders for the time being all effort to secure Chinese labor at best abortive and hazardous. To the mind of the writer no legislative

Economical Problems Confronting the Florist

THE SOONER SOME OF US WAKE UP THE BETTER FOR US

By FRITZ BAHR

Brought about by present day conditions and a lifelong knowledge and acquaintance with all kinds of florists, the writer has sent us these thoughts on the problems of the war as they affect the florists' industry now and in the future, and while he lays some of his blows on with a sledge hammer, and while there may exist, unfortunately, a florist here and there who will fit Mr. Bahr's impeachment to a "T" in practically all of its parts, there still exists too large a class, either careless or indifferent to the future so long as the present day takes care of itself, and it is in the endeavor to awaken this class out of its lethargy into a sense of the realities of life, and to the changes which must be brought about in the old-style method of conducting business that Fritz Bahr exerts himself—to save these from going down and out. There are few of us indeed who do not need some good advice at the present time. We are apt to be strong on some points and weak on others; the effort of all should be to become 100% efficient in every direction having to do with the carrying on of business in the endeavor to conform to the new conditions which are rapidly overtaking us.

Especially is this so in the matter of credits, for there is no disguising the fact that what is taking place in the cities is going to extend to all parts of the land, and the first step in the line of reform is going to be the very considerable curtailing of the credits which formerly extended all the way from three months to a year, and then all too often were further extended—a great detriment generally to those to whom the extension was granted, inasmuch as it caused them to close their eyes to their own existing financial conditions and in many cases simply lulled them into fancied security when, as a matter of fact, they were already on the rocks.

We are in it and right in the midst of it—the most terrible war of all ages. Some of us even now can't realize the full meaning and the seriousness of the struggle. Humanity is in to free itself from the yoke of autocracy, the chains of which have been dragged along for many centuries.

Irresistible forces making for ultimate advancement of man have thrown millions of innocent people out of what we now realize was a state of peace and prosperity into a horrible conflict where hundreds of thousands on both sides are sacrificed, and as many more maimed for life, untold agony and indescribable misery following on the heels of the foe's advancing soldiery. An awful price to pay, yet apparently necessary to make this world a better plane to dwell upon for this and the generations to come.

The outcome of the present war will not only result in the doing away of those who can make a recurrence of this slaughter of lives possible, but it is bound to revolutionize a lot of other things and, among them, present business methods, which, from the viewpoint of a trade paper must be of interest and timely for its readers to consider.

No one will be foolish enough to assume that after this war conditions on earth will be ideal or perfect to live in. Greater problems than ever will confront us and when, in turn, man has overcome these still greater ones will loom up—the struggle is never ending. In the meantime and in the immediate future those living and in business will have to face new conditions and requirements, will have to adjust themselves and their affairs to this change of front or drop out of the race.

The Advancement of Floriculture During the Past Fifty Years

The florist business and its different branches have evolved in the past fifty years from a mere nothing to truly gigantic proportions. Out of the little sash houses heated by the brick flue, its owner barely existing, and hardly considered the equal of the shoemaker or baker of the town, the modern greenhouse with unheard of proportions, and the establishments with a million square feet of glass, have been developed. Trade papers and organizations have sprung up to further the interests of those in the business. The highest priced stores in the largest cities are none too good to offer our products in. Many florists have taken an active interest in public affairs and have held and are holding important offices. So have we kept abreast of modern times, and yet there are thousands who have stood apparently still and, if one wants to take enough trouble to dig below the very surface, against a comparatively small group of firms conducting their business on sound principles and according to uptodate modern methods, we find an altogether too large a percentage getting along in the old slipshod way.

Economic conditions are apt to either make or break a man as well as a nation. What thrift, system and thoroughness have accomplished to overcome economic problems, most of us are big enough to acknowledge and admire on the part of the people of central Europe and, when once the operation is successfully performed which will relieve and cure them of some of their "Divine right ruler Carbuncle," and the rest of the brood associated with a disease of this character, we may look forward to their proving stronger competitors in the world's markets than ever before.

The wiping out of the names of empires, kings and dukedoms makes towards a democracy of the whole universe; it will bring us closer to the rest of the world. The sending over of our boys has already been a factor, but even with the establishment of universal democracy a dream today, but which may come sooner than thought of, commercialism will become more important than ever; who ever excels in it will lead; it's going to be a matter of the survival of the fittest. Commercialism has opened up the darkest and remotest corners of the earth, it has accomplished in a few years what missionaries tried to bring about for centuries, and, after the war, is going to affect the florist more than ever.

The Case of the Backward Florist

Let us step for a minute inside the sanctum sanctorum of a backward florist and behold him as he really is. Here he stands; ever since he started in business he has been complaining about times not being what they ought to be, but in spite of that he has built one house after another, he has a good home and those dependent upon him are well taken care of; in reality, good things have just been wished on him; they have come his way without his looking for them. He works from morning until night, and likes his help to do the same, even on Sunday. He doesn't plan to take time to map out his work or keep a record of what is being accomplished; it is just work away, day in and day out. When he attends the convention he travels like a banker and stops only in the best hotels. He never worries about what people owe him or what he owes them; a few of the main bills and those easily collected, are sent out each month, but as long as he has a few dollars in his pants pocket why bother about collecting more and paying his own debts? His books would do credit to one particularly fond of solving riddles—he doesn't know, or want to know, just what the amount is he really has standing out, nor what he makes use of belonging to his creditors; every once in a while when one of them makes an awful loud noise a grand start is made to collect, but the effort hardly ever lasts more than two days. If the coal man happens to meet him with money he gets without a murmur everything that is coming to him, otherwise he joins the long waiting list. Bills received by mail are apt to find a final resting place in the waste paper basket. Any salesman coming along can get an order out of him, no matter how often he appears, but new ones are preferred. He will buy five to ten times as many bulbs as he has use for or can handle if he considers them a bargain. He has never made a nickel out of his Rose house but takes pleasure in buying the sulphur to keep the mildew down; he loses a little on every 10c. Geranium he sells, but never found it worth while to figure out just what it actually cost him to produce the plants. He never tried to offer anything in the bedding plant line outside of Geraniums, Cannas and Salvias. Customers ask for pink Geraniums but he has only red ones because that was all he had left over the year before; he even took up the planted out pink stock plants to fill late orders with to make a little extra change and accommodate his patrons. He has call for perennials and other hardy plants, but he is too busy cultivating Asters, little Gem Alyssum and Dahlias, with never a flower on them—he insists on planting crops he can't grow, and buys in the open market stock which he could just as well grow himself and make money on.

He is aware of the fact that every square foot of bench space must bring him at least $1.50 per year, yet he carries a lot of truck not bringing in 10c. per square yard. Instead of co-operating with the other fellow in the town he has made up his mind that he is against him and the only way to get even is to undersell him. He doesn't see the necessity of advertising as long as he sells enough to keep him going.

He takes the position that as long as people want flowers and are willing to hunt him up, what's the use of spending good money to hunt them up? He is perfectly willing to accept $10 for a wreath containing 90c. worth of flowers, but has to be asked three times to pay a dollar and a half for his yearly subscription for the trade paper, for which he really ought to pay $10 for actual value received instead of letting the advertiser do it.

He likes to ride in his $2000 car and pays interest on the notes he owes on it, but can't afford a Ford delivery for his flowers. He rakes the commission house over the coals if it happens to miss a certain train with a little two dollar order for flowers, but makes it an invariable rule to get his funeral order delivered just as they bring the casket out of the house, or the wedding bouquet when they get to kissing the bride. He might consider the advertising a lot of surplus stock fit for the compost heap, cash with order, just to make some one feel bad or, the other way around, what happens to be good when it leaves him will get there bad on account of the miserable packing. But in spite of all of that he does business. People simply insist on patronizing him and will have flowers and plants. He drifts along happy-go-lucky without fear of tomorrow or a day of judgment.

Then came the War, absolutely unexpected, not thought possible in this advanced age of ours with its social development. The very first round has already brought about some financial embarrassments; another term for down and out. More will follow, but others again who profit by the handwriting on the wall are going to pull through, not only to the end of the War and see with it a new era of prosperity but the time coming when it will be demanded of every one of us to adopt a better system of doing business the same as exists today in other lines.

Business Methods We Will All Have Finally to Adopt

About thirty years ago a large manufacturing concern in Chicago made oil stoves as a side line and sold and shipped them all over the world. This branch of their business had been increasing from year to year until one day the boss, after being informed of the wonderful lot of new orders which had just come in, asked the question, "How much actual profit is there really in one of these stoves?" Well, strange to say, there wasn't a soul in the establishment who could tell; at first it seemed rather funny, all they knew was that they were turning out a lot of stoves. A correct record was kept after that and at the completion of six months it was found they had lost in the neighborhood of about $7000 in one year on those stoves for which they had such a brisk demand, and yet this firm was making money, but not in that line. Yes, there happened to be a decided increase in the price of them after that.

To eliminate waste of energy, to produce the maximum of efficiency with the least effort, has to be practiced by every florist from now on and after the War. To adopt system in every branch of his business, to find out exactly what it is actually costing him to produce his stock, to be satisfied with a fair margin of profit, to live according to his income, to adapt a simple but effective bookkeeping system, to get out all bills promptly at the first of the month, to go after all overdue accounts, and to pay his own bills promptly. Also to advertise what is worth advertising and to use the Golden Rule in packing and delivering.

Many of us can get along nicely with fifty per cent. coal if we make up our minds to eliminate fifty per cent. of waste bench space and make up our minds to live according to our income; dealing with people of means is very apt to lead us into imitating them.

In years gone by we didn't notice the little leaks, as was the case with those oil stoves, but we are awakening to the fact that something is wrong; those who haven't as yet, will; there is going to be a whole lot of shaking up right at home, things you never thought of. We are going to sober up, be real earnest, honest with ourselves, more pushing and going after business will be the order of the day. But that isn't enough; you must deliver the goods and not work blindly from day to day just for the sake of watching yourself being busy.

In most cases where it is a matter of a man struggling along, hardly making ends meet, always busy, never a day off, there is usually something wrong with the man, himself; he may not be aware of it but there is no good reason on earth why there shouldn't be a fair margin of profit gotten out of the florist business the same as out of any other. We have enough proof of that through many successful firms, but there are by far a greater number who are practically standing still, as near as this is possible, and right now is the time for such to roll up their sleeves and reconstruct their affairs right from the very bottom up. Do not trust to good luck nor consider the present war as a sort of comic opera; there never was anything more serious and it is up to us to realize it and govern ourselves accordingly.

Have you any Plumbago capensis, the old-fashioned blue sort? An advertiser, asking for this stock recently in our Classified Department, says: "We are unable to buy this anywhere and need a lot of it. All the old firms which formerly had it 'to burn' seem to be sold out." Who wants the order?

Did you know about it? We confess that it was news to us. A. H. Wagland, Lawrence, Mass., when building a show house, so Hitchings & Co. tell us, "had the benches arranged so that they could be taken down readily; so, in the Summer time, when the florist business is dull, Mr. Wagland takes these benches down, installs a soda fountain, tables and chairs, a victrola hidden behind a bank of Ferns, and has a sort of grotto with pool and gold fish in the center. During the hot Summer months he dispenses cooling refreshments which are all the more refreshing because of the attractive setting and arrangement."

We imagine Mr. Wagland is one of those who, because of his alertness, will not be losing much sleep as we pass through these peculiar times.

Can We Have Asiatic Labor on American Farms?

body will even venture to try it during the period of the war; and after the war, what? The labor problem after peace is declared is fraught with consequences quite as serious as any that rural industry is experiencing at the present moment.

In so far as the employing classes in California are concerned there is a general desire that Chinese labor, under restrictive and regulative measures, should be admitted, at least during the period of the war. Col. John P. Irish, of Oakland, gave expression to the views of orchardists and vineyardists at the fiftieth annual convention of fruit growers, held in Sacramento last November, in the following forcible paragraph.

"Our government can get the full measure of its demand upon us (the farmers) by tapping the only available reservoir of farm labor in the world, and that is China. We do not ask for ourselves. We can feed our families and go on as we are doing. It is solely an affair of the government. It is required as the most important measure that has been developed by our bloody and costly adventure. It is an emergency, a crisis. It is a test of courage in our public men, and of patriotism in our people. . . ."

After a full and thorough discussion of the subject, this same convention passed the following resolution:

Whereas, In the season of 1917 just passed, the lack of farm labor at seed time and harvest and in the period of cultivation between, caused serious losses in food production in California; and

Whereas, The shrinkage in the volume of farm labor continues to such an extent as to make certain further and larger losses of food production in 1918; and

Whereas, The Farmers of California desire to do their full patriotic duty to their country and its allies; and

Whereas, They ask that they have access to the dependable man-power to use in that food production which is the chief element in the prosecution of the war to success; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we ask our government, as a war measure, to permit the introduction of sufficient Chinese or other farm labor to so increase our food production as to assist the United States in discharging its obligation to feed our allies and their armies, and prevent them from being starved into surrender.

Resolved, That, in view of the inadequacy of the time at the disposal of this committee for the effective consideration of so important a subject, the convention instructs the appointment by its chairman, the State Commissioner of Horticulture, of a committee of nine to represent this State Fruit Growers' Convention, and instructs the committee to use its best endeavors to bring about a material alleviation of the present shortage of labor, and that the committee be further instructed to take up the subject matter of the above with the proper government authorities.

Much the same opinion was advanced at the State Nurserymen's convention at San José last year in an address by President Max J. Crow. Indeed, it is quite safe to say that these reflect quite generally the opinion of seedsmen, nurserymen, florists, orchardists and the general farmers in California.

But what shall be done to relieve the dearth of labor and thereby secure maximum crops? To import half million or more Chinese will require funds, labor and ships—three items that just at present seem to be rather in demand on the Atlantic Coast. On grounds of capability, THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE is quite correct when it gives the preference to the Chinese.

At the forthcoming joint convention of the California Association of Nurserymen and State Fruit Growers' Convention (to be held in Riverside, Nov. 11-14) this whole matter may again come up, but it is doubtful if any measures will be adopted leading to tangible results in the way of remedial legislation by Congress. The present attitude of organized labor and its rather intimate relations with the prosecution of the war, together with the President's statement that labor conditions be as little disturbed as possible, during the period of the war, render such a possibility somewhat doubtful.

It should be the aim of every operator of hot water heating plants to put every single piece of equipment in the plant in first class order so that it will operate to the maximum efficiency. The aggregate saving to be had through this attention will, in many cases, save at least one-quarter to one-third of the fuel ordinarily used.

In steam heating systems it is particularly desirable that the boilers be located lower than the system itself so as to insure the condensation returning to the boiler. Many plants are so constructed that the condensation must be pumped back to the boilers. This is an uneconomical method and it would (in many cases) pay growers to turn their heating systems right side up instead of leaving them upside down as they now are. While this would involve considerable re-arrangement of the piping system and would, of course, mean moving the boiler room and boilers, yet from figures on file in this office it is apparent that doing this would pay in most cases. From a comparison of results secured from two plants of about the same size, one of which has the boiler room properly located, the other with the boiler room at the highest point on the uphill side of the houses, it has been shown that the plant with the boilers improperly located uses almost twice as much fuel for the same glass area as the other plant.

Good draft is essential to economical burning of fuel, and the same factors hold true in the case of steam plants as in the case of hot water heating plants. This has been brought out in a previous paragraph.

Installing Automatic Air Valves

One of the easiest ways of improving the efficiency of a steam heated plant is to install automatic air valves in the lines wherever there is a possibility of a pocket of air forming. These air valves remove air from the system automatically and insure good circulation. The installation of these valves is simple, it being necessary only to drill the pipe, tap it out, and screw the air valve in place.

The most promising method of saving fuel is by practicing economy in the boiler room by careful and intelligent firing, and by keeping the boilers clean and in good condition and, as will be discussed in another article, by the substitution of cool crops wherever possible for crops demanding high temperatures. By following these suggestions the greenhouse man should be able to get through the coming season without suffering material loss. In fact he may be able to make the year as successful as any in the past.

Correspondence

Just Gone Fishing

Editor The Florists' Exchange

Lorimer said some time ago: "Say less than the other fellow and listen more than you talk, for when a man is listening he isn't telling on himself and he is flattering the fellow who is."

Well, since our publicity campaign started I am sure that I've talked considerably about national campaigns, but now for the next four weeks me and mine hike to our hole on the shore of Belgrade Lakes for a solid month of quietness, fishing and soliloquy.

Mine has indeed been a pleasant and interesting task, and as I sit fishing (without catching fish) will have ample time to consider the fulfilment of several plans in mind for next Fall's campaign, and as we all like a little flattery, will get mine by listening to others the rest of the Summer and saying nothing for publication in the interval. So that the little squib which our kind editor has inserted weekly will cease until we are homeward bound, heavily laden with fish and the hope that publicity has not gone to seed because of our interest in so fine a work as this our first campaign.

With kindest wishes to all for a most pleasant vacation.

Very sincerely yours,

HENRY PENN, Chairman.

P.S. I want to take this opportunity of thanking all those who have up to date sent in contributions on behalf of our Publicity Committee.

Tribute to a Reasonable Man

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

Too much cannot be said in praise of the man who possesses the faculty of good judgment, and whose sense of justice rises above the petty level of pelf and self interest. This by way of a brief introduction to a specific case in point.

A few weeks ago one of our growers expressed for us a few hundred Primula obconica plants to John R. Hellenthal of Columbus, Ohio. The plants reached their destination in a deplorable condition, being practically worthless.

Departing from the general rule of putting the burden of the loss upon the shipper (and this is a subject of vital importance—well worthy of the serious attention of the S. A. F. & O. H. at its forthcoming annual meeting in St. Louis), Mr. Hellenthal writes us as follows:

"We received the Primulas, but cannot use them; they were all dried up, too long on the road. Such fine stock as they were. What a shame! We potted them up and will see what we can do with them. We are not holding you or the shipper responsible for we know what the conditions are. Now, understand, we do not want you to complain to your shipper about the plants because they certainly were fine, but, owing to conditions, it is our loss and we must make the best of it."

Further comment is hardly necessary.

Adjustable Row Marker

The accompanying illustration shows an adjustable row marker for the gardener or florist. This has the advantage over row markers generally in use in that it may be adjusted to mark rows any desired distance apart, and the wheels enable one to mark a large number of rows with less work than with the ordinary marker.

The device consists of two parallel bars, about 1½in. square, the upper bar having a wheel fastened to each end by means of a lag screw, ½in. by 3½in., with a washer on either side of the wheel. The wheels may be made of peach basket bottoms or similar discs of wood.

The bars can be spaced off either by means of nails, or notched. As will be noted from the drawing, the marking point has a short piece nailed to it at right angles, so that it just fits snugly between the bars, and when the button is upright the marking block is set at that particular point; when the button is parallel to the bar the marker can be slid along to any desired point. The device of course also has a handle.

This marker is of course meant for planting small plants, close together, where a regular furrowing sled would not be suitable. The intensive culture so desirable today, with rows as close as a foot apart, makes this marker particularly handy.—CHARLES A. BLACK, JR., Hightstown, N. J.

In Memoriam—John Berry

There were but few names in the Middle West and Rocky Mountain States more prominent among florists and horticulturists than that of our late deceased and sadly missed John Berry.

Born in Ireland more than 70 years ago where, after receiving a fair school education, he began his early career as an apprentice in floriculture and landscape work, and with a burning ambition for higher efficiency in that line, he forged his way to the Kew Gardens, England, where he finished a training that enabled him to fill responsible positions in Great Britain. But his adventurous and aggressive nature prompted him to leave the narrow confines of the British Isles, and in 1871 he began his activity in our profession on this side of the Atlantic. He traveled extensively during his early years through the States and gathered much valuable data on the native flora in practically every State in the Union. He finally selected the Rocky Mountains as his experimental grounds, and for many years made Denver his permanent home; there he held many prominent positions, municipal and private.

For several years he held the office of park superintendent of Colorado Springs, after which he occupied a similar position in Denver. He was instrumental in planning and planting the beautiful Wolcott estate in the early nineties, and there is scarcely a public park or private estate in the Rocky Mountain region that has not been beautified by John Berry's introductions of new and valuable mountain shrubs and perennials. He was a great admirer and student of the native coniferous varieties and spent a good part of his leisure time exploring the hills in search of something new.

His fraternal spirit made him a valuable member in many organizations. He was a life member of the S. A. F. and O. H., and for several terms held the office of president of the State Florists' Society. He was an ardent worker in the State Horticultural Society from its foundation in the eighties, and acted as head of that organization at different periods. In later years he became an active member of the American Association of Park Superintendents, and was honored with the office of vice-president at its last annual convention.

He has left a deep and lasting imprint on American floriculture and his many friends mourn the passing of one so noble and unassuming. [John Berry died in Denver, May 29, 1918.]

Practical Talks on the Short of Help Problem

Considering the shortage of experienced help from the retailer's standpoint, and supplying the experience by instruction—By W. CLEAVER HARRY

ARTICLE No. 1

A short time ago it was my privilege to be permitted nspect the largest shipyard of the Emergency Fleet. the yard nearly 30,000 people are employed. To see m at labor, to see the work they are turning out for cle Sam, was indeed a revelation. As I marvelled the speed that was pushing the work of the 50 ships the ways, I wondered where all these experienced n, who pour through the gates each day and pick their tools and go to work, are gathered from. t then the guide pointed to a cross section of a 's hull standing by itself some distance back from ways: "That is our school," said he, "the place re we train our help before we allow them on the ular work. As soon as they qualify for the work which they are intended they are given an assign- nt on the ways. In the shops we have what is wn as the Vestibule Schools, where men and women eive instruction for foreman and the higher positions, er skilled instructors." Little wonder, then, is it not, t the United States is accomplishing the miracle in building?

t the Great Lakes Training Station they make a ular seaman in six weeks; give him his sleeve stripe send him to a receiving station for duty. The t trench raid ever conducted (nearly three years ago) the Canadians was first practiced on a replica of the my's works, erected some four miles behind the d line. It was constructed after photographs taken n low flying planes.

The Value of Training

raining has taken hold of the industrial problem and short-cut the great teacher—Experience. The em- er is just beginning to realize that experience has n gained at his expense; a wasteful method, whether e shipbuilding, selling goods or making floral de- s. Experienced help for the rank and file of any ness, outside the war industries, seems to be no er available. But the need is being met. The g we wish to consider is: What is the best way to dle the situation at the minimum cost and super- on? Many of the self-styled experienced men of t years were over rated. They lacked the very damentals of both the making up and the sales end he business. With much to learn and unlearn, they ly owed the salary they drew to the man who was ently waiting for them to become experienced.

here are better ways to be found in the changing ditions that are upon us. But this is no time for monies. The season is going to be a busy one and demand brisk and steady. Don't think that you not need boxes, wax paper, wire, supplies, help advertising, for all these things will be needed and not be ready for immediate delivery if ordered n wanted. It is our duty to point direction in e things so far as we see it, and urge every one e alive to his problems and keep on the job.

Employers Work Too Much

he war is a great educator. Many employers, in- d of training the help to do all branches of the k, insist on doing certain particular things all by nselves, while the assistants earn their money by ling the great man certain things he asks for and by aining from talking too much. To the employer: s a fine thing indeed to know that the details of business are being cared for by those who can only be trusted to do it well, but who will handle orders the way you want them to be. By this I n, when a store has a fixed style or method, as for nce, to have the Roses in the box all packed in rs, with a strip of wax paper between; that those loyees who have been taught the standard method he house in all things can be depended on abso- y to follow it out to the letter without any super- n.

me florists never know what it means to have a off. The details of their business hang about their s like a string of sleigh bells. Home for dinner, about to say grace, when the 'phone bell rings; a from the store: "Mrs. Fussy wants some flowers for table. She says that you know what she wants. t shall I give her?" After a few more interrup- on the vaudeville order, the meal is finished and to the store he flies. But the day is not yet although it is midnight. The phone bell again. time it is the Western Union Telegraph Co. with dictation of a telegram; starts with that terrible , "RUSH!" followed by an order for a two-dollar th for a dear old lady whose funeral notice will appear in tomorrow evening's paper or the morning after. Telegram signed by a brother correspondent in a distant town, name purposely omitted here. These interruptions are ofttimes mistaken for business and causes an S. O. S. to be sent for more help. "We can't get the work out!"

The Women Will Help

Because of their quickness to learn and apply themselves, women are desirable applicants for the florist. They have a natural faculty for detail and, once shown how, they will follow faithfully the method given. The plan recommended in this article and the one following, for the florist who must have experienced help, is to teach them in a series of lessons, free from interruption, where you can explain and demonstrate just how you want your work done. Cover such points as an experienced store worker must know, from stemming to rudimentary designing. Lay out a time each day, for three or four weeks, for practice work, and if you are patient and persistent you will be greatly rewarded. I have trained extra hands in one and two lessons to make up Easter corsages and pack flowers, who never turned a wire before, and the results they produced were beyond criticism. In No. 2 of our "Practical Talks" on the help question. we will discuss labor-saving methods in the store and office, and touch on the training of new help, again giving further details.

Bride's bouquet of White Killarney Roses and Adiantum Croweanum fern, tied with a white ribbon; a good example of the use of one kind of flower only and of the severely plain style

Every one must work out his own salvation. No one can do it for you. We are certainly facing times that must be met as we find them. One thing we do know is that we are going right straight ahead, never turning to the right or the left for any statement that is tainted with untruth. No question need disturb, or even give any serious concern to the man who stands with right and his country, which is This COUNTRY.

"Say it with Flowers"

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

This slogan has been adopted as its advertising medium by the S. A. F. publicity campaign. Why not work it to its greatest possibilities? Why not display it in our windows, and show the people there are live men in the florist business, and that we stand together for the sale of flowers, not because some of us want to be distinctive and feel we do not require the help in a collective way?

Why not each and every one try it out? It does not prevent using our personal advertising methods as well. When John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., was in Boston a few weeks ago, I gave up a previous engagement to accept an invitation to be present at a banquet which I understood was given generally to the florists of Boston.

I hoped to meet at least the larger number there, but instead to my disappointment, only some twelve or fourteen were present. I wonder why? Among other topics spoken on was the Boston Retail Florists' Club, how unsuccessful we had been in creating an interest among the florists of Boston; how meetings were called, and but from two to five members would come. The same lack of interest in both cases. What is needed to stir up the desire of co-operation?

There is still a spark of life left in the club; I believe some seven members, and we have hopes that some time this Fall it will blaze and shine forth to some good, for the benefit of all engaged in a business of high character, of elevating ideals, that has grown gradually to what it is. And I have confidence that with a steady pull together, as other men, in other lines do, we can land it on a higher plane, from which we should receive more prosperity, in the near future.

Co-operation for the florist, and "Say it with Flowers" for the public, should work together.

HENRY R. COMLEY

Boston, July 23, 1918.

Mr. Comley enclosed a copy of a leaflet of his own, entitled: "Send Flowers. The Real Token of Friendship," which we reprint thinking it may be of assistance and interest to other retailers:

In these days of uncertainty and seriousness flowers carry a message of cheer to everybody. They "brighten up the corner," so to speak. In sickness or health, the sending of flowers is a demonstration of thoughtfulness and esteem.

The gift of flowers recognizes no age limit. If a bouquet was appreciated in the courting days, surely it will be received with the same grateful smile today.

Flowers and plants are an essential part of the decoration of any home. The living room, the dining room, the bed chamber all are perceptibly cheered by the presence of flowers, not necessarily the most expensive kind. Economy, with reason, can be applied to flowers the same as to other things.

Isn't there some spot or corner in your home that could be improved by the addition of cut flowers or a potted plant? We are always happy to serve you with flower suggestions.

Henry Penn on Slogans and Signatures

Editor The Florists' Exchange,

I appreciate your kind words on that conservation card of ours, also your mentioning the fact that slogans and signatures are valuable features for house purposes and asking me for an expression on same for publication.

The value of the slogan and signature to a firm which advertises frequently is so important to the success of the campaign that quite often the whole advertising expenditure may be lost or found to be extremely profitable through its use. For example, when a slogan is properly imbedded in one's mind—such as "It floats," which we know immediately refers to some brand of soap without any further text; or, "Eventually, why not now?" just four words implying a certain kind of flour; and we need not go further than two words "Chases Dirt," when we think of Dutch Cleanser; or even the one word, "Fairy," we associate with a certain brand of soap—there can be no gainsaying but that the use of a personal slogan ensures holding your individuality, and the longer and more thorough its use the stronger it grows.

This same reasoning also applies to a special signature, such as firm names. Take for example, in our own business, such signatures as "Fleischman," or "Pitcher's Castoria"; these stand out conspicuously. Taking slogans and signatures they have an advertising value which increases as the years roll on.

I well remember, many years ago, having our name and business tied up and having the name "Penn the Florist" copyrighted at Washington. We felt that the effect of the combination of "Penn," with the quill design and "The Florist," would eventually be a signature that could be easily remembered, and the design has had the effect desired.

We have proven the worth of the signature in many ways, one of them being of an interesting character; we were forwarded a cheque through the mail with only a quill on the envelope, no name, nor the word florist, not even an address or city, and yet we received the letter and check all right.

This is only an incident yet it proves that there is food for thought to any concern contemplating an advertising campaign, to spend time and money in the endeavor to secure both a telling slogan and signature.

Just to give you a concrete example of the value of a trade mark: The camel picture used on the Camel cigarette box is valued so much that the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. refused ten million dollars for the copyrighted picture alone. Just think of building a reputation on this phase of an advertising trademark.

The value of such is a big asset in a good-will of a growing business, and as such is worth as much as you wish to make it.

Make it an established fixture in one's mind until it becomes a habit.

Boston, Mass., July 27, 1918. HENRY PENN.

Looking on the Bright Side of the Coal Situation

By W. CLEAVER HARRY

The worst never happens. * * * The worst can't happen for the fear of the worst, producing pessimism and discouragement, is simply an erroneous mental state, a distorted nothing; without foundation or reality. Such a person invites failure. He will offer to bet you in serious jest that it will surely rain on the day of the Sunday School picnic, although he doesn't want rain. He reasons contrary. He feels that if he takes the negative side he will be just that much happier if the sky is clear and less disappointed if the day is spoiled by rain.

Anyhow things are not as bad as they would be if they were considerably worse than they are, is the philosophy of my burnt cork friend on the other side of the footlights. The grower with 50 per cent. of his coal is not half badly off at that. The fact is he is much better off than he knows. The only fellow who is entitled to sympathy is the man who has none at all. In a good many growing establishments if it were possible to replace an antiquated boiler and to change the system so it would work without being driven, this change, with a real knowledge of how to fire, would enable the establishment to run on half the usual coal supply, that is if next Winter is less severe than the last.

If other growers who come under my observation would run half their place right instead of running all of it half wrong they would make just as much and have more peace of mind. A grower of fine Snapdragon tells me he would rather market 30 dozen daily than when he must cut and market 50 dozen.

Keeping Up With Production

This brings into discussion two important items that enter into the cost of production besides coal; these are labor and the diminished returns from an oversupplied market. Last Winter it was discovered that some things actually did better when subjected to a lower night temperature. One of these was the Ophelia Rose. Granting that certain things need heat and plenty of it we will eliminate them. As a retailer I am in position to know that if we don't have Roses we will sell Primroses. This is indeed no idle statement, for every retailer knows he can take the pressure off stock that is scarce if he wants to just as the flowergram eliminated the extra long stemmed Rose and let them remain in the ice box of the wholesaler.

We are in the war to win. Our boys are going over the sea to help our Allies defeat the enemies of the world. Nothing else really matters. If we, as a united people, are going to let this war drag on for years all we need do is to allow our resources to be used for other purposes than the war. No! The United States never does anything by halves. And to still continue to do this means that each one must help, not by doing his bit but by doing his best. It is quite natural for every one to think of his business as one of paramount importance, but under no circumstances can we florists claim exemption.

The supreme sacrifice is being made by the men in uniform. What then is the loss compared to a few greenhouses boarded up from January to Spring. Bonds and War Stamps are in no sense a sacrifice.

The Retailer Must Help, Too

Many retailers who pride themselves on their superb service will now or later have a chance to learn the difference between service and selfishness. "George" is doing his part in the highest service in the world. You can't go in the service in the same capacity but you can help the Government of the country that gave you all you have or hope to be by helping generate the power that will speed the shells over the Rhine.

"Give until it hurts" is incorrect, for right giving can never hurt but must bless the giver. "Business as usual," the slogan of a year ago, is subtle propaganda, for business must change from the usual to the unusual to help win the war.

The United States Government has asked the growers of cut flowers to do with less coal. This same ruling does and will further apply to hundreds of similar activities. We know, deep down in our hearts, that this is not a calamity to our business. We know that we have been wasting fuel right and left; not only in firing, but in the production of a lot of low grade stock that is without profit to the grower. It doesn't pay to go on doing business this way. The day of reckoning would have to come but the ruling of the Fuel Administrator has brought us to our senses. The discipline of a restricted coal allowance will ultimately benefit us.

Why is it that the retail price of cut flowers remains the same when all commodities are much higher? Does not the florist pay the increased cost of labor, coal and marketing, also? We know that he is paying it and that he still gets no more for his goods.

The restrictions that have in wisdom been placed upon the grower will help make this next season a success. The grower will surprise himself and the whole trade. The commission man will no longer be pestered by the street fakir. The retailer, the only legitimate outlet for the product, will do a fine clean-cut business instead of the wild scramble of former years.

He who serves best and profits most is he who best serves his country in any way that is given him to do, and who does it without question or complaint. He who keeps his mind free of treasonable thoughts and criticism is helping clear the way so that our mighty fighting host will bring a more speedy conclusion in that splendid victory for liberty and justice.

Business With Undertakers

A leading undertakers' trade paper recently gave considerable publicity in its columns to the profitable handling of funeral flowers, pointing out that by working with the retail florist a commission of from 20 to 33 per cent. can be made by the undertaker, which the article naively remarks "is not bad when you consider you have no stock to handle and no money invested."

The article gave pointers as to the best arrangement of flowers around the casket or in the room, reprimanding some undertakers for removing cards from the flowers after receipt at the house, stating that the cards should be left on the floral pieces until after the funeral service and not removed until the cortege leaves the cemetery, this so that the friends who may not have been able to see the flowers at the house or church may come forward at the cemetery and look up the card bearing their name. The writer of the article suggests that the proper thing for the undertaker to do is to make a list at the house of the senders of the floral tributes and give it to some member of the family, adding, "many progressive undertakers indicate on the list the kind of flowers and style of design as well as the sender's name."

The concluding paragraphs are worth quoting:

"Having arranged your display you have nothing more to do with the flowers until after the funeral services are over. Never tear down a flower arrangement in front of the family. It is always best to have your room cleared before removing the flowers. At first remove just enough flowers to allow you to take the casket from the display. After everyone has left the house have your flower wagon or auto handy and with your assistants load the flowers. Advise the driver to take a different route to the cemetery than the one you intend to take with the funeral cortege. Flowers can then be properly arranged near the grave and it helps make the last service very beautiful and impressive.

"If you are to go from the house to the church use the same method of handling the flowers. Always see that the flowers arrive at the church before the funeral cortege. Your assistant should see that they are properly arranged in the church, so that it will only be necessary to push the casket in the display, and then, perhaps, set a few flowers in front of the casket.

"Never bring the flowers into the church behind the casket. This shows poor funeral management. The modern undertaker never allows this to be done. Flowers should never be removed from the church until all the people have passed out. If the church has a side door, it is very handy to load your flowers at this side door and, as before, instruct your driver to take a different route to the cemetery.

"Following the committal services and after the grave is filled, the flowers should be arranged nicely about the grave."

Please Omit Flowers

The importance of combating the growing practice of requesting the public to "please omit flowers" at funerals must be obvious. Therefore the accompanying advertisements of the Jacob Schulz Co. of Louisville, Ky., which we take pleasure in reproducing, will doubtless be of considerable interest. Mr. Schulz, president of the company, referring incidentally to a recent article on the subject which appeared in THE EXCHANGE writes as follows:

"We are using these newspaper advertisements in an effort to make the public feel that it is really a duty on their part to send some sort of a floral token to a departed friend or relative."

Effective Advertising Literature

Rodgers Floral Co., Charleston, S. C., send us samples of a series of blotters and placards which have found favor with their customers, the printed matter dealing with the topics of service, funeral work, artistic makeup, bridal work, and competition, most of them having a patriotic trend, and all of them using the slogan: SAY IT WITH FLOWERS. The gem of the collection is a four page folder, the colored cover design embracing the U. S. and British flags intertwined, with a shield in the center showing the stars, union jack, American eagle, and the British lion rampant. The third page of the folder carries the stirring new anthem by Chas. Huntington, "Britain and America."

The Pioneer Bulletin, published weekly by the Pioneer Division of the War Savings Committee of Greater New York, in a recent issue printed the portrait of Chas. A. Dards, the Madison avenue florist, who is Chairman of the Florists' Committee of the Pioneer Division of Greater New York, commending him for efficient work among the florists on behalf of War Savings Stamps, of whom he is a most worthy exemplar, and for his W.S.S. store window display recently shown in THE EXCHANGE columns.

Messages of Flowers

—OR—

Their Floral Code and Dictionary

By GEORGE H. O'NEILL

Lovers of flowers and their lore will find a treasure house in this interesting and comprehensive little manual. A dictionary of flowers covers more than thirty pages, giving the common names, in alphabetical order, of hundreds of flowers; each followed by the meaning of the flower and its botanical name. In the section "Messages of Flowers," the idea of the message to be conveyed by a flower is condensed into a single word, and the list of these words is arranged alphabetically. Opposite each word is placed the name of the proper flower and beneath appears the expanded message. A "Floral Calendar" gives the name of the flower appropriate for each month of the year, with its meaning, its botanical name, and a bit of verse about it. The mythology of flowers, with many interesting facts about them in modern life, fills nearly twenty pages, taking in alphabetical order thirty or more of the best known blooms. An explanation of the arranging of bouquets to make them carry messages fills another section, and advice about caring for cut flowers and a score of poems and quotations from famous poets about flowers complete the pages of this handy little manual of flower language. Of invaluable assistance to florists as a ready reference guide and as an instructive manual to amateur gardeners and lovers of flowers.

Can be sold by retailers, a 25c. copy for the customer's own use and a $1.00 copy for the lady who is to receive the flowers.

Extremely warm weather prevails, [illegible] the customary effect upon business. While it is [illegible] dull. The [illegible] remains unbroken and as a consequence all outdoor stock is suffering. Receipts of stock are limited and with the exception of the common grades of Roses, Gladioli and Sweet Peas, the market clears up daily. A few Carnations are to be had but the crop is practically over. Gladioli and Asters are very late this year; this has been the chief factor in the recent dearth of stock and their appearance in quantity is decidedly welcome. Some early Easter Lilies are arriving [illegible] a ready sale.

July Business

July business is reported slightly below normal by authoritative sources. [illegible] business was done [illegible] the month [illegible] the same month of previous years, made the approximate [illegible] of those two [illegible] difficult. Inability to obtain sufficient help in private residences during the greater part of the month also operated to curtail trade. The labor [illegible] was scarce [illegible] and the general expense of doing business, due to increased rates, was increased. The general tone, however, is good, and optimism is everywhere evidenced, being accentuated by the recent Allied victories, which have [illegible] to make the summer profit of the war, the [illegible] and new [illegible] Lake [illegible] are [illegible] per cent [illegible] greater [illegible] the [illegible] for [illegible] that [illegible] is [illegible] at first, and as [illegible] prices [illegible] are [illegible] the likelihood of [illegible] [illegible] prevailing [illegible] during the [illegible] Winter is [illegible] diminishing.

and their families gathered and a spirit of good fellowship and fun prevailed throughout the entire afternoon and evening. A sports program of interest to young and old of both sexes, a feature of which was the baseball game between the wholesalers and retailers, won by the latter, was followed by bathing, lunching and dancing. There was also a tug-of-war between the wholesalers and the retailers, in which the former turned the tables, coming out victors. The club service flag, with 14 stars on it, denoting the absence of that number of active members in the service of their country, was shown in a conspicuous place. Another novel feature was the posting on a bulletin board of the name of Chas J. Graham as the logical candidate as next president of the club. As the annual outing usually precedes the August meeting, at which time the nomination of officers for the ensuing year takes place, it is to be hoped that the bulletin board will become a recognized custom. The prizes were chiefly awarded in Thrift Stamps.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

The city has been in the grip of a hot wave almost continuously for the past two weeks; the demand has consequently slackened up, and the supply of Summer flowers has increased. There is scarcely any demand for flowers for social functions. However, the regular entertainments at the Country Club continue, and these help out in creating a demand for outdoor flowers. The demand for funeral work has held up well, but there are few weddings. Shipping business is fairly good.

Fine Asters are being grown, and the supply is increasing daily. Gladioli are of excellent quality, but there is a noticeable falling off in the demand, the people seeming to prefer Asters and Summer Roses, which are particularly fine at present. The new Rose Columbia is meeting with much favor. There are plenty of Lilies on the market, including the pink and white, rubrum, auratum and Easter. Hydrangeas are used for decorative purposes. Ferns are scarce and Cycas are practically out of the market, as is also the field or wild stock, which is just beginning to come in. There is a moderate supply of greens and flowers. Zinnias are coming into the market. Chrysanthemums are being used more than ever, especially in basket work. Ferns and flower plants are selling well, in the absence of cut flowers.

Flowers for Red Cross

The Red Cross Gift Shop disposed of thousands of flowers, which resulted a substantial sum. The flowers were all donated by the local florists; among those giving large lots were A. J. Lautenschlager & Co., The Dunbar Floral Co., W. J. & M. S. Vesey, the Flick Floral Co. and Ed Wortmann & Son.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey have several acres planted with Corn, Cabbage, Tomatoes, etc., and are selling these products in large quantities at wholesale. Judge and Mrs. W. J. Vesey left last week for a trip to New York and other eastern points.

Herman Lehn, of the New Haven Floral Co., Ed Lautenschlager and R. W. Dunbar left September 1 July 27, on a business trip to Chicago.

A severe windstorm, accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain, which amounted almost to a cloudburst did considerable damage to the Corn crop here on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

The Flick Floral Co. has Corn, Tomatoes and other vegetables ripening, which are being sold from the greenhouses in good quantities.

Advertising

The retailers and wholesalers report that the demand during July was equal to, if not better than, that for the same month last year. Had it not been for the scarcity of flowers the first part of the month, the receipts would have made a better showing. As it is, there is general satisfaction heard from all sides in regard to the demand, and local florists are all putting forth a great effort to please the Miss Summer and assist in advertising and keeping things alive during July, August and September. D. B.

Cincinnati, O.

Roses are now fairly plentiful, but are meeting with a weak demand and find a poor sale. Both Easter Lilies and rubrums are in a heavy supply, but fail to clean up in the way they have been doing for the past several weeks. Asters are now extremely plentiful, but are selling rather slowly. Many more Gladioli than are needed are coming into the market. Other offerings include some hardy Hydrangea, Coreopsis and a few Water Lilies.

George Bernet has returned to his home with Ivy poisoning.

Eck Bros. have opened their store until after the war. Ray Eck is due to go into the Service [illegible] his brother has been in the Army for some time past.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Frank and children, of Portland, Ind., also J. C. Anderson of the Anderson Floral Co., Lebanon, Tenn., were recent visitors.

Timely.

Business Difficulty

The report of the special receiver for the Spragg Floral Co., Wheeling, W. Va., recently filed, placed the value of the property at $6[illegible].85, outstanding accounts $[illegible], and liabilities at $4[illegible].

Wholesale Market and News of the City

The Market

July 30.—The wholesale cut flower market this week is glutted with Roses and Summer flowers for which there is very little demand. A part of these arrivals is sold at about the buyer's offer, and the balance cannot be disposed of at any price.

American Beauty Roses and hybrid teas are in full supply. Special American Beauty Roses are selling at from 8c. to 25c. each. Other grades realize corresponding prices. The best of the hybrid teas in small sales sell at 3c. to 6c. each, and the bottom grades at from 25c. to 50c. per 100. A large receiver of Roses sizes up the present situation as follows: "Roses are offered in box lots without regard to grades to anyone who shows any inclination to buy at any price whatever."

The arrivals of Carnations are, of course, small, but even these few cannot be disposed of. Prices range from about 25c. to $1 per 100.

Cattleya orchids, the more salable varieties, are not in large supply; the demand is weak. Prices range from 10c to 75c. each, according to varieties and quality. There is an abundant supply of white and pink Lilies, the former selling slowly at $4 to $6 per 100, and the latter very slowly at $2 to $3 per 100. The best of the small supply of Lily of the Valley is selling at $6 to $8 per 100.

The arrivals of Summer flowers in great variety are extremely large, and many cannot be disposed of at any price, or hardly given away. The deluge of Asters and Gladioli is meeting with no adequate demand, and sales are made of the former at as low a figure as $1 per 1000, and of the latter at $1.50 to $2 per 1000.

As for greens, sprays of edible Asparagus, brought in by the wagon load and sold on the street, seem just now to take the precedence.

Delegates to the S. A. F. Convention

It is reported that in addition to Pres. Chas. H. Totty and Mrs. Totty, the following from the vicinity of New York will attend the S. A. F. and O. H. convention at St. Louis, Mo., on Aug. 20, 21 and 22: Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Traendly, who are now summering on their farm at Rowayton, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; A. L. Miller, Jamaica, L. I.; J. G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., and A. T. De La Mare, of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE. The party, as stated in last week's issue, will travel over the Penn. R. R., leaving on the Keystone Express No. 21, from the Pennsylvania Terminal Station, 33d st. and Seventh ave., New York City, at 2:04 p.m., on Sunday, Aug. 18, and arriving in St. Louis at 5:25 on Monday.

Philip F. Kessler, 55 W. 26th st., has closed his place of business this week, and will not open again until September. Mr. Kessler left the city on Thursday night for Fourth Lake in the Adirondacks, where he will take a few weeks' much needed rest in his bungalow.

Edward Hanft, salesman for Hentz & Nash, 55 W. 26th st., is now taking his annual vacation.

The Cut Flower Exchange, 55 W. 26th st., reports a deluge of Summer flowers each morning, and very slow sales. In fact, however, there is nothing exceptional in this report, for the same conditions seem to prevail in the case of all who handle flowers at wholesale. Furthermore, the retailers throughout the city report that there is very little business. These conditions, of course, are to be expected in Midsummer, but they seem this Summer to be more pronounced than in previous years.

You Are Doing It?

Every time you read, you purchasers of Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps, of what the United States is doing in France in building wharves and railroads, or deluging the Germans with gas or shelling them out of position with big guns or shrapnel, or of bombing their arsenals or cities, or of the great work of our Army and our Navy, or of the building of ships here, or of any or all of the great or small achievements of America, here or abroad or on the seas, you buyers of Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps truthfully can say, "I had a hand in this"; "I contributed to this"; "I am helping do this"; "It is part of my work."

Flower Fair in London

At the recent flower show held in Trafalgar Square, London, for the benefit of the French Ambulance, the British Carnation Society raised $1000, and the National Sweet Pea Society's receipts also were $1000, through the sale of the respective flowers they foster, all blooms being donated by members. J. S. Brunton, managing editor of the Horticultural Trade Journal, as chairman of both of the above societies, naturally feels somewhat elated over the achievement.

Boston

The Market

July 30.—There is no scarcity of seasonable flowers at the wholesale flower market but the demand is very limited; in fact at most of the wholesale houses it is vacation and alteration time.

American Beauty Roses are not as plentiful as a few weeks ago but there are enough to fill the meagre demand. Special grade blooms are selling for from 10c. to 25c., and other grades at correspondingly lower rates. The supply of hybrid tea Roses is large and is hard to clean up. Top grade Roses are from 4c. to 8c. for choice varieties; other grades are from 25c. to $2 per 100; large lots being sold at exceptionally low prices.

Carnations are feeling the effects of the excessively hot weather; the very choicest blooms do not bring more than $1.50 per 100, and there are very few sold at this figure; some bring 50c. per 100 and up. The fact is that any reasonable offer is taken.

There is a light supply of Cattleya orchids. A few attractive C. gigas realize 50c. to 60c. apiece.

The supply of Lilium longiflorum is not large and prices are from $4 to $8 per 100. There is a very light supply of Lily of the Valley, with a limited call.

Asters are becoming plentiful but are not moving as they should; they bring $1 to $2 per 100. There are some good Gladioli but they are moving sluggishly. A plentiful supply of Centaurea, Sweet Peas and other seasonable outdoor flowers is offered.

Crotons, Dracæna Massangeana and small Boston ferns are the only plants for which there is any call and these are moving fairly well for store window decorations.

Club Picnic

The annual picnic of the Gardeners and Florists' Club was held at Cunningham Park, East Milton on Wednesday, July 24. There was a large gathering and the picnic proved to be one of the best the club has ever held. The sporting events started punctually at 10 a.m. and the results of the games were as follows:

Baseball matches. Commercial Growers vs Private Gardeners; latter won, 11 to 7. Boys under 15; Nelson Bartsch's team won, 21 to 15. Married vs Single Ladies; latter won, 11 to 10.

Quoit match, individual: Capt. George Melvin, F. Cole and John Edgar, were the winners.

50 yd. races. Girls under 8: Charlotte Newell, Margaret McKenzie and Elsie Waldecker. Boys under 8: William Donald and Arthur Beasley. Girls over 8 and under 8: Dorothy Coles and Helen Peters. Boys over 8 and under 10: Donald McKenzie and Gildo Pederzini. Girls under 12, for children of members and friends: Ruth Brown, Lynda Rogers. Boys under 12, for children of members and friends: Nelson Bartsch, Chester McCarthy.

75 yd. races. Girls over 10 and under 12: Ethel Cray, Ruth Braise, Linda Rogers. Boys over 10 and under 12: Nelson Bartsch, J. Edgar, Gildo Pederzeni. Girls over 12 and under 15: Marion Iliffe, Alice Bearse, Mary Flood. Married ladies, handicapped: Mrs. Coles, Mrs. Rogeau, Mrs. Monahan. Girls 15 years and over, handicapped: Edith Illiffe, Elsie Bartsch, Margaret Illiffe.

100 yd. races. Boys over 12 and under 15: C. Esty, Prescott Whyte, George Racz. Boys 15 and under 18: Victor Heurlin, Malcolm Craig, Charles Esty. Club members only, handicapped: T. S. Brown, M. S. Brown, Victor Heurlin. Men 175 lbs. and over, handicapped: A. K. Rogers, James Methven, James Wheeler.

Barrel relay race: Robert Esty and Kenneth Esty, Kenneth Kraig and George Racz.

Flag race, for girls under 15: Doris Bartsch, Dorothy Woods, Edith Racz.

Potato race, for boys under 15: George Racz, Robert Esty, James Donald.

Tug of war, Commercial growers vs. private gardeners; private gardeners won.

Football match, association (soccer), 20 minutes game: Scotland beat England 1 to 0.

Ringmaster, W. J. Kennedy; Handicapper, James Methven; Starter, P. M. Miller; Clerk, W. N. Craig.

Gladiolus Exhibition

The annual Gladiolus exhibition of the Mass. Hort. Society will be held Aug. 10 and 11. Good cash prizes are offered; the money has been provided by a generous member of the society.

Phloxes, Asters and collections of annuals are also scheduled.

Thomas Cipers, a sucessful Carnation grower of Wellesley Hills, has decided not to run his greenhouses this Winter.

Welch Bros. Co. report good business, large orders coming from Newport for Roses.

The friends of Walter Holden, the popular salesman at the Boston Co-operative Flower Market, will be pleased to know that he is recovering from a severe attack of neuritis in his legs, and will be back to work in a few days.

F. W. Fletcher & Co., of Auburndale, have sold their establishment and the many novelties in Snapdragons and Freesias are also being disposed of. Mr. Fletcher is going into Government horticultural work. His many friends wish him much success in his new work.

Insects are attacking war gardens in this section very badly, and seedsmen are extremely busy furnishing insecticides. In many of the seed stores young women have taken the place of the young men who gave up their positions to "hunt the Huns." It is interesting to listen to the young women giving instructions to purchasers buying insecticides, tools and seeds. They are doing well and if the war continues much longer many more of them will fit into various kinds of employment.

George Small, who has been assistant manager at the Boston Co-operative Flower Market for the past three years, has had to leave because the management has found it necesary to reduce expenses.

Maurice Hambro and family are at Nantasket Beach for two weeks. R. C.

July 30.—Market conditions are slow but no slower than they have been in past years during July. The extremely warm weather has injured the quality of stock as well as reduced the volume of trade. Shipping business has fallen to slightly below normal and local trade is confined chiefly to funeral work. Good stock for shipping is scarce but the market abounds in large quantities of poor stock, for which there is no special demand. Still with all this there are no complaints from the wholesalers; conditions are as good as might be expected for this season. A cool wave started Monday, which it is believed will make the business better for the ensuing week than the week past.

There are not many American Beauty Roses and such good ones as come in sell freely. In all other varieties of Roses there is a large amount of short and open stock, but good stock that measures up to the requirements of the shipping trade is on the short side.

Carnations are no longer a feature of the market, it being their off season. A few are still to be had, but Asters and other Summers flowers have displaced them for the time being. The Carnations offered sell at from $1 to $3 per 100.

Gladioli are to be had in large quantities, but owing to the fact that there is not much good stock on the market the price shows no tendency to advance.

There are plenty of Easter Lilies; they are selling well at from $8 to $10 per 100, being favorites for funeral work. There is enough Valley to meet the demand, at from $5 to $6 per 100. Orchids are extremely scarce but there is little demand for them. Calendulas are plentiful, but are not in any special demand. The first of the crop of Golden Glow 'Mums have made their appearance and have so far met with fair demand. Asters are getting more plentiful but there is no really good stock; prices range from $1 to $3 per 100.

In hardy stock Hydrangea arborescens is prominent; it sells well for funeral work but has not the keeping qualities of paniculata which will come later in the season. Double white Feverfew is in quantities everywhere, and where cheap stock for funeral work is desired it fills the bill nicely. Water Lilies are selling well; a number of the leading retail stores are featuring grottos, Lily pools and rustic effects in which Water Lilies are freely used. The growers are offering the leading varieties, including pure white Nymphæa tuberosa, the yellow green flavescens, the rosy pink rubra, the deep red Devoniensis and the violet blue Zanzibariensis. The supply of all greens is ample.

Coal Situation

Large growers around Chicago, who come above the 40-ton limit, have been notified by the Fuel Administration that they may use in addition to their 50 per cent. allowance of coal all the slack and screenings needed. This applies not only to Illinois and Indiana but all States west of the Mississippi. As all the coal being bought so far under the restricted condtions has been of the best quality, slack and screenings have accumulated in the yards of the dealers as well as at the mines to such an extent that the Fuel Administration deemed it advisable to permit the restricted industries to use these in addition to their allowance.

THERE is plenty of good stock, particularly out-door grown flowers.

ASTERS. Some of our big growers are in full crop. There will be plenty of them from now on. $1.00 to $3.00 per 100.

GLADIOLUS. Many novelties and all the standard varieties, such as America, Augusta, Francis King and Panama. $5.00 per 100. Special price in quantity.

EASTER LILIES. We have had a large supply every day, and no surplus. This is the best indication of the uniform quality of our Lilies. $12.00 per 100.

RUBRUM LILIES. In quantity, both long and short stems. Very desirable for design work and inexpensive. Shorts, $4.00 per 100; Long, $6.00 per 100.

In States west of here the Fuel Administration has told the florists that hauling the coal to them and the use of cars was the chief obstacle they had to overcome; the use of the screenings was only a secondary consideration. Where growers are close to the large yards in the cities where screenings have accumulated and can haul them in trucks to their greenhouses they may do so immediately. Others not so situated must await their opportunity in securing cars and railway facilities for screenings as well as for other coal. This concession is of great importance to the growers as the good coal can be reserved for severe weather and the screenings burned on all other occasions, both Spring and Fall.

Some of the growers who were preparing to close part of their houses are making arrangements to plant other crops. Under this ruling it is considered that there will not be very much, if any, difference in the amount of stock raised for this market the approaching season. The wholesalers have taken a new lease on life and view the approaching season without alarm.

General News

The retail store of Anton Then on Carrabee st. will be continued under the direction of his daughter Josie Then. Anton Then, acompanied by his son John and Fritz Bahr and his son, who is assigned to an army camp in California, will left for a few weeks' trip to that state, on July 23. John Then will become manager of an orchard ranch and vineyards belonging to a California syndicate in which his father and Fritz Bahr are both interested. Anton Then, Jr., is with the Chicago Flower Growers' Assn. Wm. Langhout, who is directing the affairs of the Then greenhouses for the new owners, is busy making improvements and planning for future Fall trade, but finds much difficulty in getting competent help.

Frank Jarolwitsky, some time connected with the Zech & Mann and other wholesale houses, came of age since the last draft registration and has volunteered for service. He left for the Great Lakes Naval Training Station on July 27, where he joined the Motor Truck Division as a mechanic. A party of friends gave him a hearty send-off at the Zech & Mann store on Friday evening.

Guy Reburn has left for a vacation that will be spent at his old home, West Grove, Pa.

The Michigan Bulb Farms at Benton Harbor, Mich., have more than 1,000,000 Gladiolus plants in their fields. The entire crop is being handled on the Chicago market.

Mrs. Kirby Boerstler, Little Rock, Ark., has been in the city a few days making purchases. She reports business in Little Rock as very brisk, a large Government war training camp, an aviation field and two or three Government manufacturing establishments each employing thousands of people have given business interests of the city a wonderful impetus.

Ralph and Edith Bather, Clinton, Ia., are in the city, having come here to see a sister who is undergoing treatment in the Augustana Hospital on Cleveland ave.

F. H. Reigelmeier, Pittsburgh, Pa., is spending several days in the city visiting the trade. He says no florist can spend his vacation to better advantage than visiting among the trade here and seeing the other attractions in and around the city.

Allie Zech, who has, since the death of his father over three years ago, been manager of the wholesale house of Zech & Mann is now a half owner in the firm. This was brought about by the recent death of Mrs. Lena Zech, whose interest in the firm has since that time reverted to her son.

Flower Show for Red Cross

The annual show of the North Shore Hort. Society was held Wednesday, July 24, in the Young Men's Club rooms in Lake Forest. In addition to the usual prizes loving cups were offered for special exhibits. The display of fruits, flowers and vegetables was large and all were of excellent quality. There was a large exhibit of greenhouse plants from the conservatories of the private growers along the North Shore. The judges were A. Koch, supt. of Garfield Park, Jas. Livingston, Milwaukee, and Joseph Krupa of the Lincoln Park Conservatory. The seed houses of Chicago were all represented. At the close of the exhibit Thos. W. Head, supt. of the J. Ogden Armour estate, and president of the association, officiated as auctioneer, and everything excepting the greenhouse plants was auctioned off for the Red Cross, the proceeds from which increased their fund several hundred dollars.

Flowers More Plentiful

July 30.—The market calls for little comment, aside from the fact that flowers are more plentiful. There is a heavy increase in the supply of Gladioli; far too many for the market to absorb. A noticeable fact is that there is a tendency of the blooms to sweat and drop off very rapidly; probably due to the extended dry period. Nearly all outdoor stock plainly shows the effects of the drought. Asters are plentiful and are selling up well. The midseason varieties are now coming in strong, in all the desirable shades. Easter Lilies continue active and sell up close; they are in a way between crops. In Roses the market is oversupplied in short grades in all colors. Good Roses sell readily. Carnations are almost over and the few good ones left clean up quickly. Cattleya orchids show a slight increase, with declining prices. Sweet Peas and Valley are about off the list.

Dahlia Grower Moves to Florida

L. K. Peacock of the Peacock Dahlia Farms has done as did Mohammed of old: He has gone to his mountain. As is well known, Mr. Peacock grows Dahlias on a scale that appears staggering. The Peacock Dahlia Farms are located one at Williamstown Junction and the other at Spring Lake, N. J. At the former place are the greenhouses where the tubers are started in the Winter. Mr. Peacock sized up the coal situation with its 50 per cent. allotment for florists, then came to the conclusion that he required more heat. So he went to Florida, where, at Fort Myers, he has a three-acre tract where young Dahlias are started and grown. Mr. Peacock finds the climate there ideal for growing Dahlias; tubers planted in January make an amazing growth with enormous flowers by March.

He says the irrigation system on his Florida tract is ideal. A ditch surrounds the fields. When it rains the water is carried off into the ditch, and when there is a drought the water is turned into the ditch till it overflows into the fields. The first of the Dahlias are now being cut from the fields at Spring Lake, but no shipments go to the markets until about the first of September.

Edward F. Riley of Wm. J. Baker's has been notified by his local draft board to hold himself in readiness for the first call.

John P. Habermehl and Edward Habermehl are busily engaged in overseeing the rebuilding of their greenhouses at 22d and Diamond sts.

Edward Dornheim of the Chas. E. Meehan force is taking a trip through New York State.

Don't Buy A Cheap Tank
If you are going to buy a tank get a good one. A Caldwell Cypress Tank costs but little more than a poor one and lasts twice as long.
Cypress grows in the water, so it's the natural wood for tanks.
We have been building tanks for thirty years, so you can be sure we know how.

No. 709 —Single Clamp

No. 710—Single Hook

No 711 —Two Single Hooks make a Double Hook

No. 712 —Three-Hook Plate for clamping to column by four Single Clamps
Made in any number of Hooks, from 3 to 7

Handy Andy Pipe Hooks

A HOOK and a clamp make one hook. Two hooks clamped together make two hooks. With a set of two clamps for top and bottom, you can have a single or double side hook for any number of pipes, from two to fourteen.

Handy. Cheap. Satisfactory.

See page 142, new 1918 Handy Hand Book.

Won't Break, Won't Slip, Has Three Bolts

HERE is a malleable iron clamp column fitting that is the best one we ever made.

Grips the pipe like an angry bulldog. Being malleable iron, you can't break it by tightening up. The bolt thread will strip first.

Page 43 of the new 1918 Handy Hand Book tells all about it. Look it up.

A Couple of Comments On Ease of Installation

E. H. Sunbury of Wamesit, Massachusetts, writes the following:

"The Skinner System of Irrigation is the simplest and easiest to install as well as the most practical I have ever heard of."

This is what Mr. R. Schaffler of Wheaton, Illinois, writes:

"The Skinner System can be put up by any handy man."

YOUR EARNINGS DEPEND UPON YOUR EFFICIENCY

Bailey's New Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture

Beautifully Illustrated
Contents
Right Up-To-Date

WILL INCREASE THE EFFICIENCY OF ALL WHO STUDY IT.

BAILEY'S Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture should be close at hand for quick reference by every member of your force, because it presents the combined labor and experience of the foremost North American authorities on horticultural subjects. These six magnificent volumes place at the disposal of the horticulturist, whether practical, amateur or scientific, an ample and readily accessible account of every subject which at any time may be of interest or practical use in his calling. Its range is wide, covering plants, flowers, vegetables, trees, tillage processes, tools and implements, cultural discussions, botanical history, geography, commercial markets, and a myriad items that only constant use will reveal. Every subject in the scope of this great work, in any way incident to the activities of the horticulturist has been fully covered, commercially as well as scientifically.

Six large quarto volumes. More than 3,600 pages. 24 full page exquisite color plates. 96 beautiful full page halftones. More than 4,000 text engravings. 500 Collaborators. Approximately 4,000 genera, 15,000 species, 40,000 plant names. Delivery prepaid, $35.00 the Set, cash.

"The immense wealth of practical horticultural facts and teaching contained in this work, and the ease with which they are found in it, place Bailey's STANDARD CYCLOPEDIA OF HORTICULTURE at the top. In other words, it is the Monarch of Horticultural Literature."

ORDER AT ONCE GROW FOR VICTORY

Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas Now ready for delivery

TO BLOOM FOR THANKSGIVING AND UNTIL MARCH, sow the seed in August in sand using 2 seeds in a 2-inch pot. After growth is advanced a few inches transplant to permanent positions about three inches apart.

All strains of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas contain "rogues" both as to color and the Winter flowering characteristic. The Australian varieties are almost perfectly "fixed" in both respects and are better than the American sorts. Any late bloomers can be readily distinguished as they commence to branch an inch or two above the surface of the soil, whereas the Winter-flowering plants produce a straight vine and more pointed foliage, making no lateral growth until 15 to 18 inches above the surface of the soil. The late bloomers should be eliminated as soon as they can be distinguished.

Australian Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas (We advise every florist to try a few)

BLUE FLAKES. Deep blue, pencilled over a delicate gray white ground; the best blue to date.
CÆRULEA. Delicate sky blue, sometimes a little lighter.
CONCORD BLUSH SHADES. The colors range from white blush and creamy pink to deep pink.
CONCORD CHARM. Delicate shades of white and blue; white wings and very light heliotrope standard.
CONCORD CHRISTMAS PINK SHADES. A Spencer strain of Christmas Pink coloring; as there is some variation in these they are offered as shades.
CONCORD COUNTESS. Most attractive tint of pink, the ideal flower color.
CONCORD COUNTESS IMPROVED. A larger and finer strain of Concord Countess, blush pink on white, ground, deepening at the edge of the standard. Pkt. (25 seeds.)
CONCORD CHIEF. Intense, rich deep maroon, massive Spencer form.
CONCORD DAYBREAK. Cream with standard heavily edge buff pink.
CONCORD EMPEROR. A rich glowing crimson, large blooms of excellent substance and very free flowering.
CONCORD EXQUISITE. Pale pink on rich cream ground, three on a stem. Pkt. (25 seeds.)
CONCORD PURPLE. Mauve purple, changing as the flower ages to purple blue.
CONCORD RADIANCE. A very striking shade of rosy magenta.
RUBY. A glowing light crimson-scarlet color.
SALMONEA. A rich, rosy salmon variety of great merit.
YARRAWA. Bright rose pink, with light wings, ¼ oz., (about 100 seeds) 35c., 1 oz., $1.00, lb., $12.00.

Packets of each of the above contain 50 seeds, except Concord Countess Improved and Concord Exquisite, which contain 25 seeds. Pkt. 40c. each, 5 pkt. $1.75. Except Yarrawa, as noted above.

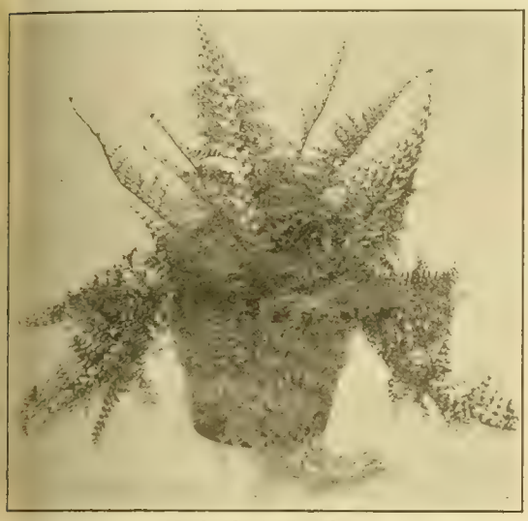
Nephrolepis Ferns for Summer Use

How the retailer may stimulate the sale of this attractive species of fern in its many varieties thus helping to tide over the dull Summer season

JOSEPH H. SPERRY



Nephrolepis Smithii

PLANTS may be divided into two general classes: those grown only for the beauty and fragrance of their flowers, and those grown for their handsome foliage only. Heliotropes, Carnations, and Azaleas are examples of the first class, and ferns, Dracænas, and Ficus elastica of the second. Some plants, to be sure, which are grown chiefly for their flowers, have handsome foliage also, and others grown primarily for their foliage produce beautiful flowers as well. An example of the former is the Cyclamen in its improved type, and of the latter some of the Rex Begonias.

Again, plants, both those grown for their flowers and those grown for their foliage, may be divided into green, or as they are sometimes called, plain leaved, and variegated leaved. In flowering plants, Geraniums furnish pronounced examples of both, and in foliage plants, ferns and palms are familiar examples of the green or plain, and Dracænas and Crotons of the variegated leaved.

Furthermore, all plants, both flowering and foliage, may be separated into those with entire leaves, a familiar example of which is the Ficus elastica, and those with leaves which are lobed or cut, or divided or dissected. The most striking examples which we have of plants with dissected leaves are those belonging to the fern family.

Upon the species and varieties of one genus of ferns, namely, the Nephrolepis, and upon their many uses, we are going to make a few remarks and suggestions. We are not going to discuss the genus from a botanical viewpoint, nevertheless it may be interesting to know that the word Nephrolepis comes from two Greek words, nephros kidney, and lepis, a scale, and that this genus of fern is called Nephrolepis because in all its species and their varieties the scale (lepis) which covers the seed or spore cases that are on the back of the fern leaves or fronds are kidney shaped. Look at the back of some of the older leaves of a Boston Fern, or any of its varieties, and even with the naked eye you can see these kidney-shaped scales.

The Boston Fern

The species of Nephrolepis Fern which has been for many years, and still is, the most popular of all ferns, is the exaltata, and the most popular variety of this is Bostoniensis, and the many variations of this variety, and the variations of the variations, now numbering in all more than a score, some of which show very little resemblance to the original species, exaltata, or its variety Bostoniensis.

Boston Ferns and their many varieties are suitable for dwelling house, garden and Summer house, pergola, and piazza use. They should not be recommended for placing in Summer in situations which are sun-kissed, wind-swept and rain deluged.

The variety Bostoniensis, when grown in a 6in. to 10in. receptacle, either pot, deep pan, or tub, and Harrisii in an 8-in. to 12-in. receptacle, make very striking plants for placing on tables, on broad piazzas of town residences, or Summer cottages, or in rustic garden or Summer houses or beneath pergolas. Each plant should have a separate table so that its beautiful fronds may hang gracefully and symmetrically on all sides of its receptacle, and the plant may have air and light on all sides. For this reason the table on which the plant stands should not be put close against the sides of the structure in which it is placed. Another way of using these large specimen plants in any of the several situations just mentioned is to suspend them in such a position that they will have free air all about them. It is better to drape the receptacles of suspended plants with Sphagnum moss, and to overlay this with green sheet moss. This sheet moss, if moistened frequently, will keep green and so give a pleasing dress to the receptacle, and furthermore will retard evaporation of moisture through the receptacle, which is always more rapid when plants are suspended. Rooseveltii may be used in 6-in. pots in the same manner as Harrisii and Boston.

Nephrolepis elegantissima

Whenever a Nephrolepis fern is desired with fronds similar to that of Boston, but of dwarfer growth, Scottii and other varieties of its type such as Teddy, Jr., may be used. These are usually grown in 4-in. to 6-in. receptacles, and may be used in city residences and Summer cottages, and on piazzas as table plants, and furthermore, as foliage plants, in window and piazza boxes and vases, in positions which are protected from the sun a considerable part of the day.

Nephrolepis Scottii

Other Attractive Sorts

The varieties of ferns so far mentioned have pinnate fronds: that is, fronds (leaves) whose pinnæ (leaflets) arranged along the strip (leaf-stem) are entire, though some of these, as in the case of Harrisii, have undulating edges. We now come to the several varieties which are bipinnate or tripinnate, that is those whose pinnæ are divided once or twice and in some cases closely imbricated and forked and twisted. Chief among these are elegantissima, Whitmanii and Whitmanii compacta, which make beautiful house plants when well grown in 5-in. to 8-in. receptacles, and elegantissima compacta, muscosa, and Smithii, which make very pretty plants in 3½-in. to 4-in. pots, especially when set in an outer bowl of blue china, for the mantelpiece, the sideboard, and the dining room table.

Speaking of the mantelpiece reminds us to say that where there is a fireplace in a town residence or Summer cottage, a beautiful effect may be produced by massing ferns of medium sizes, especially those of the Scottii type in it, and the smaller ferns, previously mentioned, on the mantel in pretty outer bowls of china.

We have by no means spoken exhaustively of the different meritorous varities of Nephrolepis ferns. We have Scholzelii, Wagneri and Giatrassii and the new variety President Wilson of the Scottii type; superba and superbissima of the closely imbricated, twisted and crested type, and a few of the very delicate more highly dissected form, like Smithii.

Increasing the Sale of Ferns

In order to increase his Summer sales as much as possible, the retail florist should have in his store good specimens of the several types and sizes of Nephrolepis ferns, and should be keen in pointing out the various positions and ways the several sizes and types of these ferns can be used. He should give the buyer some instruction in caring for his ferns, such as the desirability of a subdued light but not semi-darkness; the objections to strong draughts of wind, but the advantage of free air all around the plant; the fact that the lighter and more airy the position the more water the fern requires, and vice versa; that the soil in which the fern is growing should be kept always moist throughout, but not muddy, and that the plants should not be subjected to overhead watering or set out in the rain storm, unless the fronds are first raised up and confined with strips of soft cotton fabric to a strong stake stuck firmly in the center of the receptacle.

Just a word, in closing, about salesmanship: "If the mountain will not come to Mahomet, then Mahomet must go to the mountain"; that is, if a customer comes into your store and does not ask for a fern, before he leaves tactfully call his attention to the ferns, and quietly explain their Summer uses; try to learn where he is passing his Summer, and to show him how suitable one or more ferns would be for his use, and how the sight of them would give to his daily life a quiet pleasure. In short, do not be one of that kind of a salesman who just stands behind the counter with the palms of his hands resting on it, and when a customer comes in has no initiative in making sales.

Value and Methods of Firing Various Coals

An inquiry recently reached this office as to the comparative value of Cannel coal versus Lehigh Valley Highland Egg coal. The question is partly answered in our Question Box column, this issue. Being of an interesting character, we wrote our heating expert Mr. McArthur for full particulars which are given herewith, including a fund of information in the material which follows; every word of it will be found of value to those having to do with coal and firing, more particularly as it also takes up the best methods of handling slack or screenings.

We preface one article with the statement that a British thermal heat unit is that which will raise one pound of water one degree. Good anthracite coal has from 13,000 to 14,000 B. T. U. per pound.

Relative Heat Value Units of Anthracite and Cannel Coal

There are quite a number of different grades of anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania; I have before me, quoted from a standard authority, the following values:

Anthracite Coal

Pennsylvania buckwheat.....12,200 B. T. U. per lb.
Pennsylvania Wilkesbarre.....11,801 B. T. U. per lb.
Pennsylvania Scranton.....12,149 B. T. U. per lb.
Pennsylvania cross creek.....13,723 B..T. U. per lb.
Pennsylvania Lehigh.....12,423 B. T. U. per lb.
Pennsylvania Wharton Valley...15,000 B. T. U. per lb.
Pennsylvania Buck Mountain....15,072 B. T. U. per lb.

Cannel Coal

Pennsylvania Cannel Coal.....13,153 B. T. U. per lb.
Kentucky Cannel Coal.....15,198 B. T. U. per lb.
Indiana Cannel Coal.....13,097 B. T. U. per lb.

From the above data 2118 pounds of Pennsylvania Lehigh coal contains the same amount of B. T. U. as 2000 pounds of Pennsylvania Cannel coal.

Cannel coal is a free-burning bituminous coal and is generally used for open fireplaces. It is very easily ignited. It is mined in small quantities and is not generally used in heating boilers. At $15 per ton it is not to be compared with anthracite coal at $9 when used in heating boilers.

S. B. Flagg of the Bureau of Mines has conducted a series of tests as to how to burn bituminous coal economically in heating boilers, which should be of value to florists using bituminous coal, slack or screenings. His findings are as follows:

(1) In burning bituminous coals in large heating boilers the fuel bed should not be seriously disturbed until the coal has become well coked, that is, until the gaseous part of the coal has been largely driven off.

(2) Both caking and non-caking types of coal may be used satisfactorily in boilers of this type if properly handled.

(3) The presence of a moderate proportion of screenings mixed with the lump coal causes the fresh charge of coal to heat more gradually, and the emission of smoke is kept down more easily. Therefore such a proportion of screenings is an advantage.

(4) Increasing the proportion of screenings in the coal necessitates the use of a stronger draft in order to carry the same load. Smaller firing charges must also be used and more frequent attention given. The tendency of caking coals to cake is increased and this also means that the fire must have more frequent attention.

(5) One large charge of coal fired by the spreading method will result in a longer emission of dense smoke than the total emission of such smoke from two charges of half the size fired some time apart and by the alternate method.

(6) With some coals, moderate charges fired by the alternate method necessitates less frequent attention to the boiler than larger charges fired by the spreading method; caking coals having a considerable proportion of fine coal or screenings are usually among these. Conversely, a fire will usually require more frequent attention when a lumpy, caking coal, free from screenings, or a non-caking coal is fired in moderate charges by the alternate method.

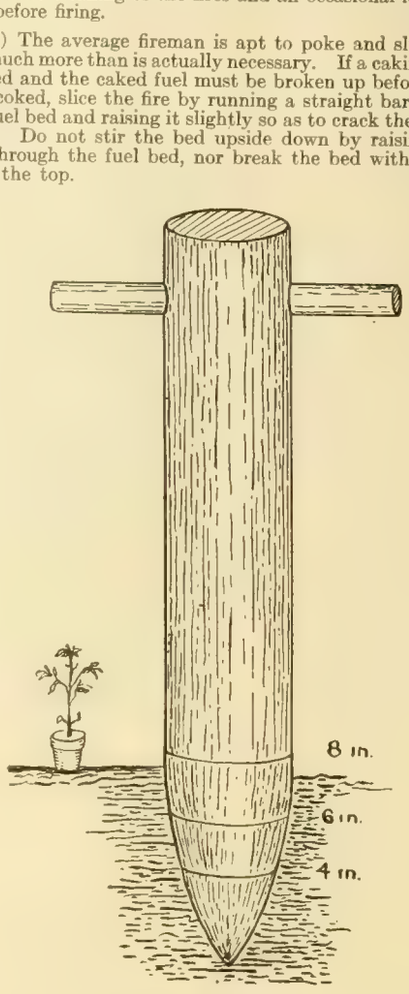
(7) The number of tests made was not large enough to justify conclusions regarding the relative efficiency with which a coal may be burned by the two methods of firing, but the author believes that in actual service over considerable periods, better results will be obtained by the alternate method.

(8) Frequency of cleaning the fires will be determined by the character of the coal and the rate at which it is burned, but with most coals the fires should be cleaned once or twice in 24 hours in ordinary weather.

(9) If the alternate method of firing is employed, the cleaning should be done just before firing the fresh charge, and only half the grate cleaned at a time; then little or no smoke will result from the cleaning, because the side of the fire on which there is uncoked coal is not disturbed.

(10) All three of the coals fired by the alternate method in the tests described were burned at rates corresponding to the heating conditions during the most of the Winter, with scarcely any manipulation of the fuel bed except the cleaning of the fires and an occasional leveling just before firing.

(11) The average fireman is apt to poke and slice the fire much more than is actually necessary. If a caking coal is used and the caked fuel must be broken up before it is well coked, slice the fire by running a straight bar under the fuel bed and raising it slightly so as to crack the caked mass. Do not stir the bed upside down by raising the bar through the fuel bed, nor break the bed with a bar from the top.



Effective method of sinking pots. See text.

(12) If the fuel bed is covered with a charge of fresh fuel in a layer more than 5in. thick, the new charge, unless it is very free from slack, is apt to have a smothering effect. Then the output of the boiler will be correspondingly decreased and, especially if the spreading method of firing is employed, the mass of fresh coal will usually have to be broken once or twice before the fire will pick up. Consequently, the maximum firing charge should not be much thicker than 5in., and for caking coals containing considerable slack it should not be more than 4in. thick. Of course, when a fire is to be kept banked heavier charges may be used.

(13) Do not fire large lumps of coal. Break all lumps into pieces no larger than fist size.

(14) Large heating boilers do not require an intense draft to meet any reasonable demands for heat, if the fuel is clean and the fuel bed is kept in proper condition, but the draft must be properly controlled. (Where slack or screenings only are used they are generally burned under a forced draft.)

(15) The damper regulator should work freely with changes in steam pressure and should close the swinging draft-opening in the ash pit door before it starts to open the check draft in the smoke pipe.

(16) The doors on the front of the boiler should fit snugly; special care should be taken to prevent any material wedging between the doors and the front and thus admitting air when or where it ought to be prevented from entering.

(17) Do not allow clinkers to accumulate in the fire or too great a quantity of ashes on the grates. Be careful however, in shaking the grates not to shake through unburned fuel.

(18) In ordinary or severe weather keep an active fuel bed averaging 10in. to 12in. deep. In milder weather the depth of the active fuel may be decreased by keeping a layer of ashes on the grate under the live coals.

(19) Keep ashes removed from the ash pit.

(20) Keep flue surfaces clean by brushing at least once a week.

Labor Saving Devices

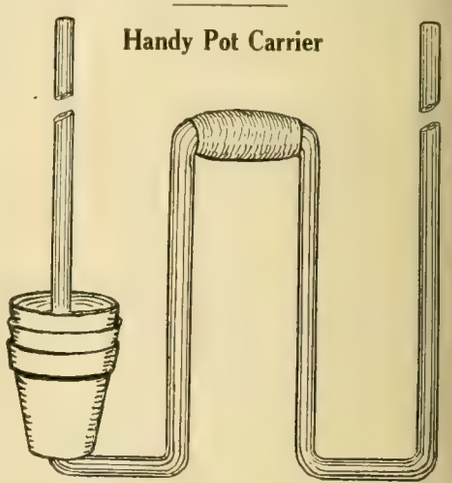
Effective Method of Sinking Pots

When plants in 4in. to 8in. pots, such as Roses, Aza leas, Genistas, Ericas or decorative plants are brougl outside for the Summer or for hardening off, it is dif cult to make the pots stay firm. To accomplish th quickly and well I use a round post about 4ft. long an about 4in. in diameter. Near the upper end I fix handle, as shown in the accompanying drawing. Th point of the implement should not be too long. Afte the plants in pots have been brought out to the pla where they are to be sunk, I take this tool in both hanc and make a hole of the required depth. By using mo or less pressure I can make the hole as large and deep as required and by moving the device around wit a circular motion, but keeping the point stationary, can make the opening still larger. If the soil is e tremely hard it can be loosened with a spading for The plant, when placed in the hole, remains firm an may be allowed to stay there all Summer. It does n dry out quickly and is not knocked over by the wind.— Frank Josifko, Madison, Conn.

(The foregoing method of sinking pots described b Mr. Josifko is similar to that given by him on p. 89 of The Exchange of May 4, in which he suggests th use of the dibber for making holes in the ground fo sinking small pots. The implement he uses for larg size pots will, we believe, be found very effective. Any one who has tried to set out pots from 4in. to 8in. b the ordinary methods knows how difficult it is.—Ed.)

Handy Pot Carrier



Handy Pot Carrier

The sketch accompanying shows a handy pot carrier. Of course on large places there are facilities for handling large numbers of pots but on the small place either flats or baskets are generally used. With these only a comparatively small number of pots can be carried at one time, whereas by this device and by using a carrier in each hand a fair-sized man can carry with ease 140 3½-in. pots, or a proportionately smaller number of a larger size.

The carrier is simply a ½-in. rod bent over on itself as shown in the illustration, the outside vertical part of the rod being about 4-in. from the inner vertical portion. In using the device the weight of the pots is allowed to rest against the body and by employing two carriers at the same time, one in each hand, the weight is evenly balanced as it is in carrying a pail of water in each hand. Pots from 3½-in. up to 6-in. may be placed on the same carrier; the rod goes right through the pots and they cannot fall off.

Carnations of Today

Some Hints on Their Culture

With the average retailing grower, whether big or small, Carnations are usually the main Winter and Spring crop for cut flower purposes. We find a bench containing 200 to 300 White and Pink Enchantress in the establishment of the man who burns less than 40 tons of soft coal during the Winter months and so on up to a dozen or more houses and as many and more varieties with the larger growers. There haven't come out of late years so very many new and wonderful varieties. It seems almost as if we had reached a limit, so to speak, in regard to size, stem and color, but even out of those sorts brought to light in the past 15 years we just have a very few left, and of these again only a comparatively small number of growers handle any quite as well as they were able to do in former years. I wonder sometimes whether we are not getting gradually away from the Carnation and are picking up other flowers to take its place. Not to say that Carnations are not as popular as they used to be, or that some of the newer sorts are not wonderful, or that the specialist isn't turning out fancy stock, but more and more growers appear each year to be devoting increased bench space to other stock. They find certain annuals as profitable, if not more so, than benches devoted to Carnations, which apparently don't do as well with them as was the case in former years, when they didn't give them any more attention—very likely not as much—nor were as well acquainted with the plants' requirements. I am not able to give a good reason for this but we are likely to let up even much more in the number of plants grown, as the smaller grower finds a ready market for other stock, or if by chance someone is fortunate enough to give us a new strain of Carnations which will not only produce extra large flowers but which will turn out extra free bloomers, and which will give fair returns under ordinary treatment. I don't want to go back to Tidal Wave, Lizzie McGowan or Wm. Scott, but these sorts surely were producers. They didn't need the culture nor the houses required today, and if it were possible to infuse some of the blood of these old sorts into the beautiful, larger kinds we have today, but which are rather shy in flowering, it would bring new life into many florists' establishments with regard to the amount of space devoted to Carnations.

Housing the Plants

For those who grow Carnations, the housing of the plants will require more attention now than anything else, and the sooner this is attended to the better. The flowers pay during Midwinter, and in order to cut good ones on long stems during late Fall well established plants are necessary. You cannot wait until September to fill the benches; nothing is gained by that. If the work is done at once and the plants receive fair treatment afterward quite a crop of flowers can be cut during the early part of October. Plants lifted now and brought indoors will become re-established in just half the time required by those which are replanted in six weeks from now. If you intend housing Carnations at all do everything possible to get through with the work; it is better all around and surely means money in your pocket.

The Best Plants for Housing

Some growers are under the impression that it is of no use to house the plants until they have developed into large specimens and that up to that time they are really just as well off in the fields; but this is not so, for the larger the plants the more difficult it is for them to recover from the effects of transplanting. A plant with from six to eight healthy shoots from the base, no matter whether they are 4in. or 6in. in height, is about as satisfactory a plant for early housing as you can get, although a little smaller or larger doesn't hurt. Plants which have been in flower for several months are not fit for housing. It is far better to have plants too small than too large; let them make their growth inside; there is plenty of time for a small plant to catch up if planted in July or the early part of August. If for any reason your stock has suffered in any way outdoors for the want of moisture, and the plants are very small but in a healthy condition otherwise, use several of them to make up a plant when benching them.

Have the Benches Ready for Planting

Before you can start lifting it is necessary that everything be ready for planting. Many growers make it a rule to fill the benches with soil several weeks ahead of time, watering the soil to keep it moist, and using a hoe to work it over several times, thus killing the first crop of weeds at the same time. With a heavy soil in particular it is necessary to have it in the right shape in order to make planting easier. Soil which is either too dry or too wet makes planting a poor job and doesn't benefit the plants in the least. Nothing in the operation of housing the plants is more important than to do the work as quickly as possible, which means to have everything ready and make the work as agreeable as possible. It shouldn't be a matter of finding out how quickly the plants can be set in the benches, but how well and quickly they can be planted.

Lifting and Planting

Whether a heavy or light soil prevails a spading fork is as good a tool as any to lift the plants with. You don't need roots a foot long, but the more small, fibrous roots you can get to hang onto the plants the better. Don't throw the freshly lifted stock around or let the plants lie about in the sun; get them to the houses or potting shed as soon as dug, cleaning off any decayed or yellow foliage. All there really is to the planting itself is to make a hole plenty large enough, spread the roots out as much as possible, press the soil down as firmly as you can around each plant and see to it that the plant gets into the soil just about as deep as it was out in the field. Get your rows straight as to space between them; for field grown stock it depends a great deal on the size plants you have and on the variety; 10in. x 10in. is about right for the average-sized plants.

Watering and Care After Planting

The first watering is very important and should be done thoroughly. Don't use too much force but put all the water on the bench the soil can hold; that watering will most likely be sufficient, especially with heavy soil, for four or five days. In the meantime a light spraying three times on sunny days will be of great benefit to help the plants to become re-established. While the soil around the roots must be kept moist at all times, an excess of water is every bit as bad as not enough. Examine the soil from day to day and don't water until you are convinced that the soil is ready for it. Shading the houses should be done before the benches are planted, and if you haven't a great deal of it to do, a heavy mud wash is as good as anything. Every rain will take it off, but it is quickly applied again. A dark house for a day or two after planting benefits the plants, but after that you must start in slowly to give more light. Take off a little of the shading each day so that in 10 to 12 days you have most of the shading removed, for the plants need all the sunlight possible when once the roots have taken hold.

Report on a Gladiolus Collection

At quite an opportune time and as the season is fast approaching its height, we have been favored by Geo. Arnold, Ensenore, N. Y., with a succinct description of the behavior of his collection, embracing some 21 varieties of Gladioli, a perusal of which will well reward those interested in the culture of these bulbs. The use of the "dock" spade may furnish some a new idea of the correct implement for rogueing bulbs generally. Mr. Arnold says: "My little collection of 'Glads' is not the best in the world but it has turned out well, and it seemed to me that an unbiased description from actual field notes by a grower of some experience might be useful."

Just in from the Gladiolus field, where I have been taking out rogues with a dock spade, I find this implement, with its 2in. wide blade, a splendid tool for this purpose. Some small flowered, undesirable colors were scattered through the mixed lot, and the narrow spade got rid of them, root and branch, without disturbing their neighbors. Pulling out by the stalk was tried in other years and found unsatisfactory; many of them broke off leaving corms in the ground; and some of these were picked up when digging. Simply tying an ordinary shipping tag to a stalk proved equally futile, as many of the weatherbeaten tags were overlooked until after the stalk had been cut and the corm thrown in with the rest of the row. For marking out good named varieties that are out of place a handful of wire stakes is carried along; these have a ring in the top, to which the stalk is securely tied. A large tag helps to locate the strays at digging time and they are carefully cleaned out before starting on the main crop.

This is the eighth day of intense heat, mostly with cloudless sky. A good time to try out varieties. My planting, which has grown to several thousand corms of blooming size, is made up of some 20 varieties, mostly of commercial types. The problem of supplying the families on this estate with an abundance of bloom of good colors, for an extended season, from a small initial outlay, has been satisfactorily solved; and it is so like the problem of the small commercial grower that the solution is offered for the help of beginners.

By sticking pretty closely to varieties of moderate price, and by getting second size corms from a large grower, the original purchase price of 3000 was kept below $60. They are grown on soil that produces moderate crops of Potatoes, and receive the same treatment. Planted at one time, this year the middle of April, on soil of even character, a comparison of varieties ought to yield worth while data. The following notes are given in the order that the varieties came into bloom. All are good growers unless otherwise mentioned, and most of them increase rapidly if the small cormels are grown on.

Willie Wigman. The first to flower this season, and now out of bloom. It is my recollection that it is usually a few days later than Halley, but at any rate it is very early. White, with solid crimson blotch. The large, beautiful flowers are widely opened, and the medium length stems bunch well. Think it would be a good seller.

Halley. Rich salmon pink. A tall, strong grower, and extra early. Beautiful in mass, with a rich, softly glowing tone that is very effective. Increases rapidly. Nearly self color.

Prince of Wales. This was a "flyer" in high priced stock. Will be fine for the commercial grower when the price gets down within reach. Early as Halley, larger in plant and flower, and handsomer. A wonderful color. "Pure salmon" is one of the attempts at classifying its shade.

Lilly Lehman. Earliest and most beautiful white I have seen, but does not bunch well. Pink tinge, no markings. Flowers large with edges ruffled. Splendid for design work. So many stems and side branches that a plant that has not been cut makes a huge bouquet. Fine for the retailer, who is also a grower, and could use all the side flowers by cutting short stems. Unfortunately, the arrangement of flowers on the stem makes it hard to handle after they begin to open.

Baron Hulot. In spite of its small flowers this is still my favorite of all the "blue" shades. The best of them are of doubtful value for the trade, but interesting and called for by the amateur. Very tall and slender, with a good number of flowers open at once. Deep violet, with a velvety richness that is attractive.

Mrs. Frank Pendleton. Probably one of the best of the purely decorative varieties for trade purposes. A rich pink with bold dark blotch, it makes a fine show and holds up well. Flowers very large, on long stems that bunch well, but not many open at once.

Princepine. Season of last. A brilliant scarlet with white in throat, and one of the best of that type. Large flowers on stems of medium length. Bunches well and very effective; but only few flowers open at once and soon burns in this trying time, a fault not noted in two preceding seasons.

Chicago White. An excellent commercial kind. Flowers pure white, lightly pencilled on the lower petals. The small flowers are closely set on the long straight stem, and a good number open at once. Stands up well under this extreme heat, and seems well adapted for shipping and handling. Earliness, combined with other qualities noted, more than offset lack of size in blooms.

Panama. A charming shade of pink. Extra large flower, well rounded out in form, but lacking in substance. For two years it has bloomed here, during cool, showery weather, and was quite satisfactory for home cutting. Now it is badly shrivelled with the heat. Plant rather stocky, so that stems are not long in spite of vigorous growth and broad leaves.

Mrs. Francis King. A large, light scarlet; very showy in the bunch. A vigorous grower with extra long stems.

Schwaben. Immense plants, largest in the field, bearing great spikes of creamy yellow flowers, with dainty markings in the throat.

Niagara. Practically the same season as Schwaben; similar in color; and a good second in size. Niagara lacks the marking in the throat, but has not the clear color of Schwaben, being flushed with red.

Glory of Holland. A pinkish white, free from markings; in this resembling Lilly Lehman. It follows Chicago White, so that the cuttings overlap. Larger than the latter in flower and plant. Two to three long stems from each corm, on which a good number of flowers are open at once. An extremely vigorous grower and multiplies rapidly; unusual qualities in an all white variety.

America. This old favorite is useless here. The flowers are as large and well shaped as ever, and the color just as clear, but all the other varieties on trial surpass it in length of stem; and several of the pinks have a more desirable shade of color, to our notion.

Loveliness. Well named. Large well shaped flowers; delicate pink with daintiest of markings. Plants large and flowers of good substance.

Pink Perfection. Perfection as to color, all right. Makes America look blue by comparison. Extra strong grower. Several of the large flowers open at once make a wonderful mass of color. Its one defect is growing many crooked stems which are hard to bunch.

Europa. Not yet showing color. This lovely pure white flower is not adapted to our conditions. Needs the best of soil and cultivation. Last year, with ideal weather conditions, it did very well. Now it looks poor.

Yellow Hammer. Well named. The plants are yellow; and the hammer is for the foreign gentleman who sold me a bunch of diseased corms. No bloom as yet, and very sickly plants.

War. This very late variety is well worth waiting for. A splendid great blood red flower, on an extra long, strong stem. One of the most satisfactory in the collection.

Glory of Noordwyck. Now in bloom. A high priced variety for trial. A very large light yellow, without markings. The flower is finer than Niagara or Schwaben; but the plant appears to lack vitality.

Empress of India. Now in bloom, is one of the very dark colors that has a pleasing richness. Almost black, with reddish glow like dark wine. Excellent habit of plant.

GEO. ARNOLD.

European Notes

The middle of July finds us fairly well satisfied with the general condition of our growing crops, now that almost persistent rains during the past seven days have penetrated the soil to the depth of at least 1ft., and washed off the dust and vermin that alternately choked or sucked the life out of the most promising seed bearing plants. When it is remembered that for nearly seven weeks not one shower fell in some of the most important seed growing districts the marvel is that so many plants are still alive.

Turnip seed has already been cut in many places, and, judging the crop by rubbed out samples, the drought has reduced the size and weight of the seed but has fully matured it at the same time. New crop seed is already offered to the retail trade, but beyond the fact that it usually grows more quickly there is little to recommend it. Rutabaga, where it has not been devoured by vermin, is nearly ready for harvest; some small lots growing on very light land have already been cut. Purchasers must pay a long price for this article next season. Mangel Wurzel was looking sickly in many places and the plants were badly infested with vermin, but it is not too late for this crop to benefit by recent rains. This latter remark applies with equal force to all the Brassicas that are still standing.

As regards annual crops Cress is certainly the most promising, and Mustard in low lying lands is looking quite promising just now. On the other hand, as a result of the drought at a critical period of their growth the plants of Summer Radishes and Spinach are much more dwarf than usual and as regards the latter the crops will be correspondingly short.

Looking ahead to 1919 crop growers who have been fortunate enough to keep their plants alive during the drought can now easily transplant them into their permanent quarters with fair prospects of success.

A Dissertation on Seed Bags

I may perhaps be late in advising many of your readers of the importance of securing their supply of seed bags and packets for next year's business, but though I am sure most of the large houses have already placed their orders, it would be well for those who haven't not to delay any longer.

Kraft paper is daily going up in price, and as this is really the most serviceable and lasting of all materials for seedsmen's use, it would be unfortunate if the price soared so high as to put it beyond the reasonable limit that they can afford to pay.

Jute bags have, to a certain extent, already replaced kraft paper for many uses, particularly for 1 lb. to 2lb. bags, the difference in price, however, is not great, probably now not more than a cent or two per lb. On account of its lighter color it is better than kraft, both printing and writing showing up clearer, but it is not so smoothly finished as the former, and is more liable to break in the turn and fold when filling and tying.

Other cheaper papers lately offered as kraft substitutes come under various names such as kraft manilla, jute manilla, cement rope, buckskin, etc. They are mostly mixtures of rag and wood pulp— the greater the percentage of the latter the cheaper the price. Some appear to be fairly tough, but are more fitted for counter sales and light enclosures than for distant and heavy shipments, where the constant rubbing and rough handling are liable to wear through.

An important point to bear in mind when buying is this: Never buy more than a year's supply of manilla or manilla composition bags at a time, or any that are made from a wood pulp material. Where exposed to light or air, or when kept in a warm, dry atmosphere they "dry out," become brittle and break after very slight use. Kraft and jute bags, on the other hand, will keep for years without deteriorating.

Never use a manilla bag as a container for larger quantities than half a pound —four ounces really is the correct limit. Use 60 lb. kraft or jute for the ½ lb., pound (pint) and quart sizes; 70 lb. weight for the 3 pint, two and three quart; larger sizes require 80 lb. and 100 lb. kraft, according to their capacity.

Colored Picture Packets

These Should Be Ordered Without Delay

There is no doubt that the picture packets are always the best sellers, and the more true to life the reproduction is the greater will be the demand for that variety. Exaggerated, over-colored designs are not recommended, in fact they are to be condemned for they invariably disappoint the customer when the article, whether flower or vegetable, does not come up to expectations as depicted on the packet. Another thing, the envelope must be backed up with absolutely reliable contents, even if only a nickel packet. People do not want to pay for the packet only when buying seeds.

It is difficult to get a large selection of colored packets to choose from, the number of firms manufacturing these in America is not large, and the few there are, with one or two exceptions, do not turn out very creditable work, at least from a flower critic's point of view; that is my opinion. With the source of supply limited, it is, therefore, very difficult to procure different packets from those of your nearest competitor, and though one dealer may buy the very best seeds he can procure, they look no better when all "dressed up" in their bright packets than the other fellow's, who may be paying only half as much for his seeds but is using the same picture packets.

Most of the large mail order houses have their own copyrighted colored packets, but these have cost a pile of money in past years, and the present time is not a good one to venture into the expensive production of the necessary colored drawings and plates. I understand the present demands on the resources of the manufacturers of these stock colored packets is very great, and in order not to risk disappointment it would perhaps be well for those who have not already done so to get their requirements in this line taken care of at once.

New York Seed Trade

Up to this date, Monday, Aug. 5, no seedsman or importer in this city as far as we can learn, has received any direct information that French bulbs have been shipped. Some of the leading seedsmen have placed no orders as yet for French bulbs, but should French bulbs arrive will depend upon buying from importers sufficient to fill their orders. Some of the seedsmen, in view of present conditions, will not send out a bulb catalog this Autumn.

American grown Narcissi of several varieties are noted at Vaughan's Seed Store, 41-43 Barclay st. It is reported at this store that new crop Cyclamen, Sweet Pea, and Pansy seeds are in demand and that high quality and low trade prices on Freesia bulbs interest many florists, for early planting.

"IT'S A GREAT HELP," Say Our Subscribers

has just returned from an enjoyable vacation in the Berkshires.

A recent telegram to this firm announces the marriage of Peter Henderson, son of the late Alfred Henderson, now a member of the U. S. Aviation Corps, to a Chicago lady at San Antonio, Texas.

Harry A. Bunyard, well known among the craft in this country for many years, and recently with the Nitrate Agencies Co. of this city, has become a Y. M. C. A. secretary, and will sail shortly to engage in overseas' work.

Chicago Seed Trade

A report has been received here that the first shipment of French bulbs is already afloat.

In the event that the Holland boats will not carry bulbs this season there is a possibility that we may get them through England. Correspondence from Holland growers indicate that there is a move to this effect under consideration.

Regardless of all the difficulties that beset thecatalog makers for the Fall and Winter season the usual wholesale and retail catalogs and lists for Vaughan's Seed Store for the Autumn of 1918 are well under way.

Vaughan's Seed Store is exhibiting an assortment of new and rare Gladioli that are of more than ordinary interest. J. C. Vaughan, who is at present in New York, expects to leave with the New York delegation for the St. Louis Convention. T. D. Long of the Chicago store will also represent this house at the convention.

Large growers of Gladioli in the Middle West have grave doubts as to the possibility of securing sufficient labor at digging time to lift and store their crops. The labor problem grows more serious from week to week.

The harvesting of the Onion set crops is in progress in the Chicago district. There are various reports from the various sections in which these crops are grown, some good, others not so good, but a general estimate is that the crops will fall only a little below the average. Sales for Autumn delivery are being made; $2.50 has been offered for whites.

Kentucky Seed Notes

A better movement of Bluegrass seed has been experienced during the week, as dealers sat tight, and farmers began delivering seed at prices quoted by the dealers, who have been offering around $1.35 for uncleaned seed, which will make about $2.60 opening market seed. A few cars of seed have been cleaned, but sales have been very light so far.

Orchard grass seed so far is moving slowly, as Wheat threshing has not been completed and men and machinery for handling orchard grass cannot be secured. The crop is of good quality, and of promising size.

Onion sets are steadily improving in quality and some little speculative buying has been noted. Yellow sets are quoted at $6 to $7 a barrel to the farmer; and whites at $7 to $8. However, the buying so far has been comparatively light.

The seed jobbing house of Hardin, Hamilton & Lewman, Inc., has filed amended articles of incorporation increasing its capital stock from $50,000 to $100,000. This concern has been very active this season in shipping first crop Potatoes in car lots to the North and East.

Amended articles of incorporation were recently filed by the National Seed Co., of Louisville, in which the capital is increased from $5000 to $50,000.

George E. Hays, president of the Louisville Seed Co., has accepted an appointment as assistant secretary at one of the Y. M. C. A. canteens at Camp Taylor, Louisville, and will not be very active in the seed trade this year, as he will give his entire attention to the Y. M. C. A. work. The business will be continued as usual.

A big change has been made in the old jobbing house of Lewis & Chambers, from which Samuel R. Chambers, one of the pioneer seed merchants of the city, and his son, Kirby L. Chambers, have withdrawn and organized the Chambers Seed Co, which will operate a warehouse, but will have offices in the Board of Trade Building. The Lewis Implement & Seed Co., succeeds the firm of Lewis & Chambers. The officers are Fred N. Lewis, president, Hamilton H. Lewis, vice-president and treasurer, and Charles H.

Our Advertising Man's Corner

MAKING IT KNOWN

There are some who believe that the telegraphic idea should provide a far greater outlet for sales than is being enjoyed at the present time.

We run the danger of being regarded as radical when we say that it is our opinion that the "telegraphic idea," in the hands of those in some other industries, would have been before this taken greater advantage of and larger benefits extracted therefrom.

We admit that the trade has the benefit of two live wire associations in connection with the plan, with representative lists of members, and that many retailers report wonderful business from time to time, especially on holiday occasions.

The step, however, that we would like to see taken would be the education of the masses to the idea.

We cannot think of a better ad., with more far reaching results for the S. A. F. and O. H. Publicity Committee to include in its schedule in the national magazines than a clear and simple statement of the method by which flowers are telegraphed.

The appearance of this would result in many tens of thousands throughout the country becoming acquainted with something that was entirely new to them. The retailers in those towns where the telegraphic idea has been exploited will be apt to doubt that statement, but it is not to be denied that the telegraphic idea, although well developed in certain territories, is not known to an appreciable extent to the people generally.

One of the most encouraging factors surrounding the telegraphic business is that the idea seems to "whet the appetite" of those who hear of it for the first time. We have particularly noticed that when the method has been explained to an outsider, immediately there has been shown a desire to send flowers to a distant friend.

"Tell all the public" is the way we would sum up the effort to bring more customers to the store of the retailer.

"I am very much pleased with the results from my last advertisements.—George Milne, 44 Lincoln St., Winchester, Mass."

"Please discontinue my ad. as I am sold out.—W. S. Mudge, Gasport, N. Y."

Allen, secretary. Mr. Chambers had been in the seed business for more than 40 years, doing business at one time as Watts & Chambers and later under his own name. In 1891 he formed a partnership with Fred N. Lewis, who at that time was conducting an implement store. The present Lewis concern will continue handling implements and seeds as heretofore.

W. P. Hall, of the retail seed house of the Hall Seed Co., reports one of the most active years that he has ever experienced, and is much pleased with results obtained in seeds, implement and vehicles. O. V. N. S.

Increase Yield by Seed Selection

Last year the extension division of the New Jersey State Agri. College collected Tomato seed from 32 prominent early Tomato growers in the State. Most of the samples were taken from strains of the famous Earliana variety. Plants were grown in Gloucester County, in lots of 40 from each set of seed, and a crop was produced under very uniform conditions. Careful picking records were kept each day by the county farm demonstrator. The fruits were counted, graded and accurately weighed. Since each lot was grown under similar conditions, it may be assumed that the differences in the earliness, yield and quality between the lots were due in a large measure to the inherited qualities of the seed. Some interesting results were obtained, indicating a few very important factors in seed selection which materially affect production.

Plants from strong germinating seed averaged 9 ozs. more fruit than plants from weak seed. Seed saved early in the growth of the mother plants produced 13 ozs. more fruit and an earlier crop than seed selected from the same mother plants after they had developed most of their crop. Plants which produced smooth fruits gave an average yield of over 1 lb. more per plant than plants which produced rough fruit. Furthermore, plants which produced extra large fruit gave 1 lb. less yield than the plants which yielded medium-sized fruit.

The State Agri. College advises that careful consideration of these factors by the Tomato grower when selecting his seed, should result in a heavier and earlier yield in the following season. Since New Jersey annually produces nearly 50,000 acres of Tomatoes, an increase of a ton per acre per year due to more intelligent seed selection would mean an enormous economic advancement.

New York State Crops Short

Although the farmers of New York State have made every effort to increase production, the weather has been against them, says the State College of Agriculture. A huge acreage of Wheat was planted in the Fall, but the percentage that was Winter-killed was the greatest on record. Grass and Alfalfa and fruit crops were also affected, as well as Corn and Beans, so that the present prospects for all crops are more than two per cent. below the average.

Burpee's Sweet Peas

NEW Winter-Flowering SPENCERS

THE coal problem is one of great concern to the commercial florist, and there appears to be no alternative except to produce such crops as can be grown with the smallest amount of heat. Sweet Peas can be successfully grown under conditions that would not allow production of other popular flowers. We recommend to our florist friends that they sow Sweet Peas under glass for a commercial Winter crop. Sweet Peas are the logical paying crop for the coming Winter. They may be grown with very little heat

Vegetable Crops Under Glass and in the Open

THE EXCHANGE will be glad to answer in these columns any questions from subscribers on vegetable growing underglass or in the open.

The Fall Crop of Greenhouse Lettuce

The first Fall crop of Lettuce to be planted in the greenhouse about the first week in September should be started now. Lettuce has always been one of the best greenhouse crops, since it can be sold for a price within reach of most people. At the same time it brings in very good returns to the grower and not much coal is needed to keep up the temperatures for proper growth. For these reasons Lettuce will be the best cool crop among the vegetables to use this Winter.

Another reason why Lettuce is a good crop is that three or four crops may be grown on the same benches between September and February or March, when Spring crops that require higher temperatures are planted. This, of course, depends upon the size of the Lettuce when the crop is cut. If the Lettuce is sold by weight a longer time is allowed to produce heavier heads, and in this case about three crops may be grown before March 1. If it is cut when the plants are smaller, some growers will be able to harvest four crops before March 1.

In order to have a succession so there will be Lettuce ready to cut at any time, it is best to sow small quantities of seed at intervals of a week to have plants coming on all the time. The seed may be sown on the greenhouse benches or in flats. Some growers sow the seed broadcast, not too thickly, and others sow it in rows. The main thing is to secure an even stand of seedlings and avoid excessive waste of seeds and plants. In damp weather when the damping-off disease kills many seedlings, it is better to sow the seed in rows, in porous soil, which will not permit water to stand in pools on top.

Greenhouse Lettuce is always transplanted once before it is planted on the benches or beds where it is to mature. When the first rough leaf appears the seedlings are shifted to other benches or flats and set 2in. to 2½in. apart; here they may remain until they are about 5in. tall. Thus, nearly one-half of the time required to grow the crop is spent while the plants are at these close distances, and this gives an opportunity to grow more crops on the ground where the crops mature. Those who expect to grow Lettuce should make their first sowings now, particularly in the North. Southern greenhouse growers may sow a few days later, since early September may be a little too warm in the greenhouses for Lettuce.

Control of Moisture in the Soil

Early maturity and the quality of vegetables are dependent upon a constant supply of moisture in the soil. Most vegetables are low growing and many of them do not shade the ground between the rows. The ground exposed to the sun will evaporate a great deal of moisture. The two best ways to retain moisture in the soil are, first, to maintain a mulch and, second, to control the weeds. The mulch may be a dust mulch, made by working up the surface soil in fine shape between the rows by cultivation. Different kinds of materials, such as straw, hay, etc., may be used as mulches, and cultivation will cease. Perhaps too much emphasis has been laid upon the maintaining of soil mulches to conserve moisture. It is certain that moisture is controlled in this way, but I believe the most important way to control the moisture is to control the weeds. I believe that a piece of ground covered with weeds will lose more moisture than another piece of ground of the same kind and size, which is exposed to the sun.

For this reason we cultivate the soil to control the weeds, and by doing this there will be a soil mulch. In addition to soil moisture weeds take plant food out of the soil. In home gardens it is a good plan to throw all weeds on a pile where they may rot and be returned later to the garden. This will add humus to the soil.

Low growing tender vegetables like Celery, Carrots, etc., are easily injured by large lumps of soil falling on them. With such crops the soil is kept in fine condition to prevent this injury. This naturally controls weeds and maintains a mulch. It is very important to control the weeds, and more emphasis should be laid on this part of the control of soil moisture.

Syrup made from the sap of Birch trees is a foodstuff rivaling in substance and flavor the syrup derived from Maple trees, it is stated by the U. S. Food Administration.

Leaf Blight of the Tomato

Leaf blight is the most important fungous disease of the Tomato in New Jersey. It starts in the extreme southern part of the State about July 1, and gradually moves northward. It is most destructive in those localities in which Tomatoes are grown extensively, especially for canneries. The average loss has been estimated by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture at $25 per acre and the total loss for the United States at approximately $5,000,000 per year.

The disease, which spreads rapidly with the first rains, starts with a yellowing and dying of the lower leaves, and gradually travels up on the plant. In the drought districts it is not too late to begin spraying.

The New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, at New Brunswick, recently published a circular (No. 96) on this disease, giving a description of its injury, and methods of control. Persons interested may obtain copies on application.

Louisville, Ky.

In figuring up sales for July, some of the local florists were surprised to find that the total had even surpassed those of the same month last year, which was considered one of the best for this season of the year.

Many Will Burn Wood

The recent order covering the use of coal under the 40-ton maximum allowance will affect a few of the smaller growers of this section, but for the most part the growers here use considerably more than that amount and will no doubt have to do close figuring to keep going. Most all of the growers have planted all their houses and will make an attempt to keep them going with their limited supply and such wood as they can lay in.

Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind., has laid in a good supply of wood, which he intends burning along with the screenings. Mr. Rasmussen will try to obtain all the wood he can for he believes it will be cheaper to burn than coal. He has had trouble with his coal pile. It began to smoulder a second time and he was forced to call on the fire department to put out the fire. He now has it so arranged that he can keep it mostly under water, having it in a basement which is 5ft. under the ground, and he will keep it covered with water during the rest of the Summer.

Ferdinand Keller and Ollie Honaker, florists of Lexington, Ky., were in Louisville recently for the purpose of calling on the Fuel Administration, with the idea of having the recent screenings order made to include Kentucky. However, they were not given any satisfaction, and the chances are that Kentucky florists will get their 50 per cent. of coal and no more.

At New Albany, Ind., the cottony Maple scale has appeared on numbers of fine shade trees and threatens their destruction.

The Jefferson County Bee Keepers' Ass'n was organized at Middletown, Ky., on July 31, at a meeting arranged by J. T. Taylor, County Agricultural Agent. Dr. J. B. Gordon, of Middleton and Louisville, was elected president, and J. C. Barfield, of Anchorage, vice-president and secretary. O. V. N. S.

Bed of Lantanas

Though this article is entitled "Bed of Lantanas" it will ıe seen that the photograph takes in a group of flower beds, he central one of which is composed of a Lantana called ouis Benoit. It is a good variety for bedding purposes, aving flowers of a salmon red color, and which, at certain tages of growth, take on a brown and yellow tint as well.

Lantanas have long been known to gardeners as sun-oving plants, flowering all Summer long where moisture t the roots is abundant as well as the heat they meet with n our Summers.

When required for bedding, Lantanas should be propa-ated from cuttings in Autumn, placed under glass. They re not difficult to root, and when potted and given proper eat through the Winter are strong attractive plants when edding-out time arrives.

From the photograph it will be seen that a large assort-ıent of plants has been used in the make up of the design isplayed. On the left, in the background, is seen a por-ion of a bed of Crotons, plants ell known as sun lovers, and ow largely used because of their andsome foliage. Directly in he back ground is a collection f hardy shrubs, interspersed ith herbaceous plants and the ke, while on the extreme right bed of Cannas is fittingly dis-layed. In front of all is a ollection of water plants, the ortion displayed showing the rge leaves of Nelumbium and ıe smaller ones of Eichhornia rassipes. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Dutch and American Nur-ery Methods Contrasted

By MARINUS VAN KLEEF

No nursery stock of any ac-ount has been shipped from Holland to America for a year or ıore and this has given Ameri-ın nurserymen an opportunity sell stock on hand, which, if Holland nursery stock had been btainable, they might not have old at all. Every nurseryman nows that the greater variety f plants you offer, the harder it for the customer to select; hereas if you have a compara-vely few varieties it takes the ustomer only a few minutes to hoose what he wants and in the nd he is better satisfied. This pplies especially to the retail rade.

However, this does not mean that nurserymen should op growing evergreens and other plants in large assort-ıents, as then people would get tired of looking at the ame sorts of plants to be found everywhere. Grow, and eep on growing more ornamental evergreens, and start ght now, because the low prices at which the Holland ursery stock could be obtained at one time is very prob-bly a thing of the past.

Why Holland Stock Was Cheap

I will give some facts which will make clear why Holland urserymen could afford to sell their nursery stock at such ery low prices. Most American nurserymen think that his was made possible on account of labor, which can be ad at very low wages in Holland. It is true, as well as eplorable, that before the war the best experienced help ould be had at from 1½ to 2 florins or 60c. to 80c. in merican money a day, while at that time, in America, 1.50 to $1.75 had to be paid to a totally inexperienced olish or Italian laborer. But this cheap labor was really nly a small factor. Immediately after the Spring or Fall eason is passed the laborers in this country are discharged, hile over in Holland every man is retained and has to be ept all the year around. So at the end of a year a Holland aborer has cost his employer practically as much as an nerican employer had paid his laborer. Of course use made of the Holland worker's services also in Summer and Winter, but the work that has to be done during that time could be done with 50 per cent. less help.

The main reason why Holland nursery stock could be obtained at such a small cost was to be found in the economical use of the grounds, and the perfection with which every plant was grown from the time of propagation until it was shipped to a foreign country. I well remember the expression which a foreign nurseryman used while visiting the Boskoop nurseries. He said: "My goodness, you people grow evergreens two stories high." And it is a fact that on a single acre in Holland more plants are grown than on five acres in America. And here is where the economy comes in. Some nurserymen in America boast of having 300 acres of nursery stock. These 300 acres of land are bought, and then taxes must be paid, and interest on the invested money must be considered, or if the ground is rented, then rent must be paid. As a matter of fact—and I believe many nurserymen in this country will agree with me on this point—if all the salable nursery stock grown on these 300 acres was separated from that which would never be sold on account of ts being imperfect, 200 acres would be more than enough to plant it on. That would save the cost and taxes on 100 acres, or the rent, as the case might be, and also the care and cultivation which would have to be given this stock for years, and last, but not least, it would prevent the chagrin which the owner or manager feels daily, when looking at the imperfect stock he has on his hands, and which he will probably never be able to sell. Again, another source of much loss is that when filling an order, too much time is spent in going from one place to another, when the stock is widely distributed over the place.

Growing Only Perfect Stock

A nursery near New York has adopted an excellent system, so that only salable stock is grown. When the busy season is over in the Spring, one of the firm's expert nurserymen goes through the entire nursery with a knife, and every tree, plant or shrub which is crooked, diseased, or imperfect in any other way, is marked by cutting off a large piece of bark. A gang of men follow this expert, and dig up the marked stock, which is collected and burned.

In Holland, this method is, to a certain degree also in use, and everything imperfect is destroyed. Every inch of space is utilized to good advantage, and very often small Azalea seedlings, Boxwood or other evergreen cuttings are grown in the rows between plants and trees. The vegetable garden of a Holland nurseryman is spread all over the nursery, because Strawberries and vegetables also are grown in the rows between plants.

Plowing and cultivating with horses is an impossibility on account of the soft condition of the soil, and also the strips of land are too narrow. A nursery in Boskoop is usually about 10 to 20 yards broad, with running water on each side, and about a fourth to half a mile long. As plowing is impossible, and also because the plants are transplanted frequently to insure a good root system, wide rows are not a necessity. Moreover, as nearly every plant grown is a specimen plant, one can readily understand that with such an economical system Holland nurserymen could afford to sell nursery stock at a low price. It may also be stated that in Holland there is no such thing as an eight or nine hour working day, but that frequently the men work 16 to 18 hours a day.

However, as I have stated before, the low price of ornamental evergreens and trees is probably a thing of the past, and very likely will never return in our generation. News received from Boskoop now and then indicates that the raising of purely ornamental stock has had to be given up in the nurseries to a great extent, and vegetables substituted; also that many of the propagating houses have been transformed into forcing houses. Even an auction room has been established in Boskoop, where all the growers bring their vegetables and flowers, which are sold at auction to the public and the dealers. Therefore, a marked transformation has taken place in Boskoop on account of the war. Moreover, nearly all the nurserymen between the ages 19 and 35 are doing military service, although extra furloughs are given them, to enable them to till the soil. The plants are given only the most necessary attention, and new ones are grown in small proportion, compared with the vast quantities which used to be grown before the war.

Greater Co-operation Necessary

Let the Holland nurserymen inform their foreign colleagues as to how Holland stock is grown, under what conditions, etc., instead of keeping these facts secret. Then the foreign nurseryman can give the imported plants treatment which is not absolutely contrary to the conditions in which they were grown in Holland. Let nurserymen from different countries have free intercourse with each other about the nursery trade. They are all pursuing one aim: that is to bring every individual nursery business to a standard of perfection. This can only be attained by combined effort, to which every nurseryman must give his share.

First, there are too many outsiders who unworthily call themselves nurserymen but whose only aim it is to cheat the unsuspecting customer. Something ought to be done to stop this. After a customer is deceived once, he gets discouraged and disgusted with nurserymen and landscape architects generally and prefers to leave his home grounds without shrubbery or plants rather than run the risk of being taken in a second time. He also discourages his friends by telling them of his experience. On the other hand, had this customer been treated fairly the nursery business would have been promoted because he would have been encouraged to do more planting another season.

This does not mean that a job should be done at a very low price. No, charge as much as you deem necessary,

(Concluded on page 209)

New York State Fuel Administration

Chas. E. Robertson, of the State Advisory Board of the National Fuel Administration, has declined to serve as a deputy fuel administrator under the new appointee, Delos W. Cooke, whose address, by the way in case any reader should require it, is 61 Broadway, N. Y. City.

No Coal Screenings for Eastern Florists

The following correspondence has passed between the Fuel Administration at Washington, D. C., and The Florists' Exchange:

New York, July 29, 1918.

Dr. Garfield,
Fuel Administrator, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: We understand that the florists of Illinois, Indiana and States west of the Mississippi have been granted permission, through you, as head of the Fuel Administration, to use in addition to the 50 per cent. allowance of coal, all the slack and screenings they stand in need of to keep their fires going.

We write to ask whether there is not a possibility of this same privilege being extended to the florists of the East, giving them permission to purchase slack and screenings from local yards or from any other available points?

The Florists' Exchange represents several thousand florists in the State of New York alone, and is naturally vitally interested in their welfare. We would be glad indeed to have an early reply from you.

A. T. De La Mare, Managing Editor.

P.S. Our Lancaster (Pa.) correspondent just advises us that the Pennsylvania Fuel Administrator has given the florists of that State permission to use screenings. Would it not therefore be possible for other Eastern florists to receive an order from their local fuel administrators granting a similar privilege?

United States Fuel Administration

A. T. De La Mare, Managing Editor,
The Florists' Exchange, Times Square Station, New York

Dear Sir: Replying to your letter of July 29th, the permission to deliver screenings to florists in Illinois, Indiana and certain Western States was for a special purpose. Owing to the restriction on anthracite in the west, the bituminous mines are obliged to produce more lump sizes than heretofore, which has resulted in a collection of unsold screenings, frequently closing down mines.

To relieve this situation, we temporarily gave permission for these mines to relieve their overloaded screenings piles by shipping to florists.

This permission cannot be extended to any of the Eastern States.

Very truly yours,
United States Fuel Administration
P. B. Noyes, Director of Conservation.

Washington, D. C., July 31, 1918.

This reply from the Fuel Administration, while disappointing to our hopes, came so promptly that we could not forbear an expression of approval for the quick work of these Federal Authorities, as follows:

New York, Aug. 2, 1918.

Sir: For your most prompt reply of July 31 to our letter of inquiry of July 29 please accept our most hearty thanks, as it enabled us to give the information in current issue of Aug. 3. If all business handled by our authorities were put through as quickly as this we would beat the Huns hands down!

While we regret to learn that screenings cannot be used by the florists except in the States mentioned, our people in the East will have to get along without these in the best way they can manage.

Again thanking you heartily for your speedy reply,
Believe me, Respectfully yours,

A. T. De La Mare,
Bus. Mgr. The Florists' Exchange.

To Hon. P. B. Noyes, Director of Conservation,
U. S. Fuel Administration, Washington, D. C.

A Tree For Every Crusader

It was suggested at the recent Chicago convention of the American Ass'n of Nurserymen that a movement be inaugurated which would lead to the planting wherever feasible throughout the country of a tree in honor of every soldier gone overseas.

In the larger cities, on account of the number of men, it might be necessary to affix several names to one tree, but in the small towns and villages there exists ample opportunity to carry out the idea complete.

In no more fitting manner could we pay our tribute to the boys who have gone overseas nor could we give their services a more permanent acknowledgment.

The suggestion opens up an avenue of effort for all concerned, nurserymen, florists and seedsmen, throughout our entire country whereby they should without delay get in touch with the local authorities and proceed with their co-operation to plan out and execute the splendid conception. It is but right and proper that our people should be the leaders in the work.

There should be no planting of puny seedlings, but of well-grown trees, hard wooded, long lived varieties. And the planting should be most carefully executed to insure full development and health.

We cannot conceive of any testimonial more noble, elevating or desirable than this, and its success or failure lies in great measure with our own readers.

In the larger cities, the park authorities will undoubtedly be the ones to consult, and in many cases it is altogether likely that trees already planted will have to be selected for the purpose. In suburban towns and villages, however, there exists ample opportunity for entirely new plantings, and it is in these places that the greatest scope will be afforded. Suitable trees which exist along the route could be retained and a name plate affixed thereto.

On the occasion of the planting a member of the family of the soldier or sailor in whose honor the tree is planted should be present to assist, patriotic services to accompany the ceremony. The name plate to be affixed to the tree could have sufficient blank space in order that later a full service record of the soldier or sailor in whose honor it is planted may be added. Or, a new plate might be used at the end of the War.

We are glad to read in a contemporary that the Wm. H. Moon Co., at Morrisville, Pa., will plant more than one hundred trees, one for each Morrisville man in the service. Parenthetically, it might be stated for the benefit of those unacquainted with Morrisville that it possesses some of the best laid out avenues of trees of any small town in the United States.

You Are Needed at Saint Louis Aug. 20

The necessity is great for a representative attendance at the S. A. F. and O. H. convention opening next Tuesday a week, August 20, in Saint Louis. Every member should consider twice before deciding not to go. While the traveling expense is higher than usual, and against the attendance of those situated at a distance, the many important problems now confronting the trade which are likely to be discussed and acted upon will well repay the effort. The meeting promises to be of as much interest and benefit to the florists as were the meetings of the American Seed Trade Ass'n and the American Ass'n of Nurserymen (both held in Chicago in June last), productive of results of the highest importance to members of those bodies.

A glance through the S. A. F. and O. H. convention program, published in issue of July 20, will show the important addresses and discussions scheduled for the meeting, and it is altogether likely that other matters will come up on the floor of equal importance, notably, for one, the question of how to get along and what to grow on the 50 per cent. allowance of coal.

Concerted action should be taken at this meeting whereby better prices will be obtained for our product; this can be brought about without violating the anti-trust laws which prohibit collusion or the fixing of prices. If a committee were appointed at the convention to ascertain the actual cost of raising cut flowers, in varying sections, and these figures were presented to the growers, they would not only indicate to them what should be charged for their product in order to make a profit, but perhaps enlighten many growers as to their own costs., something many of them do not know. The knowledge of this cost would at once tend to stabilize prices, for few growers would care to sell a Carnation at 2c. when it was proved to them that it had actually cost 2c. to raise it.

Might we suggest to the secretary of every florists' club and auxiliary organization at a distance from Saint Louis that in this remaining week he BOOST THE COMING CONVENTION all in his power, making it his d to see that at least two members of his body attend, he may have the satisfaction of feeling that his sect did all in its power to help along especially in these mentous times.

Chicago has its special Convention Boost Committee; all towns and cities emulate the good example.

The meeting is now only ten days off, but a lot of bo ing can be done in that time.

A Few Don'ts from Recent Observations

Don't undertake farming unless you have access t constant supply of water for irrigation purposes.

Don't undertake to cultivate 100 acres when 25 wo task your energies. That great market gardener, Hall at Orient, Long Island, keeps 50 acres under cultivat and produces enough garden truck to keep a steame commission to convey his crops to the New York mar on the return the steamer brings back a load of man Irrigating pipes are used over the entire area plan While his success is based on expert knowledge, undoub ly a contributing factor is in not cultivating any n ground than he can handle thoroughly, and also the us immense quantities of stable manure.

Moral to florists: Don't bite off more than you digest.

Coal Substitutes: Shavings—Crude Oil

In the matter of fuel for the coming Winter, (w interests everybody,) we read continuously about city of coal; but why coal? Why not other combust that can be used just as we are using substitutes for fl

Prominent among men who have ideas outside of is Robert C. Kerr of Houston, Texas, who fired a great of glass in his ususl coal furnaces, using a heavy chip shaving from a planing mill six miles distant. shavings from such mills can be had at a nominal frequently given away just to avoid the labor of conve them by the mill people. So the cost is usually more than the hauling. Mr. Kerr employed a large van, and a driver hauled constantly all Winter at an exp not much beyond the man's time, the fuel being f entirely practical in every way.

In the matter of fuel oil at a little more than $1.5 a 50-gallon barrel, the crude oil that comes from oil in many sections, a great conservation in fuel cost is by some florists near oil districts. At small cost a furnace can be fitted with a distributing oil burner, gives an intense heat, and does no injury to grate boilers. This is a proven out idea, so no one need hes in the use of fuel oil, at perhaps a less cost than coal, small restrictions by the government in the quantity a able for use.

With these suggestions, it may be advisable to get of the use of the one word coal, and instead use ingen and in this as well as other conditions incident to change to an adaptation of conditions. S. J.

The "Ninth Story Window" Column

The column conducted under the title of "The N Story Window," was a source of pleasure, instruction divertisement from the more matter of fact trade ma So we are looking for volunteers to assist us in the ta keeping this column going. Who will volunteer?

Dahlia Show at Boston

The American Dahlia Society will hold a Dahlia exhibition in conjunction with the Mass. Hort. Society at Horticultural Hall, Boston, Mass., on Sept. 14 and 15. A list of special premiums has been prepared, including both cash prizes and medals. There are classes for both amateurs and professionals. The firms or individuals contributing special prizes are J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.; Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; Penn the Florist, Boston; Carters' Tested Seed, Boston, and R. Vincent, Jr. and Sons Co., White Marsh, Md. Full information may be obtained from the secretary of the Mass. Hort. Society, Wm. B. Rich, Hort. Hall, 300 Mass. ave., Boston.

How Can We Save Excess Rainfall

Human ingenuity and resourcefulness must be well behind what it should be in many cases in this supposedly enlightened age. For instance, we are told that one inch of rainfall is equivalent to a weight of 113 tons spread over one acre, and that the average rainfall in the United States is some 30 inches. Thirty by 113 equals 3390 tons of water to each acre, the greater portion of which is sheer loss; so that, with this bountiful supply vegetation often suffers from extreme droughts.

Will not some genius arise in the land and point out a simple and inexpensive way for the individual saving and storing of this great provision of Nature for use when required for the benefit of all who are without a so-called "city" supply.

Omit the String

In packing small plants for shipment, if the soil in the pots is allowed to dry thoroughly before the plants are turned out, and wrapped in papers that are quite damp, and then packed closely in the shipping receptacle without tying, much time and a slight exense may be saved both to purchaser and shipper. Valuable time is lost to the purchaser in cutting string from thousands, or even hundreds, of plants, as well as to the shipper in the tying of them.—Mrs. E. Sefton, E. Sefton & Son, Chillicothe, Mo.

Meeting of Committee on National Credits and Collections Bureau

Robt. C. Kerr, Chairman of the Committee on National Credits and Collections Bureau has called a meeting at the La Salle Hotel, Chicago, Saturday morning, Aug. 17, at 9 a.m., and requests the presence of all interested in the subject or who may have any suggestions to make to join the committee in its deliberations, or otherwise to write him at above address in good time for the meeting.

This committee surely has an important task assigned to it and demands all the assistance which those on the outside can give it. If the S. A. F. can get these two desiderata working, it will make for a long step in advance toward the establishment of a reliable source of credit information, and then again a reliable bureau for the collection of outstanding accounts.

My Last Vision of Beauty

Herewith a letter from that grand old man, C. S. Harrison, who is suffering from an affliction for which there is no mitigation. His opening sentence is pathetic in the extreme. We know that the great heart of the trade must go out to him in full sympathy, and we feel sure it would be a pleasure to Mr. Harrison to receive a few words of comfort from those in the trade not only who are personally acquainted with him but as well from those who know of him through his writings and through the work which he has done on behalf of the Iris, Phlox, and the Peony, particularly, let alone the great work which he did as a minister of the Gospel for many years:

It is a terrible thing to be suddenly stricken blind.

My sight gradually faded and then went out altogether, but the last thing on which my vision rested was the most beautiful Peony I ever saw. It was Richard Carvel. In color it was a glowing, radiant red, which has made a lasting impression on me. I do not know that my eyes ever rested on a more beautiful flower. It was very remarkable in many respects. Last Spring, all through the West and North-west, there was a failure of blooms. I had eight of these and they blossomed gloriously. They were planted late in the Fall but not one of them failed. One plant I cut in two and each little root had a fine flower. They were exceedingly fragrant. They were also the earliest I ever knew, coming into bloom May 18. The rest of them bloomed about May 21. These were introduced by Mr. Brand. Whether he has any for sale now I do not know. I am sure however that the stock is very limited. I consider it the cheapest Peony ever yet offered at $6 each.

York, Neb., July 31, 1918 C. S. HARRISON.

Pennsylvania florists have been advised by E. L. Cole, director of the Conservation Division, Federal Fuel Administration, that besides the conditions previously stated under which they will be allowed 100 per cent allowance of coal, they may have that amount for "All greenhouses producing Mushrooms and food for hospitals." Permission to use 100 per cent. coal, however, must first be obtained from the Fuel Administration.

Gardeners' Convention

The National Association of Gardeners will hold its annual convention this year in Cleveland, Sept. 24, 25, 26, with headquarters at the Hollenden. This was announced by Pres. Robert Weeks, who has appointed the following committee to take care of local convention matters: Herman Knoble, chairman; Walter E. Cook, Frank A. Friedley, M. A. Vinson, R. P. Bryden, Luther Wells and H. P. Rapley. A tentative program has been arranged as follows: Tuesday, Sept. 24, 10 a.m., executive meeting; 2 p.m., opening session of convention in assembly room at the Hollenden, with address of welcome by Mayor Davis, of Cleveland, response by Pres. Robert Weeks. Evening, lecture by a well known man, the Cleveland Florists' Club and the Garden Club to be guests of the evening. Wed., Sept. 25, the election of officers and in the afternoon, an auto trip tendered visiting gardeners through the parks and to leading estates. The feature of the 26th will be a bowling match between the Cleveland Florists' Club team and the Gardeners. J. McL.

American Gladiolus Society

The approaching exhibition of this society at Buffalo, N. Y., August 14 to 17, promises to be one of the largest ever held. The exhibition has been already well advertised locally and the public interest in the exhibition is most unusual at this time of year. Elmwood Music Hall proving unsuitable, the exhibition will be held in the ballroom of the Hotel Iroquois. This room was used to stage the annual exhibition of the American Carnation Society and is in every way suitable for a flower show. Intending exhibitors should keep in mind this change.

The local committee, consisting of Messrs E. W. Werick, President of the Buffalo Florists' Club, W. J. Palmer, S. A. Anderson, D. J. Scott, E. C. Brucker and Commissioner H. B. Saunders of the Chamber of Commerce have the local arrangements well in hand. At a meeting of this committee, August 2, secretary A. C. Beal went over the arrangements for the exhibition.

Exhibitors should mail their entries at once. This will be of great assistance to the local committee in providing sufficient vases and also to the secretary. Address exhibits, prepaid, to Exhibition American Gladiolus Society, Hotel Iroquois, Buffalo, N. Y., or to secretary A. C. Beal in care of W. F. Kasting Co., 568 Washington st., Buffalo, N. Y.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, Ill., offers a bronze medal as additional prizes in each of the following open to all classes: No. 37.—6 spikes of Princeps, No. 38.—6 spikes of Primulinus Sunbeam, No. 39.— 6 vases of the blue, lavender and violet shades, three spikes each.

Hotel Iroquois will be headquarters and meeting place for the society. Visitors are urged to make their reservations in advance, if possible, to insure that they will be taken care of. The rates for rooms are:

One Person.—Room with tub bath, $3 to$5, room with shower bath, $2.50 to $3, room without bath, $2 to $3

Two Persons.—Room with tub bath, $5 to $7, room with shower, $4.50 to $5, room without bath, $3 to $4.

Why not take a few days' vacation, attend the exhibition and visit Niagara Falls as well as other points of interest. Good roads leads to Buffalo, and that automobile, if not the train, will get you there. The Buffalo people are expecting a great flower show. The local committee is enthusiastically working to make our stay in Buffalo both enjoyable and profitable. Each member should decide how he can help and then do it. All that is required for a successful meeting and exhibition is for the American Gladiolus Society to do its part. A. C. Beal, Sec'y

When a doer of good works does not make public his benefactions and they become unintentionally known, one feels inclined to give commendation of the highest type. Through questioning a representative of the firm of Hicks Nurseries, Westbury, L. I., we learn that army trucks from Camp Mills have called almost daily at the nurseries and carted away trees and shrubs, with the result that several of the hostess houses and other camp buildings have taken on a considerably brightened appearance on account of the planting of this refreshing greenery around these buildings at the cantonment. We are sure that others, after hearing this, will give the Hicks Nurseries commendation for this practical assistance to the undoubted morale of our soldier boys in camp.

Obituary

Emma L. Palmer

Mrs. Emma L. Palmer, wife of Frederick L. Palmer of Brookline, Mass., died at her home on Wednesday, July 31, after a long illness. Mrs. Palmer was a native of Natick, Mass. She is survived by her husband and five children, three daughters and two sons. One of the sons, Lieut. George B., is an instructor at Camp Lee, Va. The funeral which was largely attended, took place on Saturday, Aug. 3, at 2 p.m. from Masonic Hall, Brookline.

R. C.

Benjamin B. Smalley

Benjamin B. Smalley, florist of Chelsea, Mass., died on July 27 at his home in that city at 34 Gardner st. Mr. Smalley had been in the florist's business in Chelsea for 20 years. He was well known there and belonged to the Masonic order, as well as to other fraternal organizations. The burial was at Woodlawn. Mr. Smalley is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Ethel Simpson of Chelsea and a son, Benjamin J. Smalley of New York.

William F. Hoerber

We regret to announce the death of Wm. F. Hoerber, of Hoerber Bros. Inc., wholesale growers of cut flowers for the Chicago Market, with an extensive area of glass at Des Plaines. The deceased was son of John L. Hoerber, Sr. He is survived by his widow, two brothers, John L., Jr., and Fred C., and a sister, Mrs. Louis A. Passow. The funeral services were private and held from the home of his sister, 3322 Washington boulevard on Tuesday, Aug. 6, with interment at Waldheim Cemetery.

James Cullen

James Cullen, of Lee, Mass., who during his whole life was connected with gardening and the florists' trade, died on July 26 at the ripe age of 97. Mr. Cullen was born in Londonderry, Ireland, where he received his early training. In 1850 he came to America and for several years was employed as gardener in Central Park, New York City. Later he was gardener for many years on several large estates, finally coming to Lee 51 years ago, where he established a greenhouse. He was specially noted for his Carnations. Ten years ago, on the death of his wife, he retired and disposed of his business.

Andrew V. D. Snyder

Andrew V. D. Snyder, of Ridgewood, N. J., died at 3 p.m., Thursday, Aug. 1, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Post, in Ridgewood. Mr. Snyder had been ill about five weeks, but confined to his bed for only two weeks before his death, which was caused by a complication of diseases. He was born in Ridgewood in 1856, and brought up in that town. He had been successfully engaged there in flower growing, and in the seed and fertilizer business, for 32 years, and had amassed a comfortable fortune. He was one of the largest forcers of Dutch and French bulbs in the East, his importations of these bulbs running up into millions.

The funeral services were held at the residence of Mrs. Post on Sunday, Aug. 4, at 3 p.m. The interment was at Ridgewood Cemetery.

Mr. Snyder is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Post, and a son, Andrew, Jr. Mrs. Snyder died about two months ago. Mr. Snyder was a member of the New York Florists' Club.

The St. Louis Convention

August 20, 21 and 22

The secretary is now located at the Jefferson Hotel, St. Louis, where communications in regard to the convention should be sent.

A card of membership has been issued to all members in good standing. This card admits the person to whom it is issued to the Convention Hall at all times during the convention, and to the trade exhibition. The non-receipt of a card by any member is an indication that his 1918 dues have not been paid, as only those in good standing will be permitted to attend the meetings. It is therefore incumbent upon all who intend to be present at the convention but have not paid their annual dues to make prompt remittance.

As is customary, the secretary's presence in the convention city ahead of the convention is required for the purpose of giving attention to all the details entailed by the society's management, and particularly in regard to the trade exhibition. Intending exhibitors will please take notice that he is at their service, and that he will be pleased to render any possible assistance in the staging and care of exhibits.

The outlook for a successful convention is very promising. The importance of the subject matter of the program is expected to draw a large attendance.

The U. S. Fuel Administration has notified our Washington representative that Wallace Crossley, State Capitol, Jefferson City, Mo., Federal Fuel Administrator for the State of Missouri, will be the speaker on the subject, "The Coal Conservation Order as it Applies to Florists," scheduled for discussion at the afternoon session of Thursday, Aug. 22. Mr. Crossley is thoroughly familiar with his subject, and the application of the order to all sections of the country.

Among additions to the list of exhibitors are the following: John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind., and the Ove Gnatt Co., Inc., La Port, Ind.

The local committees are actively engaged in perfecting plans for the entertainment of visitors, which means that all who are in attendance are assured of a most enjoyable visit.

Jefferson Hotel will be the hotel headquarters for the convention. As all hotels in St. Louis are usually well filled during the time when the convention is held it is advisable for all intending to be in attendance to reserve rooms now. Secretary John Young, who is now in St. Louis, will be glad to make any reservations if requested.

Entertainment at the Convention

As stated in the letter from Frank A. Windler, chairman of the entertainment committee, which appeared in THE EXCHANGE of August 3, page 169, visitors including the ladies are invited to remain in St. Louis on Friday, August 23, as a pleasing entertainment program has been planned. This, while of a character in keeping with the time will nevertheless be an enjoyable one.

The local committees are as follows:

L. Jules Bourdet, Local chairman and vice-president S. A. F. and O. H.

Ladies reception and entertainment committee: W. J. Pilcher, chairman; Al Gumz and Paul Rieden.

Hotel committee: J. J. Beneke, chairman, J. S. Carter, Ernest Strehle, Geo. B. Windler, Wm. Ossick and Hugo Schoff.

Reception committee: J. J. Windler, chairman; Ed. Denker, E. W. Grey, Hugo Gross, Chas. Johan, W. J. Edwards, Gus Grossart, Oscar Ruf, O. C. May, Jno. Steidle, Tom Carr, F. J. Fillmore, E. N. Jurngel, Martin Moran, C. A. Kuehn, Geo. Augermuller and Gus Nummer.

Finance committee: Wm. C. Smith, chairman; F. C. Weber, Jr., W. A. Rowe, Carl Beyer and Walter Weber.

Entertainment committee: Frank A. Windler, chairman; G. H. Pring, Jas. Witek, F. N. Weber, Arthur Beyer, Frank Gorley and W. W. Ohweiler.

President's reception committee: Jules Bourdet, chairman; H. G. Berning, H. C. Irish, J. F. Amman, Gus Nummert, Alex. Lurie, W. J. Pilcher, J. J. Windler and W. C. Smith.

The chairmen and these committees met with secretary John Young at headquarters on Friday eve August 4th, and everything is working smoothly. O. K. S.

Ladies Society of American Florists

Mrs. Julius Roehrs, president of the Ladies Society of American Florists has appointed Mrs. William Duckham, Madison, N. J., to be auditor for the year 1918.

The annual meeting of the society will be held in Convention Hall, Moolah Temple, St. Louis, Mo., on Wednesday, Aug. 21, at 10 o'clock; at this time the reports of the officers will be given, the election of officers held and any other business relative to the society will be brought up and acted upon. On account of the existing conditions the annual reception will not be held.

MRS. A. M. HERR, Secretary.

Going to St. Louis

Join the New York Florists' Club Delegation

President Charles Schenck of the New York Florists' Club has extended an invitation to the members of florists' clubs and florists generally on the line of its travel to join the New York delegation on train No. 21, leaving New York City at 2:04 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 18. The train is due at

Philadelphia	4.30 p.m.	—Aug. 18
Harrisburg	7.10 p.m.	—
Altoona	10.16 p.m.	—
Johnstown	11.26 p.m.	—
Pittsburgh	12.35 a.m.	—Aug. 19
Columbus	6.00 a.m.
Indianapolis	11.00 a.m.
Arriving in St. Louis at	5.25 p.m.

It will add greatly to the pleasure of the trip if the delegates from these different cities can arrange to travel together to St. Louis. To effect this it will be advisable to make reservations without delay as it may become necessary to put on an extra car somewhere along the line, and this cannot well be done unless prior notice has been given.

National Publicity Campaign

From San Francisco the secretary proceeded to Los Angeles, in which city he was in the hands of Fred Howard, S. A. F. State vice-president, and Frank Shearer, superintendent of parks, who made his first day's work easy of accomplishment, and extended to him many courtesies, for which he is deeply grateful. A banquet was arranged for the evening, when the secretary had the opportunity to explain to many in the craft the great benefit to be derived from the publicity campaign. The results of this informal gathering are to be noticed in the list of subscriptions reported. In addition several new members were added to the society's membership roll. On the second day A. F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., president of the local club, took the visitor in hand, devoting the entire day to his work, which included a visit to Pasadena. Mr. Borden, and in fact all with whom the secretary came in contact in Los Angeles, did their utmost to make his stay in the city both enjoyable and profitable.

At Salt Lake City, Utah, the secretary was met at the station by G. K. Uno, who escorted him to the Utah Hotel, where he found R. Miller, R. Wilson, W. Sorenson, B. Gray, J. H. Maxwell, Chas. Alt, D. E. Law, M. Jorgensen and A. Alt, representing the trade of the community. Afterward a meeting was held at the store of Huddart Floral Co., where the secretary had the opportunity to explain the work of the publicity campaign and of the society. Several subscriptions to the fund were forthcoming, and a number of new members came into the S. A. F. fold. The secretary expresses at this time his great pleasure at the warmth of the reception given him in Salt Lake City, and his gratitude for the especial courtesies extended to him by Robert Miller, C. K. Uno and A. J. Alt. It was quite evident that interest in the work of our organization was of the strongest character.

Some little time was spent in Omaha, in which city the secretary had the valued assistance of Mrs. J. Hess, wife of the society's treasurer, and, of course, of the treasurer himself. His work here, naturally, also extended to Council Bluffs, in the neighboring State of Iowa.

In St. Joseph, Mo., he was met at the station in company with Treasurer Hess, by Director Frank A. Stup at the early hour of 7 a.m., and an entire hour was given to the official work, several subscriptions and many new memberships resulting. Samuel Murray and Artl Newell of Kansas City came on to "St. Joe," and carr the secretary with them to their own city, where a day, and with Wm. L. Rock, treasurer of the F. T. a long day was put in among the trade, over $300 subscriptions and 13 new members being the result the "round-up."

The gentlemen forming the escort were most enthusiastic over the "personal visit method" adopted to create interest in the publicity work, and were strongly of opinion that this procedure would assuredly carry fund "over the top."

The secretary ultimately reached St. Louis, where at once took up the work of the convention. At intervals between the present time and the convention will visit nearby cities, in an endeavor to carry the fu over the remaining stage.

Who can say now that the collection of the public campaign fund of $50,000 is not possible of accomplishment! There is less than $8000 now to collect, and all of you gentlemen who have been "waiting to see will now do what you have been intending to do when yo vision became clear will act, the fund will be complet on time. You have noted the great interest taken the campaign by your brother florists throughout t country, and surely are impressed sufficiently to rea for your check books and "do your bit." Send alo your contributions—or, had we not better say, yo insurance premiums, for, surely, no better insurance w ever effected by florists.

but do the work properly; in fact as well as you would do it for yourself, because you will in the end benefit by so doing. It is far better not to do the job at all, than not to do it to the satisfaction of the customer.

Another thing could be done to promote the nursery business. Many beautiful shrubs and plants are spoiled every Spring by incompetents who wrongly call themselves gardeners. People sometimes complain bitterly to the nurseryman of whom they have purchased their stock that plants or shrubs are very unsatisfactory, because they do not bloom. They don't know perhaps that the man who trimmed their shrubs in the Spring may have cut away all the flowering wood. There should be a committee of competent nurserymen appointed from whom gardeners could get a certificate of competence in pruning plants and trees. People would very likely prefer to have a gardener who had such a certificate to do their work, and satisfaction would result. Whatever is done, the promotion of the nursery business in this country can only be attained by mutual confidence and co-operation among nurserymen.

Business Transfer

W. W. Wyman, Rochester, N. Y. has given public notice of the sale and conveyance of his right, title, and interest in the business heretofore conducted by him, and known as the Wyman Nurseries, to Claude Ludington, of Rochester, N. Y.

Plants for the Cantonments

H. W. Groschner, Napoleon, O., has donated 3000 field-grown hardy Chrysanthemum plants to nine soldiers' cantonments in various parts of the country. This is in line with the work of the National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, an account of whose activities appeared in a recent issue of THE EXCHANGE. A number of New York florists, whose names appeared in the issue of July 27, have contributed stock for the beautification of Camp Mills and a further list appears on the New York page of the current issue.

The movement deserves every encouragement and the members of the trade generally ought to support it heartily. Mr. Groschner writes: "I am informed by Maurice Fuld, chairman of the soldiers' camp committee, that the trade has been backward in making donations. This is a pity. To me it seems a duty we owe our soldiers, to give all that we possibly can for their welfare and enjoyment."

Last Week's Issue

Last week's issue of THE ECHANGE was a particularly good number, made so through its range of varied and valuable subjects.

"Hardy Plants can Help Solve the Coal Shortage" drew attention to the opportunities open to florists, growers and nurserymen in the handling of perennials; it included a design of a formal perennial garden Wm. A. Natorp. The same page carried an article on the Phoma stem blight of Potatoes, a disease which is causing great havoc this season in some sections.

"Efficiency in Greenhouse Management," by Prof. L. C. Corbett, was one in a series of articles intended to assist the trade generally in getting ready to make the best of the coming season's coal shortage. We expect to publish further articles on parallel lines of equal interest.

The "Week's Work" was exceptionally good. In the Seed Trade Department the "Half Yearly Clean-up Inventory," with suggested headings for columns of the purchase side of the stock book, will enable many seedsmen to make use of the idea, saving mechanical labor to some extent, but better yet, if adopted, will show them at all times just where they stand.

Prof. E. F. Stoddard has been giving in his department of "Vegetable Crops Under Glass and in the Open," a series of articles dealing with the use of greenhouses for growing early vegetable plants for transplanting outdoors to produce Summer vegetables, of special interest because such growers will be supplied a full supply of coal for this purpose under the ruling of the Fuel Administration.

"Evergreens for City Gardens" in the Nursery Department, showed how easy it is to maintain a collection of evergreens in the heart of a great city, a fact which we hope to further demonstrate through the publication in a near issue of a similar planting at the entrance of a great railroad station in New York City, an enterprising nursery firm having executed the planting on their own responsibility and for their own advertising, appearing to have full faith in the longevity and well doing of the evergreens in close confinement.

The editorial page as usual touched on a multiplicity of current events, the most important of which was the letter from the U. S. Fuel Administration, at Washington, stating that while florists in certain Western states had been given permission to use screenings, Eastern florists could not be accorded this privilege and giving the reasons why. This letter is reprinted in present issue.

"Economical Problems Confronting the Florist" may have furnished a laugh or two in the reading, but we feel sure that Fritz Barr's article also furnished food for a serious thought or two in his diverting and instructive story.

The Retail Department contained W. Cleaver Harry's first article in a series on "Practical Talks on the Short-of-Help Problem." Mr. Harry is a man of keen observation and few things of value escape his vigilence, therefore his talks always reward the reader.

The above is a synopsis of leading articles in last issue, but there were many more good things scattered throughout its pages.

We cannot always promise an equally interesting issue. But it will be our effort to give the best that is in us and all the material we possibly can afford under wartime conditions. Fritz Barr well says, in his article of Aug. 3: "The backward florist has to be asked three times to pay $1.50 for his yearly subscription for the trade paper, for which he really ought to pay $10 for actual value received, instead of letting the advertiser do it." All of our readers may not be aware of the fact that since the new postal zoning system went into effect July 1 every article or ad. must be marked "Adv." or "Not Adv.", this summary mailed to be paid to the post office on the basis of the percentage of reading matter and advertising matter in each issue. The summary covering last issue, Aug. 3, read: 50% reading, 50% advertising—a consummation which it would be impossible for up to keep up weekly and live, unless indeed subscribers were willing to pay a higher subscription per annum than the present $1.50.

Outing of the Toronto (Ont., Can.) Florists' Club. See text

Toronto Ratailers' Outing

The accompanying illustration shows a group of Toronto, (Ont., Canada) florists' and their families and friends at the very successful and enjoyable outing of the Toronto Retail Florists' Coub held on July 17, at Island Park, that city. A feature was an exciting baseball game between a team captained by Geo. Gard and another led by H. G. Dillemuth, the latter's team winning by the score of 12 to 10. There were also other interesting sports and races, including a tug-of-war, in which the growers were victorious. Supper, which came in the evening, was served to more than 350. Dancing followed. A number of growers from Toronto, Brampton and outside places attended.

Prematuring and Wilting of Potatoes

Prof. G. P. Clinton, Botanist of the Conn. Agri. Exp. Station, has favored us with his conclusions concerning the Potato trouble which has manifested itself recently in the East. While Potatoes are not of direct interest to our trade, yet many florists raise a crop for their own use, and will be interested in what Prof. Clinton has to say on the subject. Our regret is that space prevents our printing his careful investigations in full.

The following description is given by Prof. Clinton of the various forms of the trouble:

1. A prematuring of the vines in which the stem and leaves gradually turn yellow, the plant often remaining erect, the leaves dropping off or dying, and finally the whole plant succumbing.
2. Plants wilting and flopping over as if the stem had not strength enough to support them. Parts normally green and no particular spotting of the stem.
3. A bronzing more or less of the stem and spotting; plants lopping over somewhat; frequently the stem is rather soft near the ground, so that it is easily pinched together, and giving somewhat the appearance as if some fungus or borer had been at work.

His investigation shows that fields sprayed or unsprayed have suffered equally in the sections visited by the trouble, which seems to have developed at the blooming stage when most of the energies of the plant were bent on the formation of tubers, regardless of the variety.

The conclusion is that this year's troubles have been caused through lack of moisture and sufficient plant food, of which potash is one of the factors, and not through fungi, poor seed, or insects, especially lice. The writer is of the opinion that so long as our fertilizers remain incomplete, great care must be exercised in the character of the ground chosen for Potatoes, and the manner in which fertilized. Select sod land or land which has been well fertilized for previous crop: avoid worn out or leachy soils. Where possible, use a complete fertilizer; when an incomplete one is used, do not place all of this on the land before planting Potatoes, but use part of it once or twice after the vines are up. Practice rotation.

The Potato is the most subject to drought injury of any of our cultivated crops, so naturally is the first to show its ill effects. A Potato vine, like a human being, responds to the best treatment, and its needs are moisture, nitrogen, and potash.

Professor Clinton concludes with the statement that his later observations and consultations with other investigators lead him to believe that lack of moisture was the primary factor, and insufficient or unbalanced fertilization the secondary factor in the development of this trouble

—OR—

Their Floral Code and Dictionary

By GEORGE H. O'NEILL

Lovers of flowers and their lore will find a treasure house in this interesting and comprehensive little manual. A dictionary of flowers covers more than thirty pages, giving the common names, in alphabetical order, of hundreds of flowers; each followed by the meaning of the flower and its botanical name. In the section "Messages of Flowers," the idea of the message to be conveyed by a flower is condensed into a single word, and the list of these words is arranged alphabetically. Opposite each word is placed the name of the proper flower and beneath appears the expanded message. A "Floral Calendar" gives the name of the flower appropriate for each month of the year, with its meaning, its botanical name, and a bit of verse about it. The mythology of flowers, with many interesting facts about them in modern life, fills nearly twenty pages, taking in alphabetical order thirty or more of the best known blooms. An explanation of the arranging of bouquets to make them carry messages fills another section, and advice about caring for cut flowers and a score of poems and quotations from famous poets about flowers complete the pages of this handy little manual of flower language. Of invaluable assistance to florists as a ready reference guide and as an instructive manual to amateur gardeners and lovers of flowers.

Can be sold by retailers, a 25c. copy for the customer's own use and a $1.00 copy for the lady who is to receive the flowers.

Practical Talks on the Short of Help Problem

Saving Time and Labor in Made-Up Work and Through Short Cuts in the Store and Office—
Training New Help as a Time-Saver—By W. CLEAVER HARRY

ARTICLE No. 2

THERE was a state with all of us when time did not seem to be the chief essential. Time, like the man power of the imperial government, was the cheapest thing we had, so it wasn't counted in the cost at all. With the present scarcity of available help and the high cost of everything, we are compelled to do some figuring to find out just where changes can be made to conserve time, help, supplies: non-essential and unprofitable transactions. In other words, with business in a healthy condition we must see to it that this condition is maintained.

We can do with less help if need be. Not because business has slowed up, but for reasons of saving—to offset the higher costs; we can do just as much businesss and save on help. It is not possible to standardize the work in a retail florist's shop, like a printer when he throws out a half dozen old job presses and puts in two improved machines that do the work better, with one-half the help required by the six old machines, but there are many ways of handling the work in the shop that will bring the same results as the printer gets. Let one example serve to illustrate this point: Don't make a floral American flag, especially when Carnations are scarce, when a large wreath or a spray tied with our Nation's colors will do just as well and can readily be sold instead for the same money and half the work.

Saving on Made-Up Work

There are several time and work-saving funeral designs in the use of the ready-made Oak and Magnolia wreath and pillow, as sold by the supply houses. They are regularly mossed and covered with the prepared leaves. They will keep indefinitely and are ready for instant use. The Oak leaf furnishes a good underground for anything, and they can be decorated with a cluster or made up all around; it does away with all the dirty work of mossing and saves more than half the time in getting the order out.

Baskets as funeral designs are quick and effective. More of them should be used. In making them, put a little stubble in the pan, which is first filled three-fourths full of water. Then put the flowers in by handfuls, drawing the stems in and out, and raise and lower accordingly. Little or no stemming is required, for the flowers can be made to support themselves. Stuff a little moss in around the top to finish it and put on the ribbon effect, and the piece is ready: One man's time; fifteen minutes.

Another big time-saver, and consequent money-maker, is to push the sale of funeral sprays. Since the demand is already on this work, it becomes then simply following the lines of least resistance in urging their sale. Improve on them, introduce combination effects, so as to educate the trade into higher prices. The lodge and association designs—the old traditional family pillow and the spectacular design from the employees will always have their occasion, and it is best to give them a clear track when they come, but the spray is an everyday affair.

Saving Time on Cut Flower Orders

Every florist uses paper boxes. Suppose that you are very busy and the personal demands of time are great. Just take any box you wish from the rack and take off the lid. Behold! the box is already lined. Compare the saving in filling of orders this way over having to reach one place for the lid, another for the box, and then make three or four dives for the paper under the table. If folding boxes are used add more time and unnecessary motions. By having the boxes of various sizes made up and lined in relays, whenever the help has idle time, look what this one operation alone saves in time, help, energy, table space and confusion, and what would it mean at Christmas.

As a time and help saving, try making up your early morning work the afternoon before. Put them in the case, cover with a thin layer of manila tissue paper, spray the tissue thoroughly, and then cover over all with wax paper, making sure that there are no openings where the air can blow in and cause wilting. A design or spray covered in this way, using sufficient moisture, will keep twenty-four hours in the cool case without showing any depreciation whatever.

Don't wait until the last minute to get the work out lest you get caught with some inbound orders that delay the early ones. Nothing like working ahead. Sometimes it's just the failure to keep a little ahead of the game that causes a retailer to think he is short on help when, in reality, he is only short on management.

Saving in Office Work

The double passes in the office are legion. It is not my purpose to begin to enumerate them. No office system is entirely satisfactory, at least for only a limited time. I wish simply to go on record as opposed to anything that gives some one more work. The duplicate and triplicate order system may be necessary in some establishments where the departments are far away from each other, and so carelessly operated that an order slip is liable to be lost, but in the average florist store where the work is all despatched from one desk, the duplicate order system is waste, and as for the extra work, it will take one girl all the time occupied in comparing and keeping count of the slips during the busy season.

Attractive basket of White French Hydrangea Avalanche
By W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, N. Y.

The duplicate billing system of keeping customer's accounts is the quickest and most efficient method in the bookkeeping end of the business. Each day the bookkeeper bills the charges that have gone through the day before. At the end of the month the original is sent to the customer as his bill, while the carbon copy goes into the binder and forms the ledger. An adding machine is almost a necessity in this system to prove the work, when the balance is taken. Some florists don't know that "outlook" envelopes are a saving in the office when it comes to sending out the bills.

Everyone has had his valuable time taken up and his spirit vexed in the correspondence business, by having to dig an order out of the body of what is supposed to be a business letter. It is never necessary to send an F. T. D. order written out like a letter. Make it out on a regular printed form order blank that carries your name and address in duplicate. Send the original to your correspondent and keep the copy. Any notation desired can be written on the order and will be readily understood by the one filling it.

Saving on Help by Instruction

The greatest time and labor-saving device known is to have correctly trained help. The importance of this was brought out in the preceding article. We cannot expect to fill the places of those who leave us for the shipyards and our country's call with experienced help. It is the best plan for those who will need employees to put them on a month or so before their services are actually needed. Count this time for training. Lay out a plan covering the rudimentary work, from cleaning the show case to completely preparing the material which is to be used in designing. Give regular practice work with the actual material, much of which can be used over again the next day and salvaged. Examine and carefully criticise the work of the beginners; dwelling on the good points as well as showing imperfections. Make the work very brief and simple at first, and allow no one to practice too long until their hands are injured. The time can be lengthened by degrees. Avoid too long hours at first. I always send a beginner home early for a couple of weeks for nothing brings out discouragement like fatigue. Those who are rightly instructed will apply themselves with unusual energy and determination, and the drill will draw you out too, Mr. Teacher, until you will need your reserve knowledge. The best results, of course, can only be obtained where the human element is carefully selected in regard to inclination, aptitude and desire to learn.

The following is a practical example of whether it is worth while to try to be helpful to others or not. In this case I was the one who received the benefit for my instrumental work. One year ago there was published in THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE a brief series of "Seven Practical Lessons in Floral Designing," explaining and showing the application of the principles underlying this work. They were intended to help the fellow already in the ranks, in the same way as the manual of arms helps the rookie in the awkward squad. But in this case they did more. They were read and carefully studied by a young man working in a nursery. He had never had a day's experience in making-up or in any store work. He wrote me through the columns of this paper, telling me of his desire to become a retailer and asked for a chance to try. An opportunity was secured in a good store, where the way was open. His demonstration was a revelation to me and the absolute proof of the value of a right beginning. In the eight months that I saw him on the job, until he was drafted, I have never seen work done more intelligently or better. Yes, experience is a good teacher, but when experience is begun under correct instruction it becomes the best and quickest teacher.

Shipyard Workers Present Flowers

A huge basket of flowers, principally Roses, was presented to President and Mrs. Wilson by the workmen of Hog Island shipyard on Monday last (Aug. 5), after the ceremony of the christening by Mrs. Wilson of the new 7500 ton cargo carrier, the first one built at the shipyard. A picture appeared in the N. Y. American, showing the distinguished couple standing on either side of the basket of flowers on the platform of the train that bore them back to Washington.

Flowers in War

With apologies for being Sarcastic.

"The florists must be suffering now that the war is on. But even you must admit that their trade is non-essential!"

This from 'Dear Friend', the war-worker who, since she dabbles in knitting, must own ten knitting bags of silk, satin, cretonne, and linen; who, since she does that "everlasting bit" at Red Cross Headquarters, must of course motor to and fro; who, since she must be informed, spends hours poring over daily newspapers, nibbling chocolates between sighs and gasps; and then, since her soul, (being so small, I suppose), needs rest from the wearisome onslaught of battle news, seeks comfort at the motion picture theatre.

I conclude as I, simple designer and decorator, "take in" the finality of her decision of the fate of our trade, that "Dear Friend" never knew that all her life's essentials, knitting bags, motors, chocolates, music and flashing pictures are as nothing when compared with one gift of flowers, offered now, in war, even by just such as she!

The business of flowers "non-essential"? We, inside the lines, knowing from those who enter our shops that flowers are being used now to ease the pain of memories of what war has done, and of dread of what it may do, cannot agree!

Flowers Greet Soldiers Everywhere

A letter from Corp. Cholmeley-Jones with the American forces in Italy to his parents who have also three other sons with the American Expeditionary Forces, speaks enthusiastically of the reception and tremendous ovation given the American soldiers on their arrival at Genoa; he says:

"We were fairly showered from both sides and from windows and balconies with Roses and all kind of flowers. I never saw so many flowers as they kept throwing at us and bringing to us.

"At the Y. M. C. A. we saw a tremendous bouquet of the choicest flowers, fully three feet in diameter, which was presented to General Pershing, with the following note attached:

"'Illustrious Signor Colonel Pershing! There are tears of emotion which have no words and therefore I am sending you flowers that they may speak in my stead to the glorious American soldiers. Until the world will not have sentiment for a basis, it cannot be called civilized; and now the sons of the United States have come to us, impelled by only one cause—that of the heart—to defend humanity, insulted and torn to pieces; to dry the tears of so many mothers in anguish and sorrow.

"'Be they blessed with all my motherly soul and for all the mothers of Europe, and be they blessed for the glorious light which will reflect on them for all the eternity of centuries. And to you, sir, the devout gratitude of an Italian woman, and may you be pleased to accept, kindly, my poor flowers.

"'Erminia d'Arhib.'

"This splendid note verifies my statement of how delighted the people 'over here' are over our arrival, and smiles and cheers and flowers greet us everywhere."

The Washington Florists' Club recently sent Roses and other flowers to the Red Cross convalescent house at Walter Reed Hospital. The club has undertaken to supply the convalescent house with flowers.

There was more than enough to fill every available vase in the house; the remainder was distributed among the hospital wards and were much enjoyed by the soldiers.

The wholesale florists and the Boston Flower Market of Boston, Mass., recently sent a quantity of flowers for the sick soldiers at Camp Devens. Henry Penn took the flowers there in his car. There were 20 big bunches of them.

Filling telegraph orders from distant cities was formerly "a consummation devoutly to be wished." Today it is one of the most profitable branches of the retail business. That is why there are so many cards in our Directory of Reliable Retailers

Melon Stem Rot.—Through your valu-ble paper, could you suggest any remedy, .at would help me to save a house of Melon ubilee)? The plants look in perfect health, .t when within two weeks of the ripening age, or at least when well "netted," as the rdener terms it, they go off overnight with em rot.

The conditions under which they are grown as follows: On all bright days I syringe very morning, and keep the temperature as ear 70 deg. as possible. All affected plants e quite healthy 6in. above the ground, and late I keep a crack of air all night on the ouses but to no avail. I have used lime and lphur on the decaying stem but it don't em to prevent the rot.—D. I.

—Stem rot on Melons is a hard proposition eradicate as the disease works its destruc-on quickly, and particularly so when grow-g the crop without the aid of artificial heat; em rot then seems more prevalent. Cer-inly a fair amount of air should be on the ouse at all times after the fire heat is dis-ensed with in Spring; otherwise condensa-on is too great. Also there is no better medy than to keep the soil fairly dry around e stems, and the sprinkling of a little air-acked lime around the base of each plant a capital practice to ward off this trouble; nfortunately, as with all other diseases, ose precautions should be applied while e plants are in full vigor, with no signs of em rot, or any other weakness or disease, r that matter; with such precaution taken time there should be no serious trouble ter. W.T.

Celery Bleachers.—In the book, "Garden uide," published by A. T. De La Mare Co., nc., I notice it states that "Celery Blanch-rs" of various types are now obtainable, but y local seed store does not sell it nor do hey know what they look like. Where can get these bleachers?—F.L., Baltimore, Md.

—The Ball Celery Bleacher and Lightning andler have been extensively advertised y Weeber & Don, 114 Chamber st., N. Y., nd can be obtained from them if not pro-urable at your local seed store.

Cannel Coal versus Lehigh Valley Highland gg Coal.—Is one ton of cannel coal equal to one on of Lehigh Valley Highland Egg coal? I am old that one ton of the former will go further than ne ton of the latter. Please let me know. annel is quoted here at $15 per ton; egg $10. -H. J. H., New Jersey.

—Cannel coal and Lehigh Valley egg coal are wo distinct kinds of coal, cannel coal is highly ituminous, a very rich gas coal; usually contains good deal of ash; burns readily with a bright ame; doesn't clinker; and I suppose could be sed in florists' boilers by shutting down the rafts quite a little, although it is not a steam oal, but ideal for the home grate fire. Usually equires a specially constructed grate. The elator was once connected with a cannel coal ine and had difficulty disposing of the brand, lthough they may be getting finer material at his time that could be better used to advantage. t that time they tried to get rid of it by selling in small bags, especially to start fires with. It ould no doubt give a good deal of heat, but not early so much as anthracite coal; probably two-hirds as much heat as obtained from anthracite, hich is coal altogether different in its character-stics.—Editor "Coal Age."

(By an order of the Fuel Administration dated une 28, 1918, the price of cannel coal was fixed t $1.00 per net ton above the applicable Gov-rnment mine price for run of mine bituminous oal at the mine where such cannel coal is pro-luced.)

A further and more comprehensive reply to his question will be found in an article in this ssue, headed "Value and Use of Various Coals."

Newport, R. I.

Missing Florist Soldier Located

Lieut Gerald Conheeny has at last been heard from. He is in a prison camp in Germany recovering from wounds in face and throat. He states that he is being given good care. Before leaving here Lieut. Conheeny was head clerk for Oscar Schultz at his Broadway store.

Thames st., Newport's leading business thoroughfare, is again without a florist's store, Edward R. Hass having closed up his store at 196. Orders will be taken and cared for at the greenhouses, 41 Almy court.

Ralph Armstrong is here caring for the wants of his city customers, but is not maintaining a store as heretofore.

ALEXANDER MACLELLAN.

Worcester, Mass.

Business last week, although good for this time of year, dropped off somewhat compared with the week previous. Flowers in the market are in good supply and of fine quality; no great surplus has been reported thus far this season, funeral work keeping things cleaned up.

Small Growers to Continue

The recent coal regulation issued by National Fuel Administrator Garfield, by which small growers using 40 tons of coal or less may have their full supply will mean that at least 12 greenhouses in this locality which had previously decided to close this Winter will be kept running. Many of these small growers had figured that to close half of their small places would mean such a meagre living that it would be better for them to close up entirely about Oct. 1, and obtain employment in some shop.

Andrew Carney, formerly with Randall's Flower Shop, and for years connected with the florist's business in Worcester, has entered the employ of a large manufacturing concern doing war work.

Roger N. Perry, Worcester's youngest florist is working for the Norton Co. of this city for the Summer. Mr. Perry's mother is conducting the business for the present.

Henry F. Littlefield is at Well's Beach, Me., for the Summer.

The leading Summer flowers are Asters and Sweet Peas, which demand the best prices at retail. Although Gladioli and Gypsophila are rather plentiful they are used chiefly in funeral work.

Prices in the market average as follows: Roses 75c to $8; Carnations (small) 75c. per 100; Asters 50c. to $2; Sweet Peas 35c. per 100; Gladioli $1 to $2. There is also a full line of other Summer annuals and perennials which meet with a fair demand at quoted prices. Greens of greenhouse varieties are in good supply but the call for them is rather light, this always being the case when so much outdoor greens is obtainable. F. L. M.

Department of Plant Registration

Public notice is hereby given that Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., submit for registration the new seedlings of Pyrethrum roseum here mentioned:

Rutherford, double red with light center.

President Wilson, double. Deep rose-pink.

Sylvia, soft rose. Double.

Pink Beauty, light rose pink, single.

Rosy Morn, double rose with a lighter center.

Cactus, deep rose petals quilled and pointed the same as cactus Dahlias.

Dainty, semi-double deep rose, center white.

Favorite, semi-double deep rose, center white.

Columbia, double, deep rose, shading to white.

Delight, shell pink, semi-double, white center.

Rose Pearl, deep rose, like Cactus, deeper, single.

Purity, double pure white.

Any person objecting to these registrations, or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Public notice is hereby given that as no objection has been filed against the registration of Hydrangea Mrs. Woodrow Wilson by Frederick H. Dressel, Weehawken, N. J., same becomes complete.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Anders Rasmussen of New Albany, Ind., are sorry to learn of the severe illness of Mrs. Rasmussen and hope she will soon be entirely recovered.

Otto Lawrenz of Bertermanns' staff has returned from Buffalo, N. Y.

The Market Next Winter

Should the present coal rulings prevail throughout the coming season, there will undoubtedly be a big movement of flowers from the East to the West. Flowers will no doubt be just as scarce in Indiana as they will be in Ohio, for the market conditions will absorb any surplus flowers where more fuel is obtainable. Flowers in former years have been shipped from New York to Chicago or vice versa with exceedingly good results. Any florist so located that he may have his usual supply of fuel will find a ready market at high prices and need not look to local conditions for relief but can adhere closely to the top-notch figures in the large centers. In fact, the larger commission houses here say they will be more likely to obtain good prices in, say, Pittsburgh than they will in immediate adjacent territory.

The telegraph delivery of flowers keeps on in a moderate way throughout the heated season. As John Young is putting it, "the inter-community exchange of flowers should grow very rapidly from now on." The national advertising campaign is certainly a big asset in this one particular phase alone.

Len Elder, who has been ill since his return from the Lakes, is reported as much improved.

Among those going to the convention are John Hartje, Adolph Baur, Herman Junge, Henry Rieman, Irwin Bertermann, Charles Pahud and George Wiegand. Arrangements were discussed at the August meeting of the State Florists' Ass'n of Indiana, held Aug. 6, to have the Indiana florists go as a body. While this would not result in a reduction in the rates, it would be pleasant for all concerned.

F. G. Nelson, vice-president of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, is looking after business in this city.

There will seemingly be a shortage of good Carnation plants in Indiana this year and nearly all the available stock is spoken for. I. B.

Houston, Texas

Business with the florists is holding up fairly well. Most of the work is now confined to funerals.

Kerr, the florist, did a very good business during the week. His sales manager, Mr. Eichling, has returned from his vacation trip to New Orleans and reports having had a good time.

Wm. A. Reynaud of O. P. Jackson & Co., seedsmen, a member of the Houston Hort. Society, is about to become a benedict. The wedding will take place at Huntsville, Tex., Aug. 10, the bride being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus Adair Wynne. Mr. Reynaud has a large circle of friends throughout the State, travels a great deal, and is a man of thought and observation. His bride is a scion of a prominent family of the State. The best wishes of the members of the Houston Hort. Society go with the young couple in their journey through life.

J. M. Laughlin, secretary of the Houston Hort. Society, finds that the landscape business is looking up lately, as he has received several new places to design and look after.

Among the visitors to the city this week was Howard Basch of the S. A. Weller Pottery Works of Zanesville, Ohio. C. L. B.

Would Be Useful

A coal shovel which will sift ashes as they are taken from the furnace, without rehandling, has been patented. Now if some genius will invent a shovel that will sift a little coal from the silt that is sold for fuel he should have the badge of honor.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

Harry A. Bunyard, formerly with the Nitrates Agencies Co., at the New York City office, has joined the Y. M. C. A. as a secretary for overseas' work and will sail shortly.

Adrian P. Wezel, who for several years past was employed as gardener on the estate of the late J. D. Crimmins at Noroton, Conn., is now at Camp Devens with the National Army.

The address of J. Ebb Weir, Jr., of Weir's Flower Shop, Jamesport (L. I.), N. Y., is now Boatswain's Mate, Sec. Base 4, W. S. N. R., Montauk (L. I.), N. Y.

It is reported that Oscar D. Joslin, with the medical department of the 355th Infantry, and formerly with the W. J. Barnes Floral Co., Kansas City, Mo., has arrived safely overseas.

Four more employees of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, Mo., have joined the colors; they are George Myers, Wm. Fitzhugh, Lloyd Monson and W. A. Hults. The firm's service flag now has 10 stars.

Peter Henderson, of Peter Henderson & Co., seedsmen of New York City, who is stationed with the U. S. Aviation Corps in Texas, was recently married.

George Stewart, Jr., son of George Stewart, Tuxedo, N. Y., has enlisted in the U. S. Navy and is now stationed at Newport.

Lieut. Geo. B. Palmer, son of Frederick L. Palmer, Brookline, Mass., is stationed at Camp Lee, Va., where he is an instructor.

Wm. E. Colligan, a former employee of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, is with the American Expeditionary Forces in France, being sergeant in Co. M, 328th Infantry.

Kansas City, Mo.

The cool weather which prevailed in July helped stock to a wonderful extent. Nearly everything in the way of flowers was burned up in the extreme heat of June, but July brought a few good rains and many cool days, and the result was soon apparent in the amount and quality of flowers. Stock is now plentiful in the following varieties, with prices as follows: Gladioli, $6 to $8 per 100; Asters, $3 to $4 per 100; Gypsophila, 50c. a bunch; Roses $3 to $10 per 100; Lilies, $10 per 100.

Secretary Young's Visit

Secretary John Young, of the S. A. F., stopped off in Kansas City for a day, en route from California. Mr. Young, assisted by W. L. Rock and Samuel Murray, visited a number of the local florists and secured 12 new members for the S. A. F., in addition to a number of pledges for the S. A. F. publicity fund.

More than 3000 war gardens were planted on vacant lots of this city this Spring. A few gardens had to be replanted because of the drought, but most of them, according to reports received by the Kansas City Real Estate Board, are yielding large crops. Two applications for 1919 war gardens have already been received by the board.

In the Service

The W. L. Rock Flower Company recently had four of its employees join the Colors. They are George Myers, William Fitzhugh, Lloyd Monson and W. A. Hults. There are now 10 stars on the firm's service flag.

Oscar D. Joslin, formerly with the W. J. Barnes Floral Co., this city has arrived safely overseas with the medical dept. of the 355th Infantry.

Recent visitors were Messrs. Shock and Zirman., of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, and George Hampton, of the J. G. Neidlinger Co., Philadelphia.
